Chronic coughs and persistant colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germ that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

MRS. ELSIE SWEETIN FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER OF HUSBAND

Mount Vernon, Ill., Dec. 24.—Bitterness against her co-defendant, Lawrence M. Hight, and dissatisfaction with her own sentence were expressed by Mrs. Elsie Sweetin as she was led from the court room today after hearing a jury pronounce her guilty of the murder by poison of her husband, Wilford Sweetin, and sentence her to 35 years in prison. Hight received a life sentence.

"If they had only hanged him," she cried to Sheriff Grant Holcomb as she was led back to jail through the Christmas shoppers, "I wouldn't care."

Her alleged infatuation for Hight, 51 year old preacher and grandfather, seemed turned to hatred. On the witness stand she had attempted to place the blame on him, telling the jury he had won her love and then betrayed her to the officers.

"I would as soon have been hanged as to have one year in prison," she said. "I told my lawyer, Mr. Smith, to tell the jury to send me to the gallows or home to my children, and he did. But they would not do it."

MARKET CLOSED STRONG

New York, Dec. 24.—The Christmas spirit pervaded today's stock market which closed with a strong tone after being reactionary in the earlier days of the week. Twenty-one stocks, nearly one-half of them copper issues, attained new peak prices for the year. Trading, however, was of the usual pre-holiday character, the day's sales barely exceeding one million shares, making it the smallest full session of any since the postelection boom started.

Steady accumulation of the copper issues was in further reflection of the unexpected resumption of dividends by the Anaconda company and further stiffening of red metal prices, which now averaged 14 7-8 cents a pound for 1925 deliveries.

American Smelting and Refining led the advance in the copper shares, climbing more than 5 points to 95 3-4 the highest price since 1917 when it sold above 110. Other issues in that group to break through their previous top prices were Anaconda, Kennecott, Cerro De Pasco, Inspiration, Magma, Federal Mining and Spelting, United States Smelting, Butte and Superior and American Zinc preferred.

All the standard industrials closed higher on the day, American Can standing out with a gain of two points at 154 3-4. United States Steel common, Baldwin and Studebaker improved fractionally.

One of the interesting features of the session was the brisk demand for General Motors and Du Point, suggesting accumulation by powerful interests. Du Point registered an extreme gain of four points at 141 while General Motors touched a new top at 63 3-4, a gain of nearly 3 points.

Ludlam Steel soared more than 4 points to 36 1-4, a new high in anticipation of an important announcement concerning the company's corporate affairs. Other issues to sell at the year's best prices were Allis Chalmers, Texas, Gulf Sulphur, Mack trucks first preferred, Hudson motors, Public Service of New Jersey, United States Cast Iron Pipe, Atchison preferred, Railway Steel Spring preferred and S. S. Kresge, the last named recording a jump of 11 1-2 points on one sale.

Except for gains of nearly 5 points in Ann Arbor common and a good demand for Norfolk and Western, which sold about 2 1-2 points above last night's close, there was little interest in the rail group.

Call money held steady at 4 1-2 per cent, with the principal showing an inclination to conserve their cash in order to make a good showing in year-end statements. Loans in the "Outside Market" were reported to be at the rate of 4 per cent. The time money and commercial paper markets held steady with business quiet.

Foreign exchange trading was extremely dull with the principal European rates showing only nominal changes. Demand sterling was quoted just under $4.70 and French francs ruled around 5.39 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, Dec. 24.—Bond trading lapsed into typical pre-holiday dullness today, with prices, except in a few isolated cases, fluctuating within extremely narrow limits. With incentive for speculative operations lacking, the days turnover was the smallest of any full day's session in several months, firmness of time money acted as a further check to trading.

Despite the let-up in activity a firm undertone prevailed throughout most of the day, and some active buying developed late in the afternoon in sympathy with the final upturn in stock prices.

Magma Copper 7s gave the only individual performance of any moment, spurting up 4 1-7 points to a new high price at 127 at one time before falling back to the close to 125 1-2, a net gain of 2 3-4 points. Chile Copper 6's joined in the upward movement, which was based on the better feeling inspired by the resumption of the Anaconda dividend and the steadily rising price of the red metal.

Other issues which gained a point or more included International Great Northern adjustment 6's, Market Street Railway 7's, Westinghouse Electric 7's, Pierce-Arrow 8's and Wilson and Company 7 1-2's.

Libert bonds were steady in quiet trading.

CURB MARKET

New York, Dec. 24.—Pre-holiday dullness characterized today's curb market with price movements displaying considerable irregularity.

Public utility issues showed consistent strength, Lehigh Power securities standing out with an extreme gain of more than 4 points. Commonwealth Power and American Power and Light each advanced about 1 3-4.

Radio shares held relatively steady. Copper stocks were active and strong in sympathy with the upward movement in those issues on the big board. Oils were largely reactionary, Standard Oil of Nebraska breaking 7 1-2 points on a few odd lot sales, while declines of 2 to 5 points took place in Magnolia Petroleum, Northern Pipe and New York Transit.

MONEY

New York, Dec. 24.—Call money firm, high, low, ruling rate, last loan and closing bid 4 1-2; offered at 4 3-4; call loans against acceptances 3 1-2. Time loans firmer; mixed collaterals, 60-90 days 3 1-2 a 3 3-4; 4-6 months 3 3-4 a 4; prime commercial paper 3 1-2 a 3 3-4.

COTTON

New York, Dec. 24.—Cotton spot quiet; middling 24.00.

METAL MARKET

New York, Dec. 24.—Copper firm; electrolytic spot and futures 14.7-8. Tin firm, spot and nearby 57.87; futures 58.00. Iron steady; prices unchanged. Lead firm, spot 9.50-10.25. Zinc firm, East St. Louis spot and futures 7.70. Antimony, spot 16.00.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Dec. 24.—In a lively upturn during the late transactions, wheat today overtopped any prices which December delivery or May had heretofore attained this season. Rye also touched a new high price record for 1924. Announcement of 4,132,000 bushels falling off in the world's available supply of wheat was a stimulating factor. Wheat closed strong, 2 1-4c to 3 5-8c net higher, May 1.76 3-8 to 1.76 1-2 and July 1.56 3-4 to 1.50 7-8, with corn 1-8 to 1-2c up, oats showing 7-8c to 1 1-8c advance, and provisions varying from 7c decline to a rise of 27c.

Throughout most of the day, the wheat market showed an upward trend, influenced early by an advance in prices on future deliveries at Liverpool and by reports of better demand there for immediate delivery wheat. Subsequently, traders here gave attention to the United States government weekly crop report which emphasized the fact that many winter wheat fields are covered with ice and that the growing crop had passed abruptly into severe cold weather.

Corn price gains were due to the wheat market bulge, an influence which finally more than offset talk that corn crop shortage had been discontinued for at least the time being. Oats, even more than corn, were responsive to wheat strength.

Lard was weakened by packers' selling, but meat prices were bid up sharply.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

New York

Stocks strong; coppers at new highs.

Bonds easy; narrow fluctuations mark trading.

Foreign exchanges steady; sterling holds firm at $4.70.

Cotton higher, trade buying.

Sugar steady, about unchanged.

Coffee firm; higher Brazilian markets.

Chicago

Wheat firm; unfavorable weather.

Corn steady; sympathy with wheat

Cattle higher; broad shipping demand.

Hogs active, lower.

ANDOVER

Lawrence Stanley and Charles Phelps, students at the Connecticut Agricultural college, are at their homes for the holidays.

The local grammar school closed Friday for the holidays, to open Jan. 5th.

The pupils of the town who attend Windham High school will be at home for the holiday vacation, as the school closed Tuesday.

The teachers of the local school, Miss Gladys Bradley, Miss Whipple and Miss Watrous, all returned to their homes for the holiday vacation in Willimantic, Mystic and New London, respectively.

The town hall was well filled Friday evening for the Christmas exercises by the school children, which were well carried out. After the exercises, gifts were distributed from a well laden tree and given to 145 children. Each child also received a box of candy and an orange.

Miss Elsie Talbot, a student at the Hartford School of Missions, returned to her home here Friday for two weeks' vacation.

John Yeomans, a student at Harvard Law school, is at his home here for two weeks.

The Christian Endeavor society held a Christmas tree in the church Sunday evening.

Carols were sung around the town Wednesday night.

There was a dance Saturday night in the town hall.

Miss Dorothy Jewett, a teacher in Woodstock, is at her home during the holidays. Miss Esther Jewett will spend her vacation at her home here from her school in Vernon.

WESTMINSTER

The church school at Westminster will have public exercises at the church Christmas night, and it will include a reception to Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, who will remember all children having a part in the exercises.

DROP IN EGG PRODUCTION AT STORRS

Connecticut's embargo against importations of live poultry prohibits breeders from twenty-four states, Canada and England, from sending extra or reserve birds to the laying contest at Storrs. The college in an endeavor to cooperate with the commissioner on domestic animals has gone a step further and requested Connecticut breeders, in the event of losses in their pens, not to make up their full complement of ten birds until after the embargo is lifted. This arrangement seems perfectly fair and equitable in that it puts all contestants on exactly the same basis. It's safe to add that Connecticut poultrymen are sufficiently sportsmanlike to voluntarily accept the same regulations that apply to all breeders outside the borders of the state, especially when there is the bare possibility of jeopardizing the laying trials that have been so successful for so many years.

In the seventh week of the laying contest there was a drop of 102 eggs in the production for the week, the total number of eggs being 3298 or a yield of nearly 34 per cent. A pen of White Leghorns, owned by Mount Hope Farm at Williamstown, Mass., were the leaders for the week. This pen of birds laid 48 eggs. Pinecrest Orchards' pen of Rhode Island Reds from Groton, Mass., followed closely with a score of 47 eggs while a pen of Leghorns owned by Hanson's Leghorn Farm at Corvallis, Ore., and a pen of White Wyandottes owned by Thomas H. Matteson of Davisville, R. I., tied for third place with a score of 46 eggs each. F. M. Johnson's pen of White Leghorns from Waldoboro, Me., and A. B. Rice's pen of White Wyandottes from Tekamah, Neb., tied for fourth place with 44 eggs each.

The leading pens in each of the principal varieties are as follows:

W. H. ANDERSON ON PAROLE HAS NO SPIRIT OF REVENGE

New York, Dec. 24.—William H. Anderson, former state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, spent tonight with his family at his home in Yonkers.

Anderson, released from Sing Sing prison this morning on parole after serving nine months of a year's sentence fro third degree forgery, was brought by detectives to New York, where he was admitted to $5,000 bail on four indictments charging grand larceny and extortion. These charges were preferred against him prior to his conviction nearly a year ago of causing a false entry to be made on the league books.

The four indictments, it was said at the district attorney's office, would be placed on the court of general sessions calendar. No indication as to the date they will be called for trial was forthcoming.

When the formality of arranging bail had been completed, Anderson gave to reporters a statement in which he asserted that his courage was "stronger and steadier" and that his faith "in the God who has sustained me" was firmer than ever.

"Through suffering," Anderson said, "He has lifted me up until my soul can look down on the hate and malice of those who have wronged me. I have no interest in revenge except to save others from like treatment, and I have had leisure to thank over constructive efforts in that direction."

Anderson said he planned to spend a quiet Christmas at home, where his wife is ill. He intimated that he would have nothing further to say publicly until after New Year's.

The entire program of the twenty-ninth annual convention of the Italian Electrical Engineers' Association, held September 25 to 30 at Spezia, Italy, was devoted to discussions of better electric illumination in homes, stores, offices and factories as well as on the streets.

The local postoffice will be open from 7 to 8:30 p. m. for the distribution of mail. It will also be open at 12:20 and 7:30 p. m. for outgoing mails only.

NORWICH TOWN

Under the general chairmanship of Francis Gilman, president of the Norwich Rural association, everything is in readiness for the community Christmas tree and festival to be held this (Thursday) evening at 7.30 on the Norwich Town Green.

No better location could have been selected for such a celebration than this historical center of the town of Norwich, so accessible to the many suburban towns which are sure to be largely represented.

Of special interest is the pleasure it will afford the kiddies at the Rock Nook Children's home, many of whom have been shut in for many days due to illness; also the members of the Johnson home family who, due to advanced years, would not be able to attend the celebration itself, yet can enjoy much from general observation, as both homes face the green, from different angles.

The tree was lighted for the first time Christmas eve, and its brilliant red, white, blue and green bulbs made it a spectacle of wondrous beauty.

Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of Greeneville Congregational church, is to be the officiating clergyman at the Sheltering Arms service Sunday afternoon. He will be accompanied by the choir of that church.

Miss May Peck of Greenwich was a week end guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Peck, of Otrobando avenue. Miss Peck left Tuesday for Westchester to visit for several days at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore T. Peck.

Mr. and Mrs. George Peck are to have as their guest today (Christmas) Mrs. Peck's sister, Miss Rose Smith, of Colchester.

George Tague of McClellan avenue spent the week end at the home of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Ward, of Springfield, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Tague were visitors in Hartford over the week end, guests of Mrs. Tague's nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hart. Mr. and Mrs. Tague will have as guests today (Christmas) their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Ward, of Springfield.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS TO SOLDIERS AT FORTS

Christmas greetings to those connected with the military service were expressed Wednesday by Secretary Weeks in a statement broadcasted to the army posts at Fort Wright, Terry and Michie in this vicinity.

"At this holiday season of the year," Mr. Weeks said, "I take the greatest personal pleasure in wishing to every officer and soldier in the armies of the United States a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. The high standards of the American army and the security of the country have been assured through the loyal work of our forces.

"Your profession is one highly honored by the people of the country and they are grateful for the service you render the nation. I hope the coming year will be most satisfactory in every respect to everyone connected with the military service."

ANOTHER CHECK FOR FIREMEN'S PENSION FUND

Chief Howard L. Stanton of the local fire department has received from Daniel T. Shea a check for $25 to be added to the firemen's pension fund. The check is sent in recognition of the good work done by the department at the recent fire at the Kenyon building, which is owned by Mr. Shea. A letter of appreciation accompanied the check.

A RELIABLE COUGH REMEDY

Why experiment with unknown remedies for that cough or cold when you can secure Foley's Honey and Tar Compound? It is a safe and reliable remedy for the relief of coughs, colds, hoarseness. Equally beneficial for young and old. Mrs. Anna Cornell, Bridgeton, N. J., states: "I bought Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for my cold and find it great." Insist upon the genuine. Refuse substitutes. Lee & Osgood.

TRADING COVE BROOK PROVIDING 2,000,000 GALLONS OF WATER DAILY

Supervisor John J. Corkery of the water department said Wednesday that the new pumping station at Trading Cove brook, put into operation this week, is providing considerably over 2,000,000 gallons of water daily for the city's water mains. This relieves the fear of a water famine for with 2,000,000 gallons daily from Trading Cove brook the two reservoirs, Fairview and Stonybrook, will be able to provide the remainder of the daily consumption of water in Norwich. The pump is working perfectly and is kept running twenty-four hours a day.

The three men in charge of the operating of the pump work on eight hour shifts. One goes on duty at 7 in the morning and works until 3, when the second man goes on duty remaining until 11 at night, the third man working from 11 at night until 7 in the morning.

Mr. Corkery said that at the present time there is plenty of water running through the brook and that the recent rain fall will help to improve conditions in the water department.

MADE GIFT IN MEMORY OF REV. R. R. GRAHAM

The spirit of Christmas giving was reverently carried out at the Christmas eve service at Christ church Wednesday, when the gift of a handsome brass candle lighter and extinguisher was presented by the children of the Junior Auxiliary, in memory of the late Reverend Richard R. Graham, for twelve years rector of the parish. The Rev. Mr. Plumb of Hartford, temporarily supplying the church, made a brief presentation speech.

The auxiliary's gift in its double capacity, is provided with two brass arms set in a long mahogany handle; one long, narrow arm holds the waxen taper for lighting the altar candles, while the other, terminating in a bell-shaped hood, surmounted by the cross, extinguishes them.

The extinguisher bears the following words: "To the glory of God, and in loving memory of the Reverend Richard Rathbone Graham, rector of Christ church, from 1912-1924. Given by the Junior Auxiliary, Christmas Day, 1924."

This beautiful and timely gift was used for the first time at the midnight Christmas communion service.

It seemed singularly fitting that Rev. Mr. Graham, who loved the joys of Christmas and the childrens' pleasure in it, should have been so tenderly remembered by the little ones of his own parish on this Holy Night. The occasion was an impressive one and the gift most appropriate, to perpetuate the memory of a kindly Christian gentleman and loyal churchman, whose passing was deeply mourned by people of all sects and creeds in Norwich.

The beautiful flowers on the altar were given in memory of Mrs. Charles L. Richards, Mrs. Frederick L. Osgood and Miss Helen Robinson. The decorations were arranged by the sexton, Prof. William E. Geary.

COMPLETE TOPOGRAPHIC MAP OF THE STATE

Everyone likes to know the elevation of the place where he lives or of the mountains or hills that he climbs. The government maps of the United States made by the department of the interior through the geological survey, show in great detail the heights of the ground above mean sea level in all parts of the country. Almost a million copies of these maps are printed and distributed by the geological survey every year.

More than 30 years ago a topographic survey of the state of Connecticut was completed by the Geological survey in co-operation with the state, which paid half the cost of the field work. At that time the need for the exact elevation was not appreciated, but about five years later congress directed the geological survey to determine accurately the elevation at numerous points in every area thereafter surveyed and to give their heights on permanent bench marks. Since 1897 about 100,000 such marks have been set up along more than 300,000 miles of spirit level lines run in the United States, but not until recently has such work been done in Connecticut.

In 1922 and 1923 the geological survey, department of the interior, in co-operation with the United States coast and geological survey, department of commerce, and the state highway commission of Connecticut, ran more than a thousand miles of accurate spirit level lines in that state and set up metal marks showing the elevations of more than 400 points. In every large city or town there are one or more such marks, which are of great use to local engineers in their public or private surveys.

All these elevations are reckoned from the mean sea level, so that surveyors can start level lines from any of the marks and check surveys made by others starting from different bases.

MISTOOK JUDGE BROWN FOR RUM RUNNER

Fellow members of the bench are laughing with Judge Allyn L. Brown of Norwich over the fact that the latter and a party of men with him were mistaken for rum runners by a New Haven motorcycle officer Tuesday, says the New London Day.

Judge Brown has been sitting in New Haven at a superior court hearing on proceedings to condemn for the city Lighthouse Point on the north shore, which is within the town limits, and which is desired for a municipal bathing resort. The private owners are asking much more than the city has offered.

Judge Brown said he would view the point, and with counsel for both sides, an automobile was taken for the trip. The chauffeur was stepping on the gas when going through Morris cove and a motorcycle officer gave chase.

The automobile arrived at the point, which is a desolate place and juts out into the Sound and the jurist and attorneys left it and began to gaze. The officer dashed up to the chauffeur and is reported to have demanded an explanation why the party was there, adding, it is said: "Are you fellows bootleggers? Are you waiting for a boat to come in?"

The chauffeur pointed out Judge Brown and told who the others were and the officer jumped on his machine and disappeared even quicker than he arrived.

GIRL SCOUT PATROL LEADERS TO MEET

The first state girl scout conference for patrol leaders is to be held at Middletown on Friday and Saturday, Jan. 2 and 3. Delegates to this conference will attend from the four first class councils in eastern Connecticut, Hartford, Norwich, New London and Middletown.

Various topics pertaining to the patrol leaders' job will be taken up for discussion such as problems of patrol discipline, how to develop and maintain patrol spirit, how to organize and stimulate interest in winter hiking, and many other subjects.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS GAVE CHRISTMAS PROGRAMMES

The public schools of the town closed Wednesday at noon for the Christmas recess. In practically all of the schools Christmas programmes were held by the children Wednesday morning. At the Broadway grammar school all the grades gathered about the piano in the hall for the singing of Christmas carols. Several rooms united for the Christmas trees with distribution of gifts for the pupils. In the upper grades many of the gifts were made by the pupils.

The programme was as follows:

Grades 3 and 4: Song, Old Santa Claus Puts on His Cap; poem, A Visit From St. Nicholas, Grade 4; song, Once Unto the Shepherds, Grade 3; poem, Santa Claus Is Coming, Helen Seidel, grade 4; song, Down the Chimney, all; poem, Glad Tidings of Joy, grade 3; songs, Stars All Bright Are Beaming, In the Fields With Their Flocks, grade 4; play, Story of the Fir Tree, grade 3; song, Jolly Old Nicholas, all; play, Trials at Santa's Headquarters, grade 4; poem, The Mistakes of Santa, Gladys Shapee and Grant Dennison, grade 4; song, Once a Little Baby Lay, grade 3; song, Joy, Joy, Joy, grade 4.

Greeneville School.

Christmas exercises were held in the kindergarten of the Greeneville school Wednesday morning with a large attendance of parents and friends to witness the excellent manner in which the little tots carried out the lengthy program.

The morning and afternoon classes to the number of seventy united in the presentation of songs, games, recitations and rhythms.

For some days past both classes have been busily engaged in making decorations for the classroom walls as well as for a large Christmas tree. Upon the tree and beneath it were hundreds of practical gifts for the parents and friends of the children.

These gifts consisted of book marks, letter holders, blotters and calendars, which were distributed at the close of the exercises. In addition, there was a package of candy for each child—a gift from Santa Claus.

While the kindergartners were disporting themselves in their classroom, the pupils of the grades held their exercises in the assembly hall. The exercises were opened with appropriate selections by the school orchestra after which the following program was given:

Song, Christmas Carol, school; recitation, Christmas Bells, Janet Jankowski; recitation, Hilda's Christmas, Natalie Service; recitation, What I'd Like to Do, Ida Jankowski; song, Little Town of Bethlehem, school; recitation, Christmas Carol, Mary Quinley; recitation, Why, Bertha Laydka; recitation, Missing Santa Claus, Jennie Dombrowski; recitation, Pa Did It, Harold Wallace; recitation, Signs of Christmas, John McNeil; recitation, A Song, Stephanie Godek; song, Up on a Housetop, school; recitation, When Christmas Comes, Pauline Domoleski; recitation, Little Santa Claus, Mildred Crowe; recitation, Santa Claus, Donalda Chaput; song, Hark! BIG ELM TREE IS ILLUMINATED BY LIGHTS

The holiday tide of travel which arrives at the New Haven station cannot fail to be impressed with the Christmas greeting that has been arranged for them by James P. Hayes in the illumination of the big elm tree which stands in the little plot near the station. Strings of electric lights in varied colors have been twined among the branches and up to the top of the tree, making a beautiful effect through the evening hours. The tree has been there for years but to Mr. Hayes goes the credit for being the first to realize its value in a decorative way and put it into effect at this season. Many a traveler on Wednesday night viewed the "welcome home" illumination with delight.

HIRAM BINGHAM'S FATHER WAS A MISSIONARY

It is of local interest that Senator-elect Hiram Bingham is grandson of the Hiram Bingham who was one of a company of 17, including three Hawaiians which Oct. 17, 1819, set sail from Boston on the brig Thaddeus for the Hawaiian Islands, at that time called the Sandwich Islands. Hiram Bingham, Jr., father of Connecticut's senator-elect, after graduating at Yale, gave his life to work on these islands. The National Geographic states that the descendants of this company of missionaries had a large part in the development of Hawaii along lines of betterment, education and business prosperity, and through the success of these labors, came the annexation of these islands to the United States.

GEN PAYNE IN LINE FOR REAPPOINTMENT

Maj. Gen. Morris B. Payne of New London, commanding the 43rd National Guard division, is in line for re-appointment on Governor Bingham's staff as quartermaster general which carries the rank of brigadier general, according to a report current in military circles.

Brig. Gen James A. Haggerty of New Haven is expected to be given a prominent berth and honors may also go to Col. Lewis L. Field of New Haven of the 102d regiment and Col. Charles W. Comfort, also of New Haven, of the 102d regiment medical detachment.

Morgan Bulkeley of Hartford and E. Dwyer Hubbard of Middletown will also be new appointees to the governor's staff, it is understood.

CHRISTMAS CHECKS FOR POLICE PENSION FUND

Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney, the chairman of the board of police commissioners, has received checks for $25 from the Dime Savings bank, Uncas National bank and the Merchants National bank, to be added to the police pension fund. The gifts were greatly appreciated by the officers of the department and by Chief George Linton who is appreciative of the recognition of the services rendered by men of the department.

Was Born in Groton.

Chauncey A. Fuller, who died Friday at his home in Preston, was born January 7, 1853, in Groton, the son of Aaron and Eunice Avery Fuller, but most of his life was spent in New London and Preston. While in New London he was engaged as a merchant but later came to Norwich where for a time he was an officer of the New London County jail. Later he lived in Preston, where he was engaged in farming.

Fifty years ago he was united in marriage with Jennie White, who survives him with two sons, Frederick C. of Hartford and Morgan Fuller of Preston; one brother, George Fuller of Waterford and 13 grandchildren. Another brother, William Fuller, died in New London, Monday.

Join United Church.

By letter: Miss Mary Witter, Miss Elizabeth Zumbro, Miss Kathryn Zumbro, Mrs. William M. Zumbro. The church presented Bibles to the following children: Beatrice I. Adams, Ruth G. Ayling, Bertrude L. Beausoleil, Elizabeth G. Dick, Janet M. Gifford, Annie M. John, Madeline Ross, Grace L. Spalding.

IS TONGUE COATED? TRY THIS SIMPLE MIXTURE

A badly coated tongue is a sign of stomach or bowel trouble. Often simple buckthorn bark, magnesium sulph. c. p., glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adlerika, produces real benefit. Because this is such an excellent intestinal evacuant it is wonderful for constipation—it often works in one hour and never gripes. Adlerika helps any case gas on the stomach unless due to deep-seated causes. Engler's Broadway Pharmacy, corner Broadway and Main Street, in Taftville at Benoit's Pharmacy.

POETRY

THE RETURN AT YULETIDE.

Christmas comes and the old world turns
Fondly back to its fairy days—
Days that saw Him whose splendor burns
Bright through eras of murk and maze;
Back to the Star whose speaking rays
Wise men spied as it beckoned them
Over Judea's winding ways—
Back to the Babe of Bethlehem!

Christmas comes, and the old heart goes
Gayly back to the dear days past—
Days whose breath of the budding rose
Scents the years that have followed fast;
Back to the Star whose spell was cast
Over young eyes and dazzled them,
Filling rapt youth with a wonder vast—
Back to the Babe of Bethlehem!

Christmas comes, and the old faith lives,
Summoned back from the days gone by—
Days begemmed with the joy that gives
Mortals balm for their sob and sigh;
Back is the Star in the smiling sky,
Pilgrims haste as it urges them
On to the haven ever nigh—
Back to the Babe of Bethlehem!

Christmas! come, when the world shall be Bounding back to the best of days—
Days when He in a manger low
Sages charmed into prayer and praise;
Back to the Star whose speaking rays
All men spy as it beckons them
Over Judea's winding ways—
Back to the Babe of Bethlehem!
—James C. McNally, in St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

IF WE HAD FAITH.

If we had faith—that golden faith
Of children when they meet
Their red-robed god of Christmas Eve,
Old Santa, in the street,
How quickly fancied doubts would fade.
How soon we would achieve
A deeper faith in all mankind,
Be happy and believe.

Old Santa, on the sidewalk, greets
Each little passerby;
Faith tingles in each fingertip,
Love beams in every eye.
Each baby heart pours forth belief
In spoken word and smile,
Till grownups feel the miracle
Of new faith after while.

I pity then those little hearts
Doubt shatters all too soon;
How often bigotry has made
A darkened hour of noon.
Just when Faith's sun is at the crest,
Cold chanticleers of Truth
Arise and crow their righteousness
To drown the songs of Youth.

If we had faith—that golden faith
Born first in girl and boy,
How many happy dreams we'd have
To play with and enjoy.
Why make a chminey just a place
To huddle all about?
Why can't we keep it as a shrine,
Undarkened by a doubt?
—William Herschell, in Indianapolis News.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Johnny has just eaten eleven plums!"

"Good Lord! Call the plumber!"—Cornell Widow.

Mr. Stingy—"Are you the bootblack who shined my shoes last?"

Bootblack (disgustedly)—"No, I've only been here a year."—Life.

When an Englishman goes to the telephone he asks: "Are you there?" If you are not there, of course that ends it.—Louisville Courier Journal.

Purchaser—"What is the charge for this battery?"

Garageman—"One and one-half volts."

Purchaser—"How much is that in American money?"—Amherst Lord Jeff.

A little girl returning from a visit to the barber's and referring to his use of the electric clippers on her remarked to her mother, "I know my neck was dirty, 'cause he used the vacuum cleaner on it."

Mr. Newly-Wed (at dinner)—"Dear, what kind of a pie is that?"

Mrs. N.-W.—"Rhubarb, darling."

Mr. N.-W.—"Well, why did you make such a large one?"

Mrs. N.-W.—"Because I couldn't get any shorter rhubarb."—Lehigh Burr.

Father—"Son, I'm ashamed of you. Your report says you are the last boy in the class of 22."

Son—"It might have been worse."

Father—"I don't see how."

Son—"There might have been more boys in the class."—Judge.

"I say, Tom, are you ever troubled with sleeplessness?"

"I am. Some nights I don't sleep three hours."

"I pity you, then. I've got it awfully bad. I've been afflicted now for about two years. The doctor calls it 'neuro insomnia paralaxitis.'"

Tom grunted and said: "I've had it about six months; but we call it a baby."—Good Hardware.

KALEIDOSCOPE

A French inventor has recently patented a thermostat regulator, to be placed in the connection between the motor and the radiator of an automobile. It stops the flow of water into the radiator when the temperature is low, and thus permits the motor to warm up quickly. When the water temperature in the jacket rises to about 160 degrees Fahrenheit the regulator opens and permits normal circulation.

In an out-of-the-way corner of the Yost field house at the University of Michigan would-be varsity swimmers are holding diving practice. But instead of hitting water the divers enter a bin of sawdust and shavings. Head-first work is not attempted except at times by the most ambitious. The training is to teach the men how to handle themselves in the air rather than how to hit the water.

The total land area of Finland is 84,868,953 acres, of which 58.6 per cent., or 49,733,206 acres, is covered with productive forests. The entire forested area of the country (62,244,000 acres, including productive and inferior forests), is chiefly covered with pine, which constitutes over 55 per cent. of the total stand. Other species are spruce, birch, alder and a small amount of aspen. Coniferous species form 80 per cent of all, and the broadleaf species form 18 1-2 per cent. of all the forests. Finland's timber resources are calculated at 55,800,000,000 cubic feet or 670,080,000,000 board feet.

Some remarkable new flowers were introduced at the autumn show of the Royal Horticultural Society in London. One gladiolus produced in Scotland contained a single spike with seventeen orange scarlet blossoms and about a dozen buds ready to open. Another novelty was a mammoth salmon-pink chrysanthemum. Perhaps the most valuable new offering was a heliotrope and rose carnation which can be made to flower outdoors for six months, or until a severe frost. This flower has recovered the famous musk perfume of early carnations which has been largely lost with the intensive development of the flowers. The gladiolus exhibit was especially remarkable. Some gladioli were brought from Germany by airplane especially for the exhibit.

HIGHER COATINGS AND SUITINGS

Art E. Ecklund, of Anaconda, Mont., shot four ducks on Flint creek. The water was too deep to wade out for the ducks. Taking his fishing pole and spinner he cast three times to pull the ducks ashore. Each time a large trout took the spinner. Then the wind blew the ducks ashore.

Leading independent lines of heavyweight suitings will probably not be opened until February, according to opinions expressed by selling agents. Overcoatings will be shown before suitings, the general openings being scheduled for the last two weeks of next month. From the coatings the trade will work up to suitings. Whether the American Woolen company, which has Norwich mills, will depart from this schedule remains to be seen. At the last heavyweight showing the big company opened staple and semi-staple suitings at the same time as overcoatings.

Working in Florida.

Word has been received at Lord's Point from Floyd H. LaPierre, who with Louis L. Wilcox went to St. Petersburg, Fla. He reports traveling over some very poor roads and many good ones. They are employed at carpentering with plenty to do. Thousands of people are arriving daily and this will continue up to the height of the season there, which is about Jan. 15. Mr. LaPierre expects to return early in March to Lord's Point where he intends building another cottage.

CHRISTMAS CHEER LAVISHLY DISPENSED BY KRIS KRINGLE

In New York Hundreds of Entertainments Were Staged For the Poor—At the Hyppodrome 6,500 Youngsters Were Entertained by Theatrical Performance, Following a Distribution of Prsents to the Little Ones—Relief Agencies, Many Individuals and a Large Number of Organizations Provided Dinners, Clothing and Gifts to Needy Families.

New York, Dec. 25.—Hundreds of Christmas entertainments were staged here today for the children of the poor. At each of these Santa Claus distributed toys and fruit and candy to boys and girls who otherwise might have lost faith in him.

One of the most spectacular functions was at the Hippodrome, where 6,500 youngsters were entertained at a theatrical performance after midget actors had assisted old Kris Kringle in handing out presents to the little ones.

Thousands of Christmas dinners, clothing and gifts were distributed to needy families by relief agencies in co-operation with countless individuals and numerous organizations.

The holiday spirit also pervaded hospitals, prisons and reform schools, gaily decorated trees were set up in many of them Christmas dinners were served in all of the institutions and volunteers provided music and other entertainment.

The weather man's promise of a "white Christmas" did not materialize. Light snow flurries sprinkled the pavements this morning, but did not last long. The crisp, moderate weather, however, made it delightful to be outdoors and served to fill the churches to capacity.

All of the hotels had arranged special programmes for their guests. Many were decorated with holly and evergreen, while in the bobbies of others, huge Christmas trees had been placed.

Through the widespread use of electric lights instead of candles, no burns or deaths from Christmas tree fires were reported.

SIMPLE OBSERVANCE OF CHRISTMAS IN WASHINGTON

Washington, Dec. 24.—The simplicity that attends observance of Christmas in rural Vermont marked the day at the White House and in a measure pervaded the entire life of the capital.

Whether by design or not, observance of the holiday throughout Washington partook of the quiet and simple manner of celebration of President and [illegible] partly through the inclination because of the recent [illegible] the family circle.

[illegible] members remaining in the holiday observed the fes[illegible] of their families, [illegible] and low degree in [illegible] private life followed much [illegible] There were few of [illegible] and parties that once [illegible] in the capital.

[illegible] refused to permit the [illegible] were entirely with his [illegible] Mrs. Coolidge, although [illegible] retiring last night be[illegible] Christmas carol serve on [illegible] dawn of the White House and the buffet supper they served to the singers afterward in the state dining room, arose and had breakfast at the usual hour.

Nine o'clock saw the president at his office, but a clear desk greeted him and so he wandered through the executive offices seeking among the desks the overnight accumulation of mail. Finding this, he sorted it out, taking with him a few letters that appeared most likely to be addressed to his personal attention, and then taking a seat beside the policemen's desk in the main lobby read the morning newspapers. Returning to the executive mansion he spent an hour with Mrs. Coolidge and John, the son, and the White House's only Christmas guests. Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns of Boston and then the entire party drove to the First Congregational church, for the union Christmas day services, held under the Washington Federation of Churches. Ministers representing the leading Protestant denominations of the city participated in these services and a sermon entitled, "The Abiding Joy of the Shepherds," was preached by the Rev. Charles Wood of the Church of the Covenant, Presbyterian.

Again before luncheon Mr. Coolidge visited his office and finding there Rudolph Forester, White House executive clerk, went over a few matters with him. Late in the afternoon he went out for a long walk in the sharp air of a partly cloudy day.

Mr. and Mrs. Stearns were the only guests at the Christmas dinner tonight, at which place of prominence was given to a monster turkey raised on a government reclamation project in Wyoming and sent to the White House by the Lions' club of Riverton, Wyoming.

The government departments, which closed Wednesday noon, will reopen tomorrow but congress will not reconvene until next Monday.

CHRISTMAS CELEBRATIONS IN THE FRENCH CAPITAL

Paris, Dec. 25 (By the A. P.)—Paris, last night and today, celebrated its Christmas with a zest that has seldom been equalled. All the services in the churches were allotted [illegible] midnight masses weeks ago and many of the faithful were turned away. And all the restaurants and cafes, in the poorest and richest quarters of the city, were crowded with merrymakers who consumed great quantities of food and drink. The merriment kept up until dawn.

Last night's prices in the cafes, on the whole, were not excessive, except in the most elaborate establishments of the Montmartre where North and South Americans formed a large portion of the clientele. After midnight in these places champagne cost 400 francs a bottle. All supper bills bore a tax of 27 1-2 per cent on the total and the treasure is counting on a respectable sum by way of a Christmas present.

Christmas trees were as much in favor as ever. President Doumergue gave his children's Christmas party at the Elysee last week, setting an example which was followed by many public and private institutions today.

Another traditional feature of the celebration today was the swimming race in the Seine for the Christmas cup. There were nineteen entries, including one woman, Madeline Nissen. The race was won by the Hungarian, Dukasz, last year's winner. His time was 5 minutes 51 1-5 seconds. Mlle. Nissen finished last.

The course for the swimming event which is an annual affair, was a diagonal one across the Seine just above Alexander bridge, about the center of Paris. Huge crowds on both sides of the river watched the contest. The temperature of the water averaged about 36 degrees and as the current was normal, all the starters finished. Last year, owing to the swift current only five of the contestants succeeded in completing the race, the rest of them being carried downstream.

Paris was favored by sunshine during the day and, there being no wind, excursions and sports meetings were brought off under the best conditions.

AUTHOR OF "SCARAMOUCHE" AWARDED $10,000 PRIZE

New York, Dec. 25.—Rafael Sabatini, for his novel "Scaramouche," has been awarded the $10,000 prize offered by Adolph Zukor to the writer whose story or play made the best motion picture in the year which ended last September 1, the Author's League of America, through which the award was made, announced today.

The judges were George Barr Baker, chairman of the First International Congress of Motion Picture Arts, at which the prize was offered last year; Ellis Parker Butler, president of the Authors' League; Edward Childs Carpenter, president of the American Dramatists; Allan Dwan, Charles Rona Gibson, Frederick Roy Martin, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Elmer Rice and Robeft E. Sherwood.

Final selection was made, the report of the judges said, after consideration of a "surprisingly large number of worthy pictures" which were narrowed down to 17 from which "Scaramouche," "The Thief of Bagdad" and "A Woman of Paris" were chosen for the final decision.

"Scaramouche" was selected, the report continued, "because it was from all viewpoints an exceptional motion picture. It possessed that fluidity of action essential to effectiveness; it reflected realistically a particularly dramatic period of history; it possessed great pictorial beauty, as directed with skill and played by a brilliant cast.

"Above all it was a good story—written with broad strokes and in heroic mood—and the prize was offered primarily to a story teller. The committee members were unanimous in praising the spectacular beauty and fantastic charm of the "Thief of Bagdad" but the authorship of the Arabian Nights which it recreated, is obscure. Chaplin's directing genius rather than the story made "The Woman of Paris" notable.

"Scaramouche" was adapted to the screen by Willis Goldbeck, directed by Rex Ingram and distributed by the Metro Pictures corporation. Adolph Zukor, who has made the prize a permanent annual establishment of the Author's League, is the president of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation.

POLICEMAN SHOT IN GUN BATTLE WITH BOYS

Huntington, W. Va., Dec. 25.—Three boys, 14 to 16 years old, were being held by police tonight and another was being sought in connection with the shooting of Owen Childers, a city policeman, on a lonely road in the outskirts of the city last night. Childers was shot in the chest but not seriously wounded in a gun battle between the boys and several officers when the police attempted to arrest them upon a rum-running charge.

According to the police, the boys were transferring liquor from one automobile to another when they were interrupted. An exchange of shots followed, after which two of the boys surrendered. A third was arrested later and the fourth escaped. The names of the boys were withheld by police.

UNIQUE CHRISTMAS GIFT FOR SHERIFF GEDDES

New Haven, Dec. 25.—High Sheriff James Geddes received a unique Christmas gift today when he was given a gavel fashioned out of piece of wood taken from a Guilford residence which was erected in 1639. The gift was from Former Deputy Sheriff George N. Bradley. On one side of the gavel the figures 1639 were carved and on the other side 1924. It is a piece of oak and looks as if it had been cut but a few days ago, so well preserved is the piece. Sheriff Geddes will use the gavel for the first time when he opens the supreme court session on January 20 here.

CHINESE, FOUND DEAD, HAD BEEN STABBED 16 TIMES

New York, Dec. 25.—A Chinese believed to be L. K. Fon, was found dead in a tenement building here tonight. He had been stabbed 16 times.

Police were unable to identify the victim positively or to find a motive for the killing.

Eddie Wong, head of the Hip Sing Tong, said after looking at the body that he did not know the man, but that it was possible the victim was [illegible] Tong member.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Sculptor Gelli[illegible]d.

Sienna, Italy, Dec. [illegible] Emilio Gellori, the noted sculptor, died suddenly today. His most noted works include a monument to Garibaldi, recently erected in the gardens of the Janiculum at Rome, and a monument to King Victor Emmanuel II, dedicated in 1911 at Rome.

Negotiations in Balkans

Sofia, Dec. 25.—Premier Tsankoff, under an agreement of the Jugoslavia and Rumanian governments, left tonight for Belgrade and Bucharest to negotiate understandings among the Balkan states on various pressing issues. No details of the premier's program were given out by the Bulgarian government.

Herriot Allowed to Leave Bed.

Paris, Dec. 25.—Premier Herriot, who has been confined to his room by illness since Dec. 10, was allowed to leave his bed for the first time today. The doctors, however, have ordered that the premier must stay off his feet for the present, owing to the continuing stiffness in the muscles of the calf of one of his legs. Consequently, for the time being, he will work in an armchair.

ROBERT P. BRINDELL IS TO LEAVE PRISON TODAY

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 25.—When Robert P. Brindell, former labor leader, serving a sentence for extortion, leaves Great Meadow prison at Comstock tomorrow morning, he will be entitled to collect $17 in wages, representing his earnings as a prisoner at the rate of a cent and a half a day.

Brindell is to be rearrested by Deputy United States Marshal George Black of Schenectady on a federal warrant charging him with violation of the United States income tax laws as soon as he steps through the prison gate. The government charges that the former labor leader, while in prison, failed to report all his assets and income.

Brindell, according to plans recently announced, will go by train in the custody of Marshal Black from Comstock to Whitehall, where United States Commissioner Leon Layden will fix the amount of bail. The ex-labor leader has not divulged his plans for the future.

FUNERAL OF BISHOP BICKLEY TOMORROW

Philadelphia, Dec. 25.—The funeral of Bishop George H. Bickley, of the Methodist Episcopal church, who died Christmas eve in the Methodist hospital here after a long illness, will be held Saturday at 2 p. m. in St. James' M. E. church. Many prominent clergy are expected to attend the services.

Dr. Bickley, who comes from a family of ministers and who was a cousin of Bishop Charles Burns, bishop of the San Francisco area, was elected a bishop in 1920 and assigned to Singapore in the Straits Settlement. His health failed when there and he returned home last spring and insisted on attending the general conference of the church in Springfield, Mass. His health did not improve and he was granted a long leave of absence, since which time he had been in different hospitals trying to regain his waning strength.

ALL NEW YORK PENAL INSTITUTIONS WELL FILLED

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 25.—More persons were committed to various penal institutions under jurisdiction of the New York state commission of prisons during the year ending June 30, 1924, than in any previous year since 1917, it was indicated in figures compiled by the commission from prison officials' reports and made public here today.

During this year 111,603 were committed, 12,361 being women. In 1917, 129,352 were committed. The commission said that since 1917 there had been a gradual decline in the yearly commitments until in 1920 only 59,033 were placed in jail, but that since 1920 the increase had been striking. The increase was evident, it was said, in all institutions except that for defective delinquents and the reformatories for females.

RADICAL DEPUTY UGALDE BANISHED FROM CHILE

Santiago, Chile, Dec. 25.—Pedro Leon Ugalde, former radical deputy, was yesterday convicted by courtmartial of plotting to subvert public order and instigate sedition among troops. He was sentenced to three years' banishment from Chile.

The military prosecutor had recommended to the court that the penalty, if Ugalde was convicted, be banishment outside the central provinces. He explained that the law under which Ugalde was tried dated back to colonial times, was entirely obsolete and should be revised. This law provides for the death sentence upon conviction.

BIG FIRE IN BUSINESS SECTION OF HOLLYWOOD, MISS.

Hollywood, Miss., Dec. 25.—Almost the entire business portion of the town of Hollywood was destroyed today when fire, said to have originated from a defective lighting system, broke out in a store.

The town has no water system and the volunteer fire fighters could do little to check the flames. The loss is estimated at nearly $100,000.

OBITUARY.

Dr. Henry A. Argue.

Corning, N. Y., Dec. 25.—Dr. Henry A. Argue died today following a two weeks' illness. He was born in Corning in 1861 and opened a practice here 43 years ago.

Dr. Argue was for many years physician and surgeon for the Erie, New York Central and Lackawanna railroads. He stood high in local Masonic circles and was a past exalted ruler of the Corning lodge of Elks.

SING SING PRISONERS HAD CHICKEN DINNER

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 25.—Sing Sing's 1,375 prisoners today enjoyed a Christmas party consisting of chicken dinner and a vaudeville entertainment. The 18 prisoners condemned to death had a special meal but did not attend the performance.

Seven persons are in the Norwalk hospital, two of whom are not expected to live, as the result of a collision between an automobile and a milk train at the Catherine street crossing in Norwalk.

Privation Prevails In Bolshivik Russia

In Millions of Homes There Are Empty Cupboards and Fireless Stoves.

Moscow, Russia, Dec. 25 (By the A. P.)—Although the soviet government does not recognize Christmas as a holiday all the official and commercial life of Russia ceased today. Christmas dawned bright on a setting of deep snow, biting frost and tinkling sleigh-bells. Vodka flowed freely for the first time since the revolution, the government having found prohibition unworkable and unprofitable.

Christmas trees, roast turkeys, sweet-meats, toys and other tokens of Christmastide was found in the homes of the more fortunate Russians, but in millions of other households there were empty cupboards, fireless stoves and a cheerless atmosphere. There were many millions barely able to buy bread for the day; there were legions of others without homes or relatives who sought charity of their impecunious neighbors.

But if the material side of Christmas was wanting, the spiritual was much in evidence, for, in spite of the communist campaign against religion, the greater part of the population in the larger cities went eagerly to church to celebrate the birth of the Founder of the Christmas faith. In countless homes candles burned brightly in front of ikons.

In the villages the peasants will wait until January 7 to observe the holiday; this is the old Gregorian calendar date for Christmas. The [illegible]utive chapel of the Iberian virgin, in the heart of Moscow, the most famous Christian shrine in all Russia was hacked today with fervent Russians, who prostrated themselves on the ice-strewn floor. Not far away was another shrine—that of the bolshevik revolution. Within it sleeps Lenine in eternity. The two edifices presented a strange contrast; one typified old Russia, the other new Russia.

Little groups of holiday visitors from the villages mingling with workmen and communists stood in front of Lenine's wooden spirit of the father of bolshevism within.

Immediately behind the tomb, with the ir slender golden spires pointed heavenward and touched magically by nature with a glistening sheen of virgin snow, were the churches of the Kremlin, their bells and chimes now stilled in tongueless silence, as if symbolizing the citadel of the soviet government, which recognizes neither Christmas, nor religion nor imperialistic traditions.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

Bridgeport, Dec. 25.—Mrs. Mina Curtis, aged 42, of 865 Stratford avenue, this city, is dead, and Mrs. Ada Shew, aged 34, of Stratford avenue, is in a critical condition at the Bridgeport hospital with a possible fractured skull, after both were struck by an automobile operated by Thomas J. Connor of 1006 Connecticut avenue, who is held in bonds of $1,000, charged with manslaughter. Conner is the superintendent of the municipal garage.

According to statements made by Connor and others after the accident, to the police, the women stepped directly in the path of his car and were struck before he had a chance to turn aside.

FRENCH BANKER SPREAD FALSE COMMUNIST REPORT

Paris, Dec. 25.—The government is not confining its efforts in repressing false communist reports to the expulsion of undesirable foreigners. It was learned today that action had been taken against a banker of Nantes who is declared to have recently sent circulars to some fifty of his clients warning them that conditions in France were critical that Amiens was in the hands of the communists and that a railroad strike was imminent. The banker, whose establishment is not of the first importance, is officially charged with propagating alarmist reports.

W. H. ANDERSON SPENT CHRISTMAS DAY AT HOME

Yonkers, N. Y., Dec. 25.—William H. Anderson, former superintendent of the New York Anti-Saloon league, who was released from Sing Sing prison yesterday, spent Christmas day within the family circle at his home. He did not attend services at the Central Methodist church, of which he is a trustee. The only message from the Anderson home was conveyed by Miss Anderson, the former superintendent's daughter, from her mother. She said to the reporters:

"Mother says that she has nothing to say, except that she wishes you a Merry Christmas."

FOUR MEN KILLED WHEN AUTO WENT OFF EMBANKMENT

Richmond, Va., Dec. 25.—Four Richmond men were killed today when their automobile left the Petersburg-Ruchmond turnpike and went over an embankment. Earl Gathright, Benie Childress and Herman Cumber were killed instantly. Charles Jordan died in a hospital. Eyland K. Leonard, driver of the car, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving, but later was released on $1,000 bond.

COLDEST CHRISTMAS IN CLEVELAND IN 53 YEARS

Columbus, O., Dec. 25 (By the A. P.).—Ohio today, covered with a blanket of snow, experienced in many localities the coldest Christmas day in almost half a century. Temperatures ranged from 3 to 14 degrees below zero.

Death Toll 32 in Christmas Eve Fire

Five Others Missing—Tiny Candle in Christmas Tree Ignited Ball of Cotton.

Hobart, Okla., Dec. 25 (By the A. P.)— With 32 bodies, most of them burned beyond recognition, lying in a temporary morgue in two store buildings, and five others listed as missing, as a result of a Christmas eve fire at the district schoolhouse at Babb's Switch, seven miles from here, Hobart citizens tonight were continuing their efforts to identify the dead.

A tiny candle on a Christmas tree ignited a ball of cotton. Little revelers gripped their socks of candy and stood spellbound while their elders at first tried to put out the fire and then, as the flames licked up the cedar

DENIAL BY FOSTER FATHER OF WILLIAM N. M'CLINTOCK

Albuquerque, N. M., Dec. 25.—William D. Shepherd, foster father of William N. McClintock, denied the truth of statements contained in reports from Chicago today concerning events prior to the young man's death.

"Miss Isabelle Pope was not kept from Billy's room," said Shepherd. "She was present in the room when Billy died. Besides Miss Pipe, there were Dr. Stein, the attending physician, two nurses, Mrs. Shepherd and myself.

"Billy was unconscious for some days before his death Miss Pope talked with him just a week before he died."

Shepherd admitted that they raised objections to the marriage of Billy and Miss Pope after the young man became ill, but denied that a "coolness had existed" between Mrs. Shepherd and Miss Pope. Both he and Mrs. Shepherd, he said, were in favor of Billy's marriage to Miss Pope.

"We wanted to see Billy married and we thought the match between him and Miss Pope was ideal," he said.

Objections were raised after Billy became ill, he said, at the insistance of Billy, who said he did not want to marry until the date set, February 22, 1925, and until he was entirely recovered.

Reports of quarrels between Billy and his foster parents drew a strong denial from Shepherd.

BOTTLE OF NITROGLYCERINE IN DEAD MAN'S CLOTHES

Randolph, N. Y., Dec. 25.—A bottle containing two ounces of nitroglycerine, said to be enough to cause a disastrous explosion, today was found in the clothing taken from the body of Peter McLarney, who yesterday fatally shot his former wife, Dorothy Anderson McLarney. McLarney wounded two other persons and then killed himself after engaging in a revolver duel with Patrolman W. A. Bragg.

If one of the many bullets fired by Bragg at McLarney had struck the bottle and the contents had exploded many persons might have been killed, the authorities say. The house where the battle took place is in a thickly settled neighborhood.

Mrs. Grace V. Anderson, former mother-in-law of McLarney, who was shot three times, and her son, John Anderson, University of New York student, into whose body McLarney put two bullets, are recovering, physicians said today.

McLarney put five bullets into his former wife when she arrived here from Brooklyn, where she was a student at Pratt Institute, and then wounded her mother and brother. He then began the gu nduel with the policeman and killed himself when he feared he would be arrested.

AUTO GOING 50 MILES AN HOUR HIT AT CROSSING

Hartford, Dec. 25.—The condition of the four victims of an accident at a railroad crossing in which their automobile was demolished a few minutes after midnight this morning by an express train, said to have been traveling at 50 miles an hour, was reported tonight at a local hospital, where they had been removed, to be critical. The injured, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Queenan of 20 Bond street and Mr. and Mrs. James J. Keatley of 1074 Capitol avenue extension, all sustained fractured skulls in addition to other serious injuries.

According to a witness of the accident, the automobile, driven by Keatley, struck the locomotive, the driving wheels and piston of which instantly reduced the automobile to wreckage, strewn for several hundred feet along the track. The party had just left a church where they had been unable to enter on account of the crowds attending the midnight Christmas mass for another church on a neighboring steet. The crossing where the accident occurred was protected by a gateman who had left at midnight. The train was bound for Springfield and was about 15 minutes late.

ERSTWHILE FAMOUS MINSTREL HALL DIED IN OBSCURITY

Denver, Colo., Dec. 25.—Milton Henry Hall, two decades ago one of the best known of the blackface minstrel comedians and the man who wrote "Down Where the Cotton Blossoms Grow," and the "Cuban Star March", was buried here yesterday with only four mourners at his grave.

When Hall stepped down from his pinnacle of fame thirty years ago amid the plaudits of admiring thousands who had laughed at and with him, he began a new career which left him at the bottom of life's ladder.

The last twenty years he spent as a dishwasher in a Denver hotel and when he died Monday in the General hospital there was none at the hospital who knew of his early career.

GOLD MEDALS AWARDED A SCHOOLBOY ARTIST

New York, Dec. 25.—Two gold medals have been awarded Duncan Campbell, 10-year-old schoolboy of Brooklyn, for his painting of a life-like tiger on a five-foot canvas, submitted in a contest among 3,000 school children. The judges said he was one of the most remarkable youngsters found in thirteen years of contests.

TO QUESTION FOSTER FATHER OF "MILLIONAIRE ORPHAN"

Chicago, Dec. 25.—William D. Shepherd, foster father of young William McClintock, the "millionaire orphan," and chief heir to his estate, will be questioned at the state attorney's office as soon as he reaches Chicago regarding the death of the youth at the Shepherd home three weeks ago, it was announced tonight.

According to advices received from Albuquerque, N. M., where Shepherd and his wife went after the boy's death, Shepherd has already started for Chicago. Mrs. Shepherd, whom the state's attorney also wishes to question, did not accompany her husband, according to word received by the authorities here.

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe said he expected to order an investigation by the January grand jury if an autopsy performed on the exhumed body yesterday reveals that the youth died from other than natural causes. A preliminary report on the post-mortem examination will be given to Coroner Oscar Wolfe by several pathologists tomorrow. One of the pathologists making an analysis of the youth's vital organs represents the Shepherds.

Tomorrow the state's attorney will take statements from the doctors who signed the death certificate of the youth, ascribing the cause as typhoid fever. Miss Mary Gartner, a maid in the Shepherd home, will also be questioned. She witnessed the signing of McClintock's will.

CONTRADICTORY REPORTS OF ALBANIAN SITUATION

Rome, Dec. 25.—Reports regarding the Albanian situation received here continue confused and contradictory. The one given most credence is that Premier Fan Noli's govegnment is in a critical condition. Tirana, is believed by observers here to be seriously menaced. Premier Fan Noli is said to be continuing his accusations against the Jugoslavs as the responsible elements in the uprising. The revolutionary movement, however, is somewhat complex since Albanians, Serbs and Russians are all participating.

The Jugoslav government has announced that its action in closing the Albanian frontier at its most important point was for the purpose of circumscribing the present Albanian movement and to prevent it taking on an international aspect. The Impero says that Jugoslavia desires at any cost to overthrow the present democratic nationalist regime. Premier Fan Noli having shown himself a formidable opponent of the Jugoslav policy at the league of nations.

FIVE MEN WOUNDED BY GUNMEN IN NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 25.—Five men were seriously wounded when two gunmen entered an East Side poolroom and opened fire on them today. The victims are in a hospital and three of them are not expected to live. The men who did the shooting fled with several companions in an automobile in which they had driven to the poolroom.

All the wounded men told detectives they knew of no motive for the attack. The proprietor of the pool room and a number of other witnesses were taken to the station house for questioning by the police.

$500,000 DAMAGE BY FIRE IN CENTER MAHANOY CITY, PA.

Mahanoy City, Pa., Dec. 25.—Three double block buildings in the heart of the business section were destroyed by fire early today. The damage, including loss of valuable stock in several of the stores, is estimated at $500,000.

The occupants of the apartments on the floors above the stores were roused from their sleep by the police departments before the fire companies arrived and made their way downstairs through clouds of smoke in scanty clothing. John Coyle, a fireman, was slightly hurt.

The fire was caused by defective heating apparatus.

A MAMMOTH GAS WELL STRUCK AT DUNKERK, N. Y.

Dunkerk, N. Y., Dec. 25.—Another big gas well was struck today on the Richter farm, the largest well ever struck in the Sheridan gas fields, with a daily flow of more than 2,000,000 feet. The roar of the well can be heard for half a mile.

The flow has been turned into the main of the company which supplies Dunkerk and surrounding towns.

NEW WITNESS FOR THE WEEHAWKEN LIQUOR CASE

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 25.—A new witness, hitherto unnamed, will testify before the Hudson county grand jury in connection with the Weehawken liquor conspiracy next Tuesday. Assistant Prosecutor Aloysius McMahon announced today. Because of the development of new leads bearing on the investigation. Mr. McMahon said, the jury will not meet tomorrow.

The new witness' testimony is regarded as highly important. His name is being withheld by the prosecutor's office lest efforts be made to tamper with him, it was reported.

Adrian C. Chamberlain, federal prohibition director for New Jersey, declared today that the 44 liquor raids recently made over his head in Jersey City and Newark by prohibition agents from the New York office were inspired by political enemies of Senator Walter E. Edge. Mr. Chamberlain is one of Senator Edge's appointees.

Word has been received by Assistant Prosecutor McMahon from District Attorney Alexander T. Blessin of Schenectady that Rocco Peretta of that city and Jeremiah Sullivan of Amsterdam, N. Y., would appear before the grand jury in Jersey City next Tuesday and tell their story of the alleged collection from them of $6,300 by David J. Allen, former purchasing agent at the Atlanta penitentiary, and John J. Coyle, former New Jersey assemblyman, to obtain the delivery in Schenectady of 630 cases of whiskey from a federal warehouse in New York.

SEEKING IDENTITY OF FLEEING AUTOMOBILIST

Worcester, Mass., Dec. 25.—Police highway inspectors and the office of the medical examiner will join tomorrow in an effort to run down the identity of the automobilist Patrolman Frank W. Sanborn was pursuing at the time the automobile on which he was riding collided with another car at Lake Junction this morning, causing his death and injury to five persons.

Chester A. Richardson of Watertown, who was driving the machine which skidded into a car driven by Ralph McKenzie, 28, of Philadelphia, and on which Patrolman Sanborn was riding, is still in a critical condition at the City hospital, while the injuries to McKenzie, his father, William, 32, and mother, Mrs. Nellie McKenzie, the last two both of Albany, N. Y., are not considered to be as serious as was at first thought.

SANTA CLAUS RECEIVED A WARM RECEPTION IN NOME

Nome, Alaska, Dec. 25.—Santa Claus was given a warm reception in this usually frigid town yesterday when he appeared on the main thoroughfare here in a sleigh loaded with Christmas presents and drawn by real reindeer. The presents were distributed to whites and Eskimos alike.

While the United States and Canada shivered from sub-zero weather, fur overcoats and heavy clothing was discarded here yesterday when the mercury registered 40 degrees above zero.

Nearly an inch of rain which fell yesterday melted the small amount of snow on the ground. A temperature of 21 above zero, recorded a week ago, stands as the coldest day of the winter. A local hospital was without patients today for the first time in many months.

ELDERLY WOMAN PERISHED AT FIRE IN MARLBORO, N. Y.

Marlboro, N. Y., Dec. 25.—Fire of undetermined origin swept through a three-story building today causing the death of Mrs. Eliza Coutant, 75, a cripple, in whose apartment the blaze is believed to have started.

Thirteen tenants, members of four families, were rescued, but Mrs. Coutant was dead when fireman reached her.

Damage was estimated at $25,000.

SHORE LINE EXPRESS STRUCK AN AUTOMOBILE

Mansfield, Mass., Dec. 25.—The Shore Line express from New York to Boston today struck an automobile which had stalled on a crossing and threw it against the crossing tender's shanty with such force that the house was torn from its foundation. Walter Orre of East Foxboro, the driver, and Harold Holland of the Dorchester district of Boston leaped to safety just before the crash. The crossing tender was uninjured and the train only slightly delayed.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
Willimantic Office, 771 Main Street
Telephone 1191
Office Hours: 9:00 to 12 m.; 1:30 to 5 p. m.

Five hundred boys and girls between 5 and 15, met Santa Claus, played games, sang and ate candy, at the Community Christmas celebration given for their benefit at the state armory on Pleasant street, on Christmas afternoon. The affair was in charge of the amusement committee, Valentine L. Murphy, chairman, of the public celebration body and the funds for the entertainment were received through popular subscriptions of public spirited citizens. The Knights of Columbus took a hand in the merrymaking and furnished over five hundred bags filled with oranges, Christmas candy and nuts. The distribution of these goodies was in charge of a K. of C. committee, headed by Thomas O'Brien. At 2 o'clock the huge Christmas tree placed in the center of the drill shed and reaching from floor to ceiling was lighted and the hundreds of eager children gathered at the door were ushered in, to meet Santa Claus on single file. In the hall they were seated according to age and placed in the care of a group of teachers from the Natchaug Grammar school, including Mrs. Mabel S. Caswell, Mrs. Martha White, Misses Edith Willett, Olive Caswell, Dorothy Hevrin and Lois Caswell. Charles Caswell led in the singing. Albert B. Smith, the live wire secretary of the T. M. C. A., took active charge of the program. Among his assistants were Valentine L. Murphy, William Costello, Joseph Roux, Joseph Vincelette, Harry Dumas, Eugene Moriarty and Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead. St. Joseph's Boy Scouts band occupied seats in one corner of the shed and under Director Charles N. C. Wheeler played several popular numbers which served to enhance the young guests. Group games were played amid much merriment. While the girls danced around in circles, playing drop the handkerchief and the like, the boys rolled medicine balls or threw basketballs around. To one side of this melee of fun the older boys congregated about in a ring and witnessed boxing bouts between youthful champions. After an hour of this the whistle was blown for order and the children were seated about the room for the entertainment program, which was furnished by groups of fancy dancers, trained by Miss Emma L. Heureux. The first number was a Spanish dance by eight young misses. Comedy song numbers by Rasolle Gude followed and greatly delighted the audience. Next came the pony dance which displayed accomplishment in interpretive and graceful unison of movement. The little dancers appeared in teams driven by little Misses Helen Duhaut, Genevieve Bernard, Viola Nolan and Helena Bouffard. The ponies were Claire Dumas, Rita Bacon, Alice Delude, Doris Brindamour, Claire Marrotte, Evelyn Desrosiers, Germaine Gaudreau, Germaine Matt, Jeannette Chamberlain, Claire Dion, Corrinne Dendult, Germaine Gaudreau, Antoinette Gelinas, Agnes Sumner and Claire Bacon. Little Medora Marrotte than appeared in a beautiful solo dance, Her First Steps. This was followed by a trio dance, by Rose Lavigne, Irene Nolan and Juliette Lamoureux. Last came the Dutch dance by Claire Dion, Rita Bacon, Doris Brindamour and Jeannette Chamberlain. America was sung by the gathering and the kiddies were led through a door where the K. of C. men handed them the candy bags. The festivities were a source of delight to a large audience of parents and friends who occupied the gallery. Before the closing Al Smith led in three big cheers for Acting Mayor George W. Hickey, general chairman of the celebration committee and instigator of the project and cheers for Santa Claus (Judge Otto B. Robinson). In turn Mayor Hickey led in a rousing cheer for Al Smith, naming him as the man responsible for the success of the event.

Daniel Holbrook died shortly before 4 o'clock Wednesday evening at his boarding place with Mrs. Mary Stearns on Main street. Mr. Holbrook had been in failing health for some time but up to recently had been able to make his daily trips to the chamber of commerce rooms where he was considered a remarkably good pocket billiard player. He was born Oct. 26, 1842, in Columbia, a son of Nathan K. and Jane Porter Holbrook. He lived in Hebron for many years and some fifteen years ago moved to this city, making his home at the Stearns house. Surviving him is his wife, Sarah Porter Holbrook of Hebron, one daughter, Mrs. Grover Clark of Hebron, a son, John Holbrook and two sisters, Mrs. A. W. Hutchinson, also of Hebron and Mrs. J. C. Randall of this city. Mr. Holbrook was a member of the Willimantic Chamber of Commerce, being on the rooms committee. For several years past he made daily journeys to the chamber rooms and although in his eighties, handled his ride with such accuracy as to defeat nearly all comers.

The slippery traveling and rain accounted for an accident late Wednesday evening at the corner of Jackson street and Maple avenue, when Mrs. Mary Shea was knocked down by a car owned and operated by Harry S. Lester, of 67 Lewiston avenue. The woman was taken to St. Joseph's hospital where it was found that her injuries would not materially affect her and she was returned to her home at 238 Valley street. The police were notified.

Several skidding experiences were reported about town Christmas, which in some cases resulted in accidents, causing damage to vehicles. Ernest Bellevance, driving a Dodge sedan, run for public service by Hyman Brettschneider of this city, collided with the stone wall along Jillson Hill, Christmas afternoon, in an attempt to avoid striking a team which was being driven up the hill on the left of the road. Bellevance had two passengers in the machine and was coming down the steep grade when he encountered the team, while around a bend in the hill. He turned to the left and skidded around so that the rear of the car struck a stone culvert, demolishing the left rear wheel of the machine. A somewhat similar skidding accident occurred on the same hill less than an hour later. On Bricktop Hill a milk truck driven by a dealer from that section skidded and ran his car into the embankment, causing the front axle to snap. Other slight accidents in this vicinity kept the wrecking trucks from local garages on the jump throughout the day but the damages were too slight to warrant the filing of reports with the police department.

A day before Christmas announcement made at the Holland Silk Manufacturing company, was to the effect that it was expected from now on that the two local mills of the company would operate on full time, least through the winter months. There will be a short suspension of operations for one week beginning Dec. 31, for the annual inventory, after which the plant will resume hours of from 7 to 12 m. and from 1 to 4.45 p. m. daily.

Christmas Day with the exception of the excitement occasioned by the children's entertainment at the state armory was unusually quiet here. Its observance, however, was filled with the full significance of the day and this past Christmas goes on record as one of the most widely observed in the history of the city. The police department had things easy all day and Chief McArthur's only duties were a pleasing ones, in receiving and returning the greetings of personal friends and friends of the department.

The midnight masses at the two Roman Catholic churches, St. Mary's and St. Joseph's and services at St. Paul's Episcopal church, although attended to the full capacity of the edifices failed to lessen the number of church-goers at the later services on Christmas morning. A light snow covered the ground, the temperature was normal and with the sun shining the day was ideal for Christmas.

Somebody overburdened with the wrong kind of Christmas spirit made depredations on packages left in automobiles by midnight churchgoers early Christmas morning and two of these cases were reported to the police.

A blazing chimney in the house at 17 Arnold's lane, owned by Adolph Vion and occupied by David Fortier and family caused some excitement in that region shortly after 6 o'clock Christmas evening and a ball alarm was sent in from box 18 at the corner of Mansfield avenue and Main street. The chemical and hook and ladder trucks of the department made quick response and extinguished the blaze without damage with nine gallons of chemicals.

The Christmas programme in the Natchaug school, grade one, Miss Hevrin's room included two songs, a folk dance by all the children and recitations by Avis French, Dorothy Burdick, Mason Angell, Jean Congdon, Kerwin Spencer, Ruth Moffitt, Edgar Butcher, Claire Sullivan and Evelyn Hood. In Miss Cahill's room, the children sang A Merry Christmas and Away in a Manger. The little people who recited were Beatrice Clauson, Russell Wasylchak, Mary Lucas, Earl Mundell, Raymond Deroiser, Laurence Olsen, Louise Farrah, Charles Gregson, Marion Bycel, George Haddad, Mary Szydek, Marjorie Thompson. In Miss Hughes' room, grade two, poems were given by Clara Branch, Georgo Dubina, Lois Babcock, John Higgins, Evelyn Hickey, Peter Stanchak, Barbara Bernet, Charles Downing and Janet Lincoln. In Mrs. McFarland's room by Raymond Fritz, Julia Talaronak, Angelo Zagara, George Holmes, Ring Janson and a song entitled The Home of the Christmas Tree. There were also recitations by Ruth Nichols, Charlotte Mills, Helen Dziomba, Phyllis Rood, Richard Foote, Roger Cady, Peter Moran, John McQuillan, Richard Wolmer, Roy Irish, Florrie Karas, Robert Backus, Jennie Syzdek, Eileen Entz and Robert Smith, and a song by Julia Talaronak. In Miss Moriarty's second grade the children in the programme were Eileen Hekeley, Ruth Eisenberg, Arthur Racicot, Eva Dawonczyw, Inez Smith, Charles Anderson, Rose Simmons, John Osterhoudt, Clara Boss, Brownie Armes, Dorothy Shippee and Gertrude Sternlieb.

GOSHEN

A number from this place were among those who attended the sheriff's sale at Lebanon town hall Monday. The stock sold to the highest bidder consisted of the bankrupt stock of men's haberdashery. These were ten high grade suits of clothes, some of which sold for $5 the suit, and less, first class rubbers went for 50c. linen collars 1 cent each, etc.

In the recent death of Deacon William H. Frink the township loses another of its respected citizens. Mr. Frink belonged to a generation of which but few remain. He was a typical New Englander, a kind-hearted neighbor, genial, and a pleasant conversationalist. His long life of four score and six years was spent here in Goshen. He obtained his education in the Brick school district that was built in 1816. Deacon Frink was a faithful attendant of the Scott Hill Baptist church, and since church services had been discontinued there he was heard to remark that the church building would never go into other hands while he lived. Mr. Frink carried his religion into his daily life. Some years ago the Christian Crusade band conducted a revival at Goshen church, also at the Scott Hill church. Mr. Frink took a deep interest in these meetings and he liked the experience of being called Deacon of "Hallelujah avenue," Scott Hill. He had always had good health. He cast his ballot at the recent fall election.

The Goshen Sunday school had a pleasant Christmas entertainment Christmas eve (Wednesday). There was a pleasing program of Christmas songs and recitations. At 8.30 o'clock Santa Claus appeared and extended his greetings and assisted in the distribution of the gifts from a handsome Christmas tree. A collection was taken for the Near East relief.

A Christmas turkey supper was enjoyed by a large number of friends and the family at the home of W. T. Curry Wednesday evening.

George L. Thomas of Norwich was home over Christmas.

A. J. Randall and family spent Christmas with friends in North Haven.

EAGLEVILLE

The day school and Sunday school held their Christmas exercises together last Friday night in the hall. There were recitations and songs by the younger children and a play by Mrs. Vinton's class of young men assisted by Misses Amy Tootell, Ruth Bradley and Pearl Thompson. The Christmas tree was prettily decorated and Santa Claus arrived with his pack, to the great delight of the children.

Mrs. Clark and Isaac Turner were married Tuesday morning by Rev. J. William Carpenter, at Mansfield Depot.

The schools of the town closed last Friday until January 5th.

Monday and Tuesday mornings were the coldest of the season, in this vicinity, the thermometer registering zero and 4 to 6 below.

F. M. Chadwick of Storrs visited Mr. and Mrs. James Green Tuesday.

124 BENEFICIARIES NAMED IN HUGE CHRISTMAS GIFT

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 25 (By the A. P.)—A Christmas gift of a possible value of between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 was announced here today.

William McClellan Ritter, of Washington, D. C., formerly of Columbus and founder of the W. M. Ritter Lumber company, the executive offices of which are here, is turning back to 124 beneficiaries, most of whom are employes of the company, approximately one-fourth of the capital stock of the corporation that bears his name. Plans for distribution of the stock were completed by him last night.

The stock will be held under a trust agreement for the beneficiaries, but the gift is without restrictions. The trust will be executed when those who will share in it meet in regional gatherings on Saturday.

Of the list of beneficiaries, 94 are officers and employes of the company. The balance of the list includes relatives and close personal friends of Mr. Ritter.

About 50 Knights Templar, members of Narragansett Commandery, of Westerly, gathered in their asylum on High street, Christmas noon, to pay homage to Grand Master Leopldas Perry Newby, of Knightstown, Ind., under direction of Commander Arthur E. Thompson. Sentiments, toasts were given and appreciation was expressed to ranking officers and grand bodies, from whom responses were received as well as to Columbian Commandery of Norwich, Palestine of New London and Calvary of Providence. Sir Knight and Hon. Samuel H. Davis gave a short talk along the lines of Christmas Templar Masonry.

Silent tributes of respect were paid to members who have died during the templar year, Joseph Briggs Weldon, of Grayatone, R. I., January 23; Eugene Burrows Pendleton, July 24, and Howard Rich Tucker, of Wakefield, R. I., September 29.

ARTHUR D. REMINGTON DIES SUDDENLY THURSDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Westerly, Dec. 25.—The death of Arthur D. Remington occurred suddenly Christmas morning at his home, 87 Dartmouth avenue, Providence, from heart failure. He was born May 24, 1873 the son of Rev. and Mrs. Remington, passing his boyhood days in Providence. For a period of twelve years he made his home in Westerly, when he was a towerman in the employ of the New Haven railroad, first at the signal tower in Stonington, going from there to New London, to return later to the Stonington tower. From there he was promoted to the despatcher's office in Providence at which post he lacked but two years of being put on the retired list.

He was a member of Franklin lodge, No. 20, F. and A. M., of Westerly, joining in 1901 and was its master in 1909. He was a member of Benevolence chapter, R. A. M., of Mystic and a past high priest there, also holding membership in Mystic council, No. 29, R. and S. M. Other Masonic affiliations were Calvary Command of 13, K. of T., of Providence, Rhode Island Consistory and a member of Palestine Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

Besides his wife he is survived by a younger brother, George, of California, also a brother, H. A. Remington, in Bridgeport.

JEWETT CITY

Christmas day in the borough was one of quiet celebration of the merry Yuletide season, with evidence all about of plant, health and peace. To the stranger and the visitor within its gates, the borough extended the gladhand of cheer and welcome. During the two hours before sunrise the Weather Man came along and changed the green to white, giving many a glad hearted boy, with his first new sled, a good and reasonable excuse to visit the snow-clad hills round about the borough.

At ten minutes before noon, a great army biplane passed over the town. The pilot must either have scented the roasting birds, or have been impressed with the abounding cheer, for he tipped his altitude planes, and dropped so low that he barely cleared St. Mary's spire as he soared off to the north.

The snow of Christmas morning brought around the first hungry flock of juncoes to their back yard boards, looking for their accustomed winter hand-outs. A piece of suet tied to a tree outside the window, will serve to furnish much entertainment, when visited by such feathered acrobats as the chickadees, nuthatcher and wood-peckers.

Deputy Game Warden William R. Palmer, also the dog warden for the town of Griswold, is authority for an unusual story. Somewhat back from the Stone Hill road above Hopeville, near the one-time Charles Wilkerson farm, and within the borders of Griswold, is Spy Rock. The local fame of Spy Rock, itself, is considerably augmented by the ancient burying ground that lies almost forgotten close below the shadow of the great ledge. Not a little of the local interest in this secluded spot, is derived from the fact that here, sleeping among his kin, lies all that is mortal of the famous Winter Green, a veteran of long forgotten wars. Last Monday, Chester Geer, who lives nearby, was out looking for a possible fox track. When passing Spy Rock his attention was arrested by the appearance of a long muzzle, with a pair of wild looking eyes, peering from a sort of cairn, well up on the side of the great rock. Retiring to a more secure point of vantage, Mr. Geer waited and watched. Soon an animal appeared on the shelf of the ledge. First discovering that it was a dog, and then that it was a female, he lost no time in notifying Game Warden Palmer. The two men later visited the rock, but by no sort of maneuvering could they come near the mother. Mr. Palmer wormed himself into the den, Gen. Putnam fashion, and brought forth three handsome pupies, which now per force of circumstances will have to be raised on the bottle.

The parochial and public schools of the town accomplished the sale of 6,000 Christmas seals by their combined solicitation with 2,800 credited to the latter.

The Baptist Sunday Christmas exercises and tree were held on Wednesday evening. There were recitations by Florence Bliven, Earle Gilbert, Jr., Chester Sweet, Marian Wilbur, Raymond Cathcart and Arthur tripp, Mildred Gilbert and Marian Wilbur and Amy Palmer sang solos. An exercise, "I'll Play That I'm a Star," was given by Robert Scates, Marian Wilbur, Herman Tripp and Emily Mager. An exercise, Evergreen Tree, was given by the Primary department assisted by Jennie Mager and Ruth Cathcart. A trio was sung by Janie Mager, Ruth Cathcart and Mildred Gilbert, Winifred Scates and Doris Carpenter sang a duet. An exercise, Burning the Christmas Stocking, was given by Arthur Gray and William Brewster, Florence Quimby's class gave exercise Silver Bells. Lemuel Green impersonated Santa Claus.

Mabel Frink, Winifred Scates, Florence Quimby and Ellen Prior also participated in the exercises.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peterson and son, Lawrence, and Miss Madeline Raill are spending the week end in Killingly, with Mrs. Peterson's father, Rev. Charles Green.

Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Driscoll entertained on Christmas a party of twenty-two including their children and grand-children, coming from Westerly, Plainfield and Jewett City.

Mrs. Ellen Paul and Dorothy Paul are guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Strickland's, in Middletown.

The midnight mass at St. Mary's church Thursday morning was attended by about twelve hundred people. As the time came for the service the church was in complete darkness, only a star shinging above the altar. Then the candles were lighted, and the lights were gradually turned on, giving a most solemn effect to the service. Rev. James J. Tyler celebrated the mass and Rev. John J. McCabe gave a talk on the meaning of the Jubilee Year. The altars were beautifully decorated with flowers donated by the various societies of the church. The seats and aisles were crowded with devout worshippers.

Christmas guests at E. F. Burleson's are Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Burleson and son, of Schenectady, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Meyer of New Britain and Miss Hallie Burleson, of East Orange, N. J.

George Leyden is at home for a few days from Hollis, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Dona Ballou spent Christmas day at Mr. and Mrs. John Jordan's, in Norwich.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Robinson and son, Earl, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Robinson, in Boston.

NUMBER FIVE

boughs and spread to the dry wood of the flimsy structure, broke for the single exit at the rear, a mad, scrambling mob fleeing from the leaping terror at their heels.

Ever window in the one-room building was covered by a heavy woven wire netting, bolted solidl to the casement, placed there to keep out prowlers. Frantically the trapped men and women battered at the obstructions. Glass shattered from each window and the wind whistled in, creating a heavy draft and fanning the greedy flames, but no means of egress for the trapped celebrants was gained.

Many fell in the crush at the door and were trampled underfoot. Lying where they fell, unable to crawl away, many bodies were incinerated.

More than 40 persons were injured, some of them seriously. Local hospitals and residences today housed 27, and an unknown number were taken to the homes of residents of the Babb's Switch district.

About 200 persons were packed in the small schoolroom when the Christmas tree burst into flames. Men near the front of the building tried to smother the fire and in their haste knocked the tree over, aiding the progress of the blaze and scattering burning branches over the floor. The dry floor caught like tinder and it was at once apparent that, with no means at hand to fight the fire, the building was doomed. Snow and ice which coated the roof and walls did little to check the flames.

Those who succeeded in getting out turned rescuers to those who were injured in the scramble, and several automobiles were used to bring the first of the injured here. A telephone call from a farmhouse mobilized in a few minutes a motor caravan that labored slowly over the icy roads to the secluded little district. As the injured were brought in, women of the city organized a volunteer nursing staff and first aid treatment was given each victim. Doctors of the city swung into line and in a brief interval the injured were being given medical attention.

With the injured removed, the grim task of recovering the dead was undertaken by Sheriff T. H. Shaddock and a force of deputies. As the embers cooled in the 10 above zero temperature the sheriff's force brought out body after body, many of them pitifully small. The loss of life among the children was heavy because they were grouped around the Christmas tree in the front of the building and were farthest from the door.

A hearse and truck arrived from Hobart amid the confusion attending the efforts of frantic persons to find missing members of their families, and the first of the bodies recovered were taken to a Hobart mortuary.

At a mass meeting today, called by the mayor, committees were named to look after every detail of the identifications. Work was going ofrward systematically.

All the unidentified will be buried in one large grave in the Hobart cemetery. Later today a crew of men broke the snow that blanketed the burial ground, to throw up a long trench of earth.

Early tonight only ten of the dead had been identified, despite the fact that the morgue was early thrown open to the public. A steady procession of grief-stricken relatives filed all day long between the shrouded forms, but so terribly had they been burned that recognition in most cases was impossible.

Among those who have been identified is the family of T. C. Coffey, a farmer living near the Babb's Switch school. Six bodies, those of the father, mother and four little ones, have been placed by themselves in the corner of the room. Survivors tell how the family, standing in the center of the blazing schoolroom, every means of escape cut off, threw their arms about one another and in a last gesture of devotion fell together into the inferno as the blazing rafters, loosed from the roof, struck them down.

There, too, in a place apart, is the body of Mrs. Florence Hill, teacher at the school, who might have escaped had she not made a futile attempt to find some avenue of escape for her little charges. A woman from Fort Worth, formerly Juanette Clemmons, of the Babb's Switch district, her 8 year old daughter Mary and Jackson complete the list of identified dead.

TRAGEDY AT HOBART, OKLA., RECALLS COLLINWOOD FIRE

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 25.—The Hobart, Okla., tragedy recalls the Collinwodo school fire, March 4, 1908, in which 172 pupils between 6 and 14 years old and two teachers lost their lives in twenty minutes.

The Collinwood fire, caused by overheated pipes igniting timbers in the three-story brick building, started soon after the day's studies began.

The children, after starting an orderly exit when an alarm was sounded, became panicky at sight of flames and in the ensuing rush for an exit one child stumbled at the foot of a narrow stair. Soon a mass of children six feet high were piled at the door, which opened inward. Rescuers, unable to break down the door, broke its glass, but so tightly were the victims wedged that none could be pulled out.

MUOSSOLINI'S PROPOSAL FOR ELECTORAL REFORM

Rome, Dec. 25.—(By the A. P.)—Premier Mussolini has made a declaration to the various fascist deputies regarding reports in circulation on his recent election announcement, according the the Messagero.

"You who know me," said Mussolini, "realise the absurdity of certain fairy tales attributed to me, for which I am not responsible it is not my habit to make compromises with anyone. I do not need to make a compromise with Signor Salandra, who has not quit the majority. Who else? With Giolitti? I have spoken with him once only, when during the discussion of the present electoral law he asked whether I supported a quorum of fifty or twenty-five, and I replied in favor of twenty-five.

"I proposed electoral reform on my own initiative. It is not connected with my aims suggested in more or less had faith by my adversaries. It is part of a plan of reform which I have in mind and which I intend to carry out from time to time independently of the dreams of my adversaries. It was necessary to announce suddenly what has been called Saturday's "thunderbolt" because of the secrecy maintained previously, but that does not mean that it was not profoundly considered. I even forecast it some time ago. It will be approved whether the Aventine opposition comes in or not, and elections will be carried out under me, though it will be impossible to do that immediately. I shall choose a suitable moment, taking into account the con

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Danielson had as peaceful a holiday as has marked its history. It was a day of closed stores, silent mills and deserted streets. It was a day for home gatherings, for the exchange of gifts, for rest and happiness. There was nothing of the turmoil of the average business day about it and more of the restfulness about which one hears so much and sees so little.

There was only the best apparent in this town's observance of the great holiday. One would be searching indeed to find anything to quarrel about over the manner in which this place observed the holiday.

The day here was on the whole a demonstration of the fact that there is a great joy for those who will seek it in other channels than those that open off the primrose path. Danielson might boast a bit, not that it was any more restrained in its observance than many other towns hereabouts, and point a moral to the national on how the feast of Christmas really should be observed.

After an illness considered serious for only a few days, John Weaver, 79, died Christmas eve at his home on the farm in Brooklyn, at the northerly extremity of Day street, where he had lived for many years. Mr. Weaver had been in a semi-conscious state during the greater part of this week and the end came peacefully, as befitted one who had lived so well and who came to death on the eve of the great festival day of the year.

Mr. Weaver, a native of Ireland, came to this country as a young man, a tower of strength and vigor. During the early years of his residence here he was employed at the yard of the Quinebaug Brick company, then doing a thriving business in the town of Brooklyn, but the plant many years since abandoned on account of the difficulty of obtaining clay.

Having accumulated through industrious application to his duties the funds necessary for the purchase Mr. Weaver acquired the farm place where he has since lived and labored in his pastoral calling. Mr. Weaver showed the same ceaseless devotion to industry on his farm that had marked his activities in his earlier years so, when the infirmities of age necessited relaxation from his usual activities.

Mr. Weaver was a man of great and liberal heart and good will toward his fellowmen. He was generous to a degree, won a host of friends and well wishers and all of these will share with his family the sorrow induced by his death.

Mr. Weaver leaves his wife, three sons, Thomas, John and Henry, all resident in Brooklyn, and a daughter, Mary, who is assistant chief operator at the Danielson central telephone office.

He was one of the oldest members of St. James' parish.

Miss Helen Hopkins of Pratt institute, Brooklyn, N. Y., is with her prents, Mr. and Mrs. Burdette C. Hopkins for the holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Brundage were at Hartford to spend Christmas.

Eunice Albright Scriven, violinist and whistler, is to entertain the members of Killingly Woman's club when they meet on New Year's day.

The presence of surveyors representing the state highway department gives promise of the building in the not distant future of the section of state highway so long desired between Elmville and East Killingly.

There is a probability that the Crystal Water company, which has recently completed the installation of new mains between Judd avenue and Elmville, will put in another new line of pipe through Mechanic street during the coming spring and summer

The through transportation lines through Danielson were not heavily burdened on the holiday, a day when the majority of people seemed to be all set as to where they wanted to be.

It may or may not be of general interest to the average person, but the fact remains that the water supply, which has been low since early fall, has not yet reached normal, a fact that is taken by some to indicate that the winter will be marked by heavy rains or snowstorms.

Warning that the use of 1924 numbers on automobiles owned and registered in this state will not be tolerated after next Wednesday are not escaping the attention of car owners and there will be a rush for registrations in the next few days. No registrations are issued at the police barracks in Danielson, though some are under that impression.

On the whole here buying for Christmas giving was declared Christmas morning by a number of business men to be very satisfactory. The rush continued right up to the hour of closing Wednesday night.

A congregation that tested the seating capacity of the church attended the midnight mass celebrated Christmas eve at St. Joseph's church in Dayville.

Herman M. Coulter of New Bedford spent the holiday here.

It was remarked by those who make a practice of observing such things that travel was unusually light through this territory on the holiday.

Today and tomorrow are the last days of the week's drive in Killingly, through the sale of tags in the interest of the Killingly High school alumni fund for a school gymnasium.

Appreciation was expressed on the holiday by beneficiaries of the fund for providing Christmas dinners for the needy of Danielson of what had been done by the generous to make a happy holiday for those who were remembered.

Recurring storms that make slippery highways are cutting out extra work for the state highway department crews to do in keeping hills sanded and raising the safety degree in travel at this time of year.

A number of members of Danielson Rod and Gun club found diversion during some of the hours of Christmas in shooting at targets at the club's traps in the Allen hill section.

There have been no developments here in poultry flocks to indicate that there is any need of worry over what has happened in the way of chickens dying off in droves, as has happened in some of the central and western states.

For New Years eve there is an elaborate program of dances and other diversions planned for Danielson and the majority of the surrounding communities. Dancing has been generally refrained from hereabouts during the past two weeks.

Attorney and Mrs. A. G. Bill were at New Rochelle, N. Y., to spend Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. William T. Mullaly.

And now the talk is all about New Year's, a little less than a week in advance.

Postmaster and Mrs. E. H. Keach were holiday guests of relatives in Providence.

It was a white Christmas after all, the snow that made this possible falling between 3 and 4 o'clock of Christmas morning.

John F. Lewis is en route to California, where he is to remain for a few weeks and then follow in a leisurely way an itinerary that will take him into the Pacific northwest and eventually back to Danielson, late in the winter.

This is one of the few remaining mornings of the declining year when the mail will be burdened with bills, bills, bills!

No public diversions marked the holiday in Danielson excepting the program provided for the performances at the theatre.

Mrs. John Lacas and a party of friends motored to Providence Christmas eve to attend the midnight mass at St. Patrick's cathedral in that city.

Business was unprecedented at the post office during the Christmas season. Every effort was made to deliver all arriving matter Christmas eve, but there will be some packages and letters, belated in arrival, for delivery today.

The police here found little to require their attention here over the holiday period, outside of the usual routine matters.

There will be a big crowd at the armory Saturday evening to see the effort of the Killingly High school Alumni team win a victory over the Service Battery five, which has been playing very consistently during the time since it opened its season.

There was a bit of skating and some sliding Christmas day for the youngsters who received skates or sleds for presents and were anxious to make the most of their gifts.

William Reimer of St. Alban's church was the soloist at the midnight services at Christ Episcopal church, Christmas eve.

Mrs. Nellie Brown of 20 Furnace street and William Reimer are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry R. Taft, of 18 Coit street, Norwich, over the holidays.

PUTNAM

At the Day Kimball hospital there was Christmas cheer for all the patients who were physically able to enjoy it, and Miss Bloxham, the matron, and her staff made as much of the day as possible. There was a large Christmas tree in the east ward on the first floor. For every one in the institution there was one or more gifts and the children were paid especial attention, as far as possible the little patients getting what they desired. Quentin Daigle, aged 4, who was operated on for appendicitis a few days before the death of his father, John B. Daigle, was overwhelmed with remembrances, many of them of a substantial nature. At noon a turkey dinner was served, the following providing the funds for the special menu: Miss Helen McKeever and Charles F. Swain, of Pomfret, Miss Constance Holt and Miss Sylvia Holt of Woodstock, William Roberts of East Putnam, St. Monica's Guild, Pomfret, and the woman's board of the hospital.

Miss Elizabeth Smith of South Main street entertained her Sunday school class at a Christmas party at her home. Games were played, refreshments were served and a Christmas tree was enjoyed.

Otto Smith, sub-master at the Putnam High school, is spending his vacation at his home in Dorchester, Mass.

Miss Hannah Pease, sewing teacher at the Putnam High school, is spending the Christmas vacation at the home of her parents in Anson, Me.

Miss Natalie Dion, a teacher at Israel Putnam school, has gone to New York to spend the vacatoin.

Miss Inez Klebert of South Main street is spending the week with her brother, Mark Klebert and family at Webster, Mass.

At a meeting of the board of assistants of the Society of Mayflower Descendants in the state of Connecticut, which was held at the home of the secretary, Mrs. George B. Kingsbury in Hartford, last week, Mrs. Silas M. Wheelock was appointed a member of the historical and research committee and Mrs. Mary Bishop, a member of the recruiting committee. Governor-elect Hiram Bingham presided at this meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sherefs spent Christmas with relatives at Fitchburg, Mass.

Dr. and Mrs. Karl T. Phillips and son Robert spent Christmas with Mrs. Phillips' parents at Amesbury, Mass.

A Christmas for the beginners, primary and junior classes of the Sunday school of the Congregational church was held in the gymnasium rooms of the church Tuesday afternoon. Games and stories were first on the program, after which there was a large Christmas tree, with a Santa Claus who brought a gift, a bag of candy and an orange to every child present.

Guy Zito, a Putnam taxi-driver, established a new Putnam bowling record when he rolled 201 on Vandale's alley last week. He smashed the record of 193 held by himself. In his record string Zito had six spares, three strikes, and a nine box.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Long are spending the holidays with Mr. Lang's sister, Mrs. George Twigg on King street. Mr. Lang is a consulting construction engineer and is now located at Santa Cruz, Cal.

PLAINFIELD

Christmas was celebrated in many ways in the villege. Every one seemed filled with the Christmas spirit and many joyous parties were held.

On the hill a fiery cross was touched off by the one hundred per cent. Americans at nine o'clock, Wednesday evening, and many of the prominent local members were present. Automobile numbers of cars parked on the highway were taken for future reference. It was a sight to behold, something which certainly did show the Christmas spirit of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men."

At the solemn high midnight mass celebrated Christmas at St. John's church all seating and standing room was taken. The church was filled to the doors, as practically the whole town attended the mass. The Holy Name society received holy communion in a body. The choir sang the beautiful Christmas carols and was accompanied by two local boys with violin and 'cello. The pastor, Rev. Father Richard P. Morrissey, wished the people of his parish a very merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year, it was a service that will be remembered by the people for many years to come.

A big Christmas tree beautifully decorated with colored bulbs, and other trimmings, in front of the Crandall Mill Corporation plant, was illuminated all night Wednesday. Exercises were held in Moosup Wednesday night.

A Christmas tree celebration was held for the children of St. John's parish, at the Holy Name society hall Wednesday afternoon. Two hundred and twenty-five children were present. Master Henry Burby brought in Santa Claus. Candy, fruit and other gifts were presented the children.

Many local boys who have been out of town for the past year have returned home to enjoy the holidays with their parents, among them are John Nolan of Long Branch, Lawrence Burby of Washington, D. C., Theodore Pattier of New York, Leo Dayon new of the coast guard service, and many others.

The trains Wednesday were loaded with travelers coming to visit friends in Plainfield, or going elsewhere. Mr and Mrs. Fred Provost and family spent the day with relatives in Jewett City. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Beckett have spent the week with relatives in New York city, Thomas Connell spent the day in Lawrance, Mass.

There was three inches of snow on the ground Christmas morning.

OYSTER STEW BURNS FATAL TO BABY GIRL

Cestem, Mass., Dec. 25.—Dorothy Pupkar, 3, died today at City hospital from burns received yesterday when she upset an oyster stew at her home. The child was perched on a chair watching her mother prepare the noonday meal. She lost her balance and in the fall knocked the pan of stew from her mother's hands and the hot liquid spilled over her body.

AUTOS AND RIPPERS.

Not the first, but one of the serious accidents of the coasting season is reported from Turners Falls, Mass., where a double ripper carrying eight, crashed into an automobile with the result that three were sent to the hospital and the others managed to get home to have their injuries cared for. The automobile was being driven along an intersecting street and neither the driver nor the one steering the ripper was able to avoid the collision.

This is one of the great perils connected with coasting in the public highways or in streets where traffic is likely to be encountered on cross roads. No auto driver, no motorman and no steersman is going to figure in such a crash for the excitement that is involved. It cannot be overlooked that such accidents have occurred in the past and can be expected in the future unless restrictions are established and enforced which will prevent coasters and vehicular traffic from meeting.

Conditions in the highway are far different from what they were a quarter of a century, or even a decade ago. Fast moving traffic must be figured on. Allowance must be made for a greater volume of travel and it is in the streets that the vehicles are expected to be found.

Perhaps coasting on streets which cross others might be likened to the railroad crossing where trains do not stop and where too many users of the highway at such a point are not disposed to slacken speed. Many get by under such conditions without accidents but when there is a collision death invariably occurs and there is a general disposition to deplore the failure to show due respect for such death traps.

If anything the street intersecting the one used for coasting is even worse, for there is no warning signal, no signboard and no flagmen to inform the cross road traffic.

HOW BRITISH FIGHT CRIME.

From time to time this country enters into a discussion of the crime that is being committed and on such occasions attention is invariably directed to the records established in the larger centers and particularly to the many instances where either the accused go free or there is no solution reached as to who was responsible.

Because on such occasions there is reference to the manner in which law enforcement and prosecutions are carried out in England it is interesting to note that there were only 327 automobiles stolen in London last year and of that number there were 262 recovered. That must make New York sit up and take notice. But even Detroit where it is claimed that 67 autos have been stolen in a day will look with envy upon the results obtained across the water. Let the fact that London has fewer autos than New York or other American cities go for what it will there can be no dodging the real meaning of the English results.

Concerning the London police the Times of that city says, "There were 10,561 cases of indictable offenses during 1923, as against 15,979 in 1922, a decrease of 5,00. While there was a decrease in burglary, shopbreaking and larceny, there was an increase in housebreaking, counterfeit coining and embezzlement. There were 27 cases of alleged murder of persons above one year of age, as against 23 in 1922. No cases of unsolved murder occurred during the year."

How often could it be said of New York that there was a murder only about once in two weeks and "no unsolved murder during the year"?

London puts up the same claim of a shortage of police, some being obliged to cover two or three beats, that American cities do, but for what they have the record of accomplishment in dealing with criminals indicates that there may be several lessons learned by a study of English methods.

FIGHTING OPIUM.

Bishop Brent went to Geneva as an enthusiast for the world control of opium through the influence of the league of nations with this and other nations cooperating. He was unmistakably disappointed with the results obtained at Geneva. He was discouraged insofar as the recent conference was concerned but he has hopes of eventual success, thoroughly realizing that it means an uphill fight in the bringing of some of the nations to a realization of the part they should play in the ending of this evil as a contribution to world betterment.

The efforts that were made at Geneva to include in the agreement a clause that would have made it possible for government that desired to dodge the restrictions failed because it was clearly intended to provide a loophole as big as a barn. When the meaning became apparent all chance for support was lacking, and all hope of getting anywhere at the conference was manifest.

It is the belief of Bishop Brent that a favorable outlook is faced at the conference scheduled for the twelfth of next month at Geneva, at which time consideration will be given to the American proposals that call for the gradual restriction of opium production over a period of ten years at the end of which time production will be limited to such an amount as is required for medicinal and scientific purposes.

There can be no gainsaying the fact that there is certain to be encountered plenty of opposition to any move that will interfere with the opium business. There will be an opportunity to set forth the merits of substituting other things in the place of poppy celebration but the argument of the bird in the hand being worth two in the bush can be well anticipated. In international restrictions lie the best means of checking the opium traffic but the goal is going to be reached only after the most persistent efforts and a refusal to give up at the first rebuffs.

LENIENCY OR PROTECTION.

There are times when leniency is justified and when it is appreciated. There are also times when the opposite is true. There are cases where leniency is open to the interpretation of giving encouragement to criminal inclinations, and yet there are those who figure that nothing should be done that would help to turn youthful criminals from their indicated course.

This last named situation is emphasized by the action of a Chicago lawyer in asking a judge to bring in the officials of the Chicago crime commission for contempt of court because the commission had dared to urge that the cases of two young prisoners be brought to the attention of the grand jury. The very thought of having the two concerned treated any differently than others have been, even though their conduct warrants the abandonment of the policy of leniency, seems to have thrown one legal mind into a frenzy. Those who proposed such a course should be punished. There's no reason to think that the young prisoners need more restraint than they have been getting, or that their opportunities to continue to commit crime should be curtailed.

No help was given to the lawyer's plea by the fact that the two young prisoners made their escape from custody of the officers upon leaving the court room. Such is probably being justified on the ground that they never ought to have been arrested because of their age, but with the great amount of crime that is being committed in Chicago the people of that city have reason to wonder whether leniency toward the criminals or protection of the public is deserving of the greater consideration.

RADIO PROGRAMMES.

In connection with radio and the efforts on the part of some to get a better grade of programmes, various suggestions have been made with the idea in view having owners of radio sets pay a certain fee or of placing a tax on the manufacturers of radio instruments. It has also been urged that a tax might be collected at the time of sale of radio sets and accessories for the purpose of meeting this requirement.

As far as any voluntary contributions by radio users are concerned there could be no objection. Good use could probably be made of what they might give, but the difficulty and the impossibility of causing those who tune in to pay a certain fee is fully recognized. The idea of a tax on the instruments and accessories would of course reach the most of the radio fans in time and would serve to meet the expense that is involved in providing programmes, or in bettering them. It is however one of those things which it is easier to suggest than to carry out. It doesn't appear that the manufacturers or the dealers would be willing to be the goat in such a proposition, make the collections and turn the proceeds over to others.

Radio is making friends every day and of course there is a demand for the many features which it furnishes. Quite naturally the plea for better programmes comes from certain enthusiasts. It is so concerning all forms of entertainment, and the time will come when some plan will be worked out for obtaining it, but the method of getting a general participation therein, or requiring all who might partake of the better things to pay, has not as yet been set forth.

COMPLICATED LIFE

"Would you marry me if I were the prince of Wales?" desperately demanded the persistent young man, who had just been told no for the seventh time by the same girl.

"Oh, dear me!" sighed the harassed young woman, shaking her head with great energy. "Less than ever, Harold. If you're aiming to be popular with me don't take the trouble to go and be a prince or anything like that. I think Davy Windsor is perfectly grand and a fine young man and I wish him well—but I wouldn't marry him, not even if they chloroformed me first.

"Why, if that boy turns around twice instead of once they get out special editions and seek learned men to give their opinions on what this may signify, and if not, why not. He might just as well live inside a microscope lens with the world's eye glued onto the other end. And they'll be just as interested in his wife.

"If she accidentally brushes her left eyebrow crooked, then next day all over the world from Iceland to Patagonia feminine life eyebrows will be worn with a fatal twist—and the more I think of it the more I realize what priceless pearls obscurity and privacy are.

"When I'm in a hurry to get to some place I just jam my hat down over my hair, swish the powder puff across my countenance and flop my coat around my mussed-up linen dress, stepping out with the consciousness that I present a chic not to say stunning appearance to the populace. Could I do that were I the princes of Wales? They'd put me in the tower of London or behead me or something, and you know it!

"Then thousand patriotic eagle eyes are counting the stitches on each finger of my gloves were I royalty and they note that there is a pin prick one inch distant from where I've mistakenly put in my hatpin.

"I'll bet the prince plays a game I used to play when I was a child and my mother dressed me to places I didn't want to go. I smiled dutifully and spoke sweetly to Mrs. Dubbs and Mrs. Fluff and Mr. Hoots and Mr. Inkwell, and all the time inside my head I was calling them all the hard names I could think of and telling them what I really thought of them! It was perfectly fascinating.

"Well," sighs the prince when he wakes up in the morning an dhis dutiful secretary scurries to his bedside, 'how many corner stones are there today, Simmons? Only nine? Well, well, building must be on the decline, all right! Do I get time today to go to that little restaurant we heard of where they serve such marvelous ham and eggs? Doggone—I'd forgotten I ad to lunch with the Associated Amalgamation of First Sons' Step-Children today. Well, the ham and eggs are off, then. I'm afraid I'll never taste 'em! Do you suppose I can make the matinee where that spiffy-looking girl is playing—huh? Three bazaars to open, a board meeting and two charity teas before dinner? That ends the matinee."

"And his wife would have to work just at hard. It takes an iron constitution to be royal. A bricklayer. A bricklayer or ditch dipper has unlimited freedom and leisure compared with them. If I decide I'm too tired to go to a tea fight I just don't go, and have a lovely time with the last novel and a box of candy, but the princess of Wales can't cut entertainments where she's expected without ministries crashing, unions using dynamite and Buckingham palace shaking on its foundations.

"In fact, I expect that when the prince knows he no longer can put off the evil day and looks about for the traditional millstone around his neck he's going to have quite a time locating a wife. Girls read the newspapers these days and think twice, and any smart young woman, be she born in a palace or on Maple street, Centerville, is going to be reluctant about relinquishing her right to wear out her old party dresses around the house mornings and keep her hair in curlers until noon if she wants to without having the prime minister call and point out that she is endangering the dynasty. So you see, Harold—"

"Well, I see I've et to think up something else," sighed the persistent young man. "This certainly is a tough job!"—Exchange.

Penney, Sage Brush Storekeeper

In the dreary sage-brush country of Wyoming, J. C Penney made his third start in the business world. He had been a clerk in larger places and now with his small capital he had to sacrifice and work and plan to make both ends meet in crude Kemmerer with its few hundred inhabitants.

Back in Hamilton, Mo, where he was born, his father was a minister and his family lived on a farm nearby. Seventh of 12 children, the boy attended public school and helped in the fields.

Quitting school at 19 he went to work in a general store, where he hustled from sun up to sundown, washing windows and doing other odd jobs. At the end of 11 months his total pay was $25. The next year he received $200 and the third year $300. Then his health failed and he had to seek a better climate.

Starting over again near Denver he continued to clerk. Soon afterward he was married. By the hardest kind of self-sacrifice he saved $500. Borrowing 1500 more he bought a third interest in the clothing store at Kemmerer.

To save money Penney and his wife lived over the store and used dry goods boxes for furniture. In five years he paid off his indebtedness and bought a little home. Then came further sacrifices and saving, and he bought out his partner.

By working long hours in the store and planning at night he conceived the idea of having many partners. Encouraging a young man he had trained to open another store in a town nearby he furnished the capital and made the new recruit a partner owning a third interest in the new store. Other workers were urged to train and help back their employees in opening still more Golden Rule" stores. Soon Penney dropped out of that particular chain and developed another started by a manager he had trained.

So successful was the idea that the J. C. Penney Co., became a $15,000,000 corporation with nearly 600 stores in all parts of the country. Penney is president and is rich. His office is in New York and he has a home in that city and another home in Florida.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Joseph W. McIntosh, who has been named by President Coolidge to succeed Henry M. Dawes as Comptroller of the Currency, has filled the position of Deputy Controller for the past year and a half. He is a native of Illinois and gained his first practical experience in finance as a clerk in a country town bank in Nebraska. After adding to his experience in similar positions in other places he secured a position as a department manager with Armour & Co., in Chicago. By this time his ability in handling big problems in business and finance began to attract attention and his services were requisitioned in straightening out the affairs of several large concerns that had become financially involved. Mr. McIntosh served in the World War, in France, Italy and the Balkans and rose to the rank of colonel. In 1920 he was appointed Director of Finance of the Emergency Fleet Corporation and continued to fill that position until he became Deputy Controller of the Currency.

		DOUBLE-FACED Number	List Price
{Bohème—Musetta's Waltz (Puccini) In Italian / Bird Waltz (Valse d'oiseau) (Varney) In French}	Lucrezia Bori / Lucrezia Bori	1053	$1.50

Musetta's charming waltz from "La Bohème," beautifully sung; and the "Valse d'oiseau," with its delicious carollings and bird-pipings.

{Novelette (Schumann) Piano Solo / Prelude in D Flat Major (Chopin) Piano Solo}	Vladimir De Pachmann / Vladimir De Pachmann	6480	2.00

Under this master hand the Schumann "Novelette" seems to glow, to ebb and flow with color. The "Prelude" is one of Chopin's loveliest, with a haunting melody infinitely tender.

Rosamunde—Overture (Schubert) / Rosamunde—Entr'acte (Schubert)	Mengelberg and N. Y. Philharmonic Orchestra	6479	2.00

For an explanation of his great popularity, one need go no further than these two beautifully melodious selections from Schubert's "Rosamunde." Some of his happiest moments are immortalized in this record.

Melodious Instrumental

{W. Freeland Kendrick—March (Kendrick) / Heroes All—March (Kendrick)}	Victor Band / Victor Band	19423	.75

Two stirring marches for the brass band in full military style. The composer's own brilliant trumpet is heard in them.

Light Vocal Selections

{The New School Teacher / Clancy's Minstrels}	Avon Comedy Four / Avon Comedy Four	35750	1.25

Clever and snappy sung-and-spoken records by these rapid-fire comedians and "close-harmony" singers. Each one is a turn right out of vaudeville.

{Mandy Make Up Your Mind (from "Dixie to Broadway") / Red Hot Mamma}	The Brox Sisters / The Brox Sisters	19510	.75

These favorite artists have two new songs of the cutest type. Both are of the fox-trot order, sung to the piano, and the childish voices combine well, making excellent harmonies.

{I Want to See My Tennessee / Choo-Choo}	Billy Murray–Ed Smalle / Billy Murray–Ed Smalle	19516	.75

Homesick songs in the best current fox-trot manner. There is good harmony in both, and they are sung with vigor.

Dance Records

{Indian Love Call—Fox Trot (from "Rose-Marie") / Tell Her in the Springtime—Fox Trot (from "Music Box Revue")}	Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra	19517	.75

Two records which will encourage you to study the dance. They are set with the utmost splendor of which the American dance orchestra is yet capable.

{My Best Girl—Fox Trot / Put Away a Little Ray of Golden Sunshine for a Rainy Day—Fox Trot}	George Olsen and His Music	19518	.75

Nothing finer has been discovered, in the contemporary dances, than the standard, or two-step, fox trot. The first has one of the best "one-and-two" rhythms of recent dance numbers, and its companion is also played with spirit.

{Me and My Boy Friend—Fox Trot / Let Me Be the First to Kiss You Good-Morning—Fox Trot}	Dan Gregory's Orchestra / Jack Chapman and His Drake Hotel Orchestra	19519	.75

First Victor Record by an organization new to Victor audiences—a light brilliant fox trot played in masterly fashion. The companion number has a vocal refrain and lots of melody.

Stories That Recall Others

On a Diet.

Jennie was sitting on a log, which was on the hearth of the fireplace at her home one night recently.

On being questioned by her mother as to what she was doing and why she was so quiet the child answered: "I'm playing I'm on a diet."

When Jennie saw the misunderstanding frown on her mother's face she replied: "Isn't a diet a thing you're on where you don't eat anything to eat?"

The rest of the evening was spent in explanation.

Too Patriotic.

"Mother, make Jane stop singing."

This gentle command came for the second time from upstairs, where Jimmy and Jane were supposed to have been asleep.

"Jimmy, pay no attention to Jane. Be a little man and go to sleep," answered the mother.

"I am a man, mother. Jane keeps singing 'Star Spangled Banner' and every time I have to stand up."

Now He Can Go Back.

There was a meeting of the board of deacons of the church, including the new member. When the time came for such to be done appropriately the new member said:

"Thirty-four years ago in the small town where we lived, my mother took me to church at the age of six months. This was the first time and my father laughingly said: 'What are you taking him so early for? Going to make a deacon out of him?' Ever after and to this day, I am known to all the sundry in that town as 'Deacon,' and now, at last, I can justify that title.'"

Turtle Cleans Pipe

City authorities of Cantón, Mo., evolved a new system to clean out sewers. When one of the pipes became clogged a snapping turtle was caught and a rope tied to its tail. The turtle was released in the pipe and started for the other end at a lively gait—for a turtle—with 250 feet of rope attached to its tail. He made the first block in 45 minutes and proceeded on for two more blocks finally appearing at the other end of the pipe, still pulling the rope. The obstruction was removed and the trouble was over.

Imports of the fruit from the United States show that the British people are acquiring a liking for grapefruit.

Toothless Cow

A Drover bought a young cow in Strafford, N. H., for a very small price from a man who didn't know as much about a cow's anatomy as he now does. The drover claimed the animal was pretty ancient and declared that her upper jaw proved it, as she had lost all her teeth. The owner, not knowing that cattle never possess upper teeth, reluctantly agreed

LITTLE LOST PUP

He was lost—not a shade of doubt of that:
For he never barked at a slinking cat
But stood in the square when the wind blew raw
With a drooping ear and a trembling paw
And a mournful look in his pleading eye
And a plaintive sniff at the passerby
That begged as plain as a tongue could sue
"O, Mister, please may I follow you?"
A lone wee waif of a tawny brown
Adrift in the roar of a heedless town.
Oh, the saddest of sights in a world of sin,
Is a little lost pup with his tail tucked in!

Well, he won my heart (for I set great store
On my own red Bute—who is here no more).
So I whistled clear, and he trotted up,
And who so glad as that small lost pup?
Now he shares my board and he owns my bed,
And he fairly shouts when he hears my tread.
Then, if things go wrong, as they sometimes do,
And the world is cold, and I'm feeling blue,
He asserts his right to assuage my woes
With a warm, red tongue and a nice cold nose,
And a silky head on my arm or knee,
And a paw as soft as a paw can be.

When we rove the woods for a league about
He's as full of pranks as a school let out;
For he romps and frisks like a three-months colt,
And he runs me down like a thunderbolt.
Oh, the blithest of sights in the world so fair
Is a gay little pup with his tail in the air.

OBITUARY

Mrs. John Boylan

The death of Margaret Daly, widow of John Boylan, occurred at her home on Broadway, Wednesday evening after a short illness due to the infirmities of age. The deceased was born in County West Meath, Ireland, on January 2, 1843, the daughter of Patrick Daly and Ellen Murray and was married to John Boylan in Dublin, Ireland, on May 27, 1866.

Mrs. Boylan had been a resident of Norwich for over 30 years and was a devoted member of St. Patrick's church until ill health prevented her attendance.

She is survived by the following children, John J. Boylan of Providence, and Joseph P. and Miss Mary E. Boylan of Norwich, also four grandchildren of Providence. A wide circle of friends extend their sympathy to the family in the loss of a devoted mother.

Mrs. Eleanor Kirkup

The death of Mrs. Eleanor Kirkup occurred Thursday evening at 7.15 o'clock at her home at 161 Mt. Pleasant street. She was born in Scotland August 26, 1877, the daughter of John and Ellen Irving Elliott. Mrs. Kirkup is survived by her husband who is in Scotland and four sons, John William, of Scotland, David, Robert and Joseph of this city and three daughters, Mrs. Mary Meyers, Mrs. Irving Rankin and Miss Ellen Kirkup, all of this city.

Mrs. Margaret Vetter

Friends of Mrs. Margaret Vetter of 32 Sixth street were grieved to learn of her death Wednesday afternoon, after a serious illness of several weeks. Mrs. Vetter was born in Washington, Mass., but had been a resident of the Greeneville section of Norwich for the past 40 years. Her cheerful disposition made her good company and she was a lover of her home and devoted to her children. She was a devoted member of St. Mary's Memorial church and of the various societies connected with the parish. In her death her family has lost a beloved member and her many friends a loving companion.

She is survived by two sons, John C. Vetter of Providence, Eugene A. Vetter of Norwich and a daughter, Miss Marguerite Vetter, who lived at home.

HELD FAMILY REUNION WITH CHRISTMAS DINNER

A Christmas dinner party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Pendleton, 109 Franklin street. Dinner was served at 12 o'clock. Songs were enjoyed and lunch was served in the afternoon. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hoffman, Mrs. Louis Almind, Lawrence Hoffman and Andrew Hoffman, also the Misses Marion and Helen Pendleton, Benjamin Pendleton, Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Pendleton and Miss Annie Hoffman.

GIFTS AND DINNERS AT LOCAL INSTITUTIONS

Christmas was celebrated in every local institution the several "families" receiving visits from Santa Claus during the day, while hundreds of relatives and friends visited at the institutions during the day. Christmas activities began Wednesday evening at several of the hospitals and came to a close Thursday night.

OVER 3,500 ATTEND MIDNIGHT MASS AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH

St. Patrick's church seats comfortably, it is estimated—1,200 in the auditory proper, 600 in each gallery, besides a large number in the organ loft. Christmas eve, when midnight mass was celebrated, marking the opening of Holy Year at Rome, the center of the Catholic world, not only were pews filled, also more than a score of long settees brought from the Sunday school room in the basement chapel, but hundreds crowding the wide vestibule and massed out upon the entrance steps heard what they could of services and music. Others knelt in the sanctuary. The ushers, John B. Tarran, John P. Corcoran, William J. McKnight and Thaddeus Leahy, estimated the immense congregation at above 3,500. This parish numbers about 4,000 souls.

For twenty minutes before the hour of midnight, Organist Frank L. Farrell directed the splendid volunteer choir in a program of familiar carols and other Christmas hymns, Lang's string orchestra admirably supplemented the organ. The soloists were Mrs. Frank L. Farrell, Mrs. George Roberts, Miss Loretta Bellefleur, Frank C. Aubrey, Arthur McNamara, Frank R. Murdy.

Every light in the Gothic auditory was aglow. In the sanctuary were tall palms and the altar flowers were of delicate tints. The solemn high mass of thanksgiving was sung by the rector, Rev. Michael Henry May. Rev. John Reilly being deacon and Rev. Myles P. Galvin sub-deacon. The master of ceremonies was Raymond J. LaFontaine, a student at the Catholic university, Washington, and another student, Leo Sterck, of Illinois, was thurifer.

The choir gave a well balanced program including Kyrie and Gloria, Fenerali; Veni Creator, Brizzi; Credo, Durand; Adeste Fideles, Novello; Sanctus and Agnus Dei, Generali. While every number was sung with finish and harmony, perhaps the climax was the offertory, the Novello arrangement of the ancient Nativity hymn of the ancient church, Adeste Fideles, in which Frank R. Murdy gave the opening stanza. Members of the quartet took up the melody, which moved in majestic beauty, swelling at last into the grand chorus, summarizing in words and music the faith and the fervor of countless thousands gone before, as well as of other thousands in these latter days. "Deum verum, Genitum non factum," the identical hymn being voiced by millions throughout the entire world, with the coming of Christmas day. The impression left by the hymn, as well as by Mr. Farrell's own masterly arrangement of its setting as he played it earlier, was profound and moving. During all the service there was a judicious and effective use of the chimes which made the hours a delight to the soul, for it was 2 o'clock before the recessional sounded and the vast throng moved from the edifice.

The preacher, was Rev. Father Reilly, junior curate, who read the gospels for the first and second masses of Christmas day, Luke 2: 1-14, and Luke 2: 15-20, the narration of the circumstances attending the birth of the Redeemer. Eloquently the young preacher depicted the condition of the world as set for the advent of the Christ-Child—the Roman empire at peace with all nations, its eagles holding sway from the Tiber to the Danube, from the Nile to the Rhine. Then, in his vanity, Caesar Augustus issued the decree that every adult mortal in his wide domain must enroll; and obedient ever to the law, Joseph, humble, obscure, yet of the powerful House of David, went up to his own city, with Mary, his chaste spouse, that they might fulfil the decree.

The preacher recalled other pictures in Holy Writ which stand ever out in human memory—Adam and Eve leaving the garden after their disobedience, Cain, standing red-handed, following the murder of his brother; Abrnham, in patriarchial obedience, ready to sacrifice his beloved son if God's will required. But the picture which makes an indelible impression upon the minds of men is that of Bethlehem—a God for whom there was no room at the inn, who had to be born into this world outside the city, who was destined to die outside the city of Jerusalem. The speaker made the telling point that by far too large a proportion of the world today is keeping Christ outside—since He is shut from the hearts of men, in which He cannot abide because there, too, abides sin. Directing attention to the reproduction of the Crib at Bethlehem, at the gospel side of the high altar, Father Reilly exhorted his hearers to delay not—to straightway make place in their lives for the Divine Babe of Bethlehem, patterning their every act and thought and word upon His humility, gentleness and His love, embracing all mankind, sinners as well as just.

Then came the most amazing sight ever witnessed in any church in eastern Connecticut. Following the consecration, great lines of women and men moved with difficulty through the thronged aisles toward the sanctuary railing, where the three priests administered holy communion to hundreds after hundreds, who were putting into practical effect that welcome for the new-born Saviour enjoined by the preacher a few moments before. It was the best evidence of the enormous number of confessions which the hard-worked shepherds of souls must have heard during the previous day—a most convincing assurance to them that their labors are bearing fruit a hundred-fold; also that their people stand back of them and with them and for them, in all that is for God and His church.

Another proof of that was given during the service, at the offertory, collected by the two curates. This is the one personal offering which a parish makes yearly to its priests. Each curate was accompanied down the aisle by a collector, who received the overflowing baskets of envelopes in which the givers had enclosed their contributions toward the annual collection. The offering was another indication of the numbers, wealth and generosity of the members of this "cathedral church" of the eastern part of the state.

For the long lines of altar boys who assisted at the mass Father May had provided handsome new surplices of sheerest lawn, with black cassocks equally handsome. These boys showed the admirable training which they are receiving from the senior assistant, Rev. Myles P. Galvin.

At 7 o'clock Thursday morning low mass was read by Rev. Father Reilly, Father Galvin preaching a Christmas sermon. Father Galvin read the 9 o'clock mass, Father May preaching. The music, by the junior choir, directed by Miss Mary Bresnahan, organist, included: Little Town of Bethlehem; Adeste Fideles, Margaret Casey and choir; Silent Night, Holy Night, Marguerite Driscoll; Cavatina, violin solo, Agnes Bresnahan.

There was another high mass at 10.30, when the senior choir gave a pleasing program, including: Christmas Morning, Bartlett-Farrell; Kyrie and Gloria, Generali; Veni Creator, Webber; Credo, Durand; Venite Adoremus, Gilain; Sanctus and Agnus Dei, Generali; O Salutaris, Bohm; Tantum Ergo, Lavalle; Laudate Dominum.

Benediction followed the mass.

SAYS PEACE COMES THROUGH THE CROSS

Peace comes through the cross, said Rev. Leonel E. W. Mitchell, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, in his Christmas morning sermon at the church. The day's services opened with a midnight mass which was largely attended. Holy communion was held at 8 o'clock and at 10 o'clock there was morning prayer, holy communion and sermon by the rector. At the midnight mass the offertory was sung by Miss Amelia Erwin. At the 10 o'clock service the soloists were James Lockard, tenor, and Miss Amelia Erwin, soprano. A feature of the musical programme was a duet, I Will Magnify Thee, O God (J. Mosenthal) by Miss Erwin and Mr. Lockard. In his sermon Rev. Mr. Mitchell said:

On this day, in every Catholic church throughout western Christendom, the Gloria in Excelsis ascends from the hearts and lips of faithful Christians before the throne of God. Glorious words are these, so glorious that the church has been repeating them ever since that first Christmas. The shepherds were the first to hear them. They heard them sung by the angelic choir. They heard them but they did not understand the meaning of what they heard. They knew that somehow peace and good will would come on earth through the Babe who slumbered in Bethlehem's manger but how, they knew not. No one knew the secret that lay behind the angelic words, except perhaps the blessed mother. Many thought of conquest and blood, of divine revolutions and miraculous interventions, but none knew. The Gloria in Excelsis was then not a reality but a dream which somehow must come true. It came true on Good Friday. It took a Calvary to explain a Bethlehem, a cross to explain a manger. The Gloria in excelsis is meaningless apart from the idea of sacrifice. That is why the church as by divine intuition has incorporated into her liturgy this great angelic hymn. Only in the eucharistic sacrifice can we find its true meaning. There is written in letters bold and clear, the eternal message of our salvation—peace comes only through sacrifice, good will is bought with blood.

But have we really explained the Gloria in excelsis? We know out Lord died for the world but has it really done any good? Where is this peace on earth, where this good will towards men? Wars still continue in the world. Men still hate their brothers. No war was ever more brutal than the last, no hatred of man for man was ever more intense. If Christ really brought peace and love where is it found? If He did not, then let us have no more humbug. We are told that Christ was born to save the world from sin, yet sin is everywhere killing men in soul and body. Christ died for men but what of it? Men are not saved, the world is not redeemed, love is not set free.

Christ has not saved the world for in a certain sense He cannot save it. He can only make salvation possible. The atonement is not magic. God does not save men in spite of themselves but of themselves through Christ. God never forces Himself upon us He comes only at our request. We may accept or reject Him. From the manger to the cross God Himself points the way of peace and good will and we may go His way or leave Him to bear the cross alone. It is up to us. In a certain sense it is up to us as individuals, for each one of us must drive from him all taint of personal sin. In a larger sense, however, it is not a personal matter, for individuals are bound up with the race. We are all responsible for the sins of the world for we all consciously or unconsciously help to create conditions under which sin flourishes. We are all responsible for the sins of child labor, pig-sty tenements and wholesale murder and for individuals to talk of making their peace with God while such conditions remain is to talk nonsense. We are not clean while others wallow in filth. The sins of the world are ours to bear with Christ. He bears them now. He always bore them. There has always been a crucifix in God's heart. Even now the sacred heart of Jesus is bleeding for our sins. If we would follow Him we must share His sorrow. It all seems unfair, this business of bearing others' pain and it would be unfair did not God Himself suffer with us. We worship a suffering God, not an Almighty Potentate Who imposes upon man cruel and needless suffering, but the God of Love Who for us men and for our salvation came down from heaven to bear with us the suffering of the world. Through suffering, that is the way that peace must come.

Peace comes through the cross. The world does not like the cross and has never been saved because it has never dared try that way of salvation which is the only way. That is why after all these years the Gloria in excelsis remains for the world, an empty idle dream. Men have been content to dream when they should have worked. They have not been willing to pay the price. They have not understood the Christmas message of peace and so it has never effected their lives and they have not understood it because they have not cared to understand the Good Friday message that explains it. Christmas without Good Friday is sickly sentimentality. Gloria in excelsis shows God's purpose, Calvary His method. The two go hand in hand.

So then even this blessed feast has its cloud of sorrow. The merry Christmas wreath suggests a crown of thorns while in the bright red berries one sees the drops of precious blood. O'er the Babe of Bethlehem looms the shadow of the cross while o'er our lady's mother heart a sword of anguish wavers. Yet this is life. More than that it is man's life as lived by God and God's life as lived in man. Joy and sorrow go hand in hand and we must bear them both. The Catholic religion does not permit us to pick out the joyful and forget the sorrowful, to keep the feast and forget the fast. The Catholic faith all hangs together, each part explaining and depending upon every other part. The parts all fit together like the parts of a mosaic and give to us a picture of life as it should be by giving us the picture of the Son of God and blessed Mary, who was born in a manger, died on a cross, rose from the dead, and ascended into heaven. From that picture we are to pattern our own lives trying ever to build upon earth the kingdom of God wherein the Christmas hymn may forever ring true. Glory be to God on high, and on earth peace, good will towards men.

FULLY 2,000 COMMUNICANTS AT ST. MARY'S CHURCH

The privilege of attending a midnight mass on Christmas day was taken advantage of by a congregation of at least 2,000 communicants at St. Mary's Memorial church Wednesday at the midnight hour. The congregation attending greatly exceeded the expectations of Rev. William A. Keefe, the rector, who used all available space within the handsome church to seat the gathering but was forced to allow the people to sit within the sanctuary. Both vestries and alcoves were thrown open, while many knelt at the altar railing during the entire services, while others were forced to stand for the two-hour service. The high mass was sung by Dr. Patrick J. McCormick of the Catholic university at Washington, a son of the parish. The purple vestments worn during the Advent season gave way to old gold to denote the joyousness of the feast. An acolyte body of fifteen boys robed in their vestments escorted the celebrant of the mass to the foot of the altar. The altar decorations were choice cut flowers, red poinsettia and lighted candles, while palms and evergreen trees were at the main entrance to the sanctuary. The sermon for the day was preached by Rev. William A. Keefe, the rector, who took his text from the first gospel for Christmas day written by St. Luke and treated on the theme "Peace and good will toward men." The preacher said that the clarion call of peace issued in the pastoral letter of His Holiness Pius XI to mark the opening of the Holy year, for which privilege the midnight mass had been granted in this diocese, was being read and urged in every Catholic church in the world.

The virtue of holy purity was sounded as a warning note to dispel the unrest in the world today, reeking with divorce and destroying home and society. Mary, the mother of Christ, was portrayed as the exemplar of holy purity. Harmony was quoted as another source to show the spirit which should exist between employer and employed. In concluding, Father Keefe wished all cordial Christmas greetings and asked prayers for the dead of the parish who in their day strove to make the parish memorial church a reality.

Holy communion was given following the mass and about 500 communicants went to the altar railing to receive the sacraments from Dr. McCormick and Father Keefe. The congregation was larger by hundreds than that present at the opening of the new church in December, 1922. Working under Fr. Keefe's direction, the ushers assisting the congregation were John T. Sullivan, Patrick J. Sullivan, Cornelius J. Downes, Napoleon Lavoie and Joseph A. Donnelly.

The second low mass for the day was read by Fr. Keefe at 7.30, which also found communicants at the altar, as well as the 9 o'clock mass read by Rev. Frederick M. Cohalan.

The high mass at 10.30 was sung by Fr. Cohalan and the musical program of the midnight mass was repeated. Fr. Keefe read a low mass in the convent chapel for the nuns of the parish. It was a memorable day in parish history which found all told about 3,000 communicants receiving the blessings of the Christmas day masses.

The offering, as is always customary, went to the pastor and his assistant as a Christmas remembrance.

The Crib of Bethlehem erected at the shrine in the church, showing those present at the birth of the Saviour, attracted attention from the worshippers at each of the masses. The crib remains in place until Jan. 6th, the Feast of the Epiphany.

The musical portion of the midnight service was in keeping with the artistic standard for which St. Marys choir is well known. Preceding the mass Organist Henry La Fontaine gave the following delightful organ program, displaying the lovely tonal quality of the Estey instrument with fine effect. The programme:

Laudate Dominum	Kender
Shepherd Tale	Nevin
Prelude	Nevin
Offertory	Back
Holy Night	Adams

Service opened with the chorus singing of Silent Night, as the priest and acolytes moved in slow procession from sacristy to sanctuary.

The mass in honor of St. Philip Neri with its Gregorian themes was a splendid and altogether devotional setting for the mass liturgy.

The difficult harmonies and interweaving melodies were admirably interpreted by the choir whose singing was at all times thoroughly satisfying and artistic. Mozart's famous "Gloria in Excelcis Deo" from the Twelfth Mass, with its arresting rythm and glorious choral effects was an outstanding feature.

Jesu Bambino at offertory, was given in fine voice by Horace Corning, baritone; Miss Sadie Driscoll, soprano, singing an exquisite obligato to the subdued male chorus work.

The admirable singing of the solo-

LIGHT SNOWFALL ON CHRISTMAS MORNING

After a day of rain, when it looked as though Christmas would be a green one this year, Norwich people awakened Christmas morning to find the ground covered with a fine blanket of snow. Although adding greatly to the outdoor scenery for Christmas day the snow made travel dangerous for automobiles and pedestrians. Several narrow escapes from collisions were reported during the day from skidding on the ice coated roads.

BASKETS OF FRUIT FOR FORMER SERVICE MEN

Ex-service men at the Norwich state sanatorium were remembered Christmas day by Robert O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion and the Legion Auxiliary when large baskets of fruit were taken to the sanatorium and distributed by the Legion. John A. Cunningham, past commander of Fletcher post, was in charge of securing the baskets and personally distributed them.

MANY FAMILY REUNIONS HELD CHRISTMAS DAY

Christmas was observed in hundreds of local homes, Thursday, with family gatherings, bringing together once again parents and children and near relatives, who annually make the pilgrimage back home to spend Christmas with their parents.

Holiday Dinner Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Golkowske of Pratt street, had as dinner guests Christmas their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Golkowske and son William Graham Golkowske, of Whitneyville. The Golkowske family were guests over Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. Golkowske's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Pollard, of Taftville, having made the trip by automobile.

COLUMBIAN COMMANDERY HOLDS CHRISTMAS SERVICE

The annual Christmas observance of Columbian Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar, was held at the Masonic Temple, Thursday at noon. The Sir Knights assembled at 11.30 o'clock and the meeting was opened at 12 o'clock. Harry M. Ford, eminent commander, presided. The usual collection was taken and amounted to $96 which sum will be turned over to the tuberculosis sanatorium.

Toasts were given and sentiments expressed to the ranking officers and the higher organizations of the order. The following sentiment was expressed to Sir Leonidas Perry Newby, most eminent grand master:

On the occasion of this Christmas ceremonial, the last to be observed before the close of your official term as grand master, now nearing its end, the hosts of Knights Templar of the United States of America are assembled throughout the grand jurisdiction to extend to you their grateful approval for valiant service rendered and their good wishes for the future.

The call of the day is to service—service to country, service to others, service to that cause in which one is especially charged with responsibility.

During your term as grand master you have given without stint of your time, your talent and your strength to the service of Knight Templarism, and the worth thereof is attested by the accomplishments which mark this triennial period.

Peace and harmony have prevailed in the ranks and the spirit of Templar courtesy and patriotism has shown manifest enlargement, for which every true knight is genuinely thankful.

Our membership has materially increased.

The ceremonial work, the asylum tactics, and the equipment of individual Sir Knights have all shown very decided improvement.

The educational movement of the Grand Encampment has been put into action, the results whereof promise to be far-reaching and vital.

And the great principle of our profession—unselfish service to the needy, the afflicted, the oppressed and the sorrowing—has received new impulse, and is being more broadly demonstrated than ever before in "deeds of charity and pure beneficence."

These attainments proclaim the success of your administration as grand master, and your fraters of the Templar Knighthood extend their congratulations and express their sincere appreciation of the leadership and devotion which have realized these achievements; at the same time uniting in a fervent prayer that He who rules the destinies of nations and of men may grant to you, and to those near and dear to you, many years of health and strength, and an abundant measure of happiness.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SOCIAL AT GERMAN CHURCH

The annual Christmas social of the Sunday school of the First German Lutheran church was held Thursday evening in the church parlors. A fine program of recitations, carols and musical selections was given. Rev. Herman Hunzinger, pastor of the church, was in charge of the program and after welcoming the members and their guests spoke briefly on The Spirit of Christmas. A feature of the entertainment was a soprano solo rendered by Miss Margaret Hunzinger, violin accompaniment being played by Alvin Shubert.

Later in the evening the gifts were distributed among the children, and gifts were given to the teachers of the various classes. Rev. Mr. Hunzinger received many gifts, among them one from the entire church body. Boxes of Christmas candy were distributed among all school members.

FIFTY FOX HUNTERS TAKE PART IN CHASE

About 50 fox hunters from all sections of eastern Connecticut took part in the fox hunt Christmas day in the vicinity of Wauwecus Hill. It is said that a number of the hunters met with success but up to late Thursday night all the reports had not been turned in to the committee. A full report with details of the chase will be published within a day or two.

WOMAN SLIGHTLY HURT IN AUTO COLLISION

Early Thursday evening a Nash touring car owned by Wilfred Lemoine of Baltic and driven by Raymond Sullivan of No. 116 Prospect street, Willimantic, collided with a Flint touring car owned and driven by Henry Gee of Fairmount street at the junction of Eighth street and North Main street. Mr. Sullivan was driving up Eighth street from the bridge and as he was turning into North Main street his machine skidded into the Flint.

Mrs. Gee who was riding with her husband, received a cut over the eye and was attended by a physician.

ROAST TURKEY DINNER AT THE COUNTY HOME

The 53 children at the New London County Home enjoyed a splendid roast turkey dinner at the home Thursday noon. There were gifts in plenty for all the children and the day proved one that will long be remembered by the family at the home. The dinner and gifts were made possible through contributions from many generous friends of the institution.

BULKELEY PLACES ONE PLAYER ON ALL STATE FOOTBALL ELEVEN

(By Joe Barry)

One of the most difficult jobs is to pick a first and second All-State team. It is difficult because every fan has his own selection which will include a home player on the first and second team in preference to the player selected for that position by another. The field is a large one to select an all-state team from, but in most cases the outstanding stars of the year have been associated with teams which have been grouped in the standing.

Every attitude possible was taken into consideration before the final selection was made. Coaches' views on the best possible eleven to represent the state if such a team was picker under the same circumstances in some other state. Players, who have appeared in nearly all the big state games of the year, were questioned as to their selection and the personal observation of the big teams in action during the past season has caused the writer to select the teams.

A close observation of players, who were supposedly of state calibre, was made during some of the deciding games of the season, and the general selection of the two teams below is a result of careful study of the style of play and the consistent good play throughout the season.

Ends

The first positions to occupy the attention is the wing positions. For these important places on the eleven, the writer has selected two men—Connolly of Stamford, and Baxter of Ansonia—as the guardians of the outer posts. Being adept at receiving forward passes; boxing of end runs and their fine offensive power has caused the selection of this pair. With the leading colleges returning to heavy and fast ends this season instead of the light ends, Connolly and Baxter's selection to the end berths cannot be questioned. They are fast under punts, and in general broke up many off tackle slants. For the second team selections, Daniels of Bulkeley and Kelly of Torrington were both selected for the second team and not the first for the reason that they are lighter than either Baxter or Connolly. Daniels of Bulkeley had an exceptional good season this year, but being light as he was he could not be given the first team right position.

Tackles

Connelly's running mate, O'Brien from Stamford is given the first team right tackle job, along with Bojonowski of New Britain. Two better tackles of the stalward type were never before seen in action than these players. Weighing in the neighborhood of 190 pounds, these players have been one of the main causes of the success which attended the efforts of their schools. O'Brien on his offensive together with Connolly broke up Bridgeports' aspirations for a state title by making big holes in the Park City line. Bojonowski of New Britain is big, fast and leaves little to be desired in the other tackle job. Watterson of Bulkeley and Quinn of Naugatuck have been selected for the second team tackle jobs. Their playing was far above ordinary this season, but the playing of O'Brien and Bojonowski was a little better.

Guards

The guard positions were decided after considerable thought. Guards were plentiful this season with very few gains being made through guard positions. Monahan of Ansonia, a short, stout and scrappy built player gets the call for one guard position while Keating of Naugatuck, a tackle, was given the guard berth beside Monahan oftentimes broke up plays behind the line, saving considerable yardage for his team. Keating's work on the other hand was marked by steady, reliant but strong play in all games. For the second team selections, Dedorian of New Britain and Gavitt of Bulkeley, the latter a tackle, get the second guard berth. Both were setady as guards are most apt to be.

Center

Beloin's work at center was more spectacular than that of Kruts's of Stamford. The work of Beloin featured every contest New Britain played in, he changed from offensive and to defensive center and was later shifted to this pivot position as his regular position. His passing was accurate, while the most potent part of his pivot makeup was his defensive ability. Kruts was not very far behind Beloin as far as taking care of the center position correctly. In fact an all-state selection with either player on the first team would be considered as strong as could be possibly drawn up.

Quarterback

If there was an abundance of line and backfield material this season in Connecticut high school circles, the quarterbacks that used to be a feature of every play attempted by any high school team in this state, were very few in number in comparison. A selection of a proper field general who had all the requisites of a college field general were all taken into consideration in the selection which was made.

A player who could run back punts, run the ball equally as well as any of his backs, throw and pick plays

PLAINFIELD A-N TEAM PLAYS BALTIC WANDERERS TONIGHT

After three days of real hard and fast practice the manager of the Army and Navy club quintet team Lester Salisbury reports that his team is ready for the hardest battle of the season, with the fast and speedy Baltic Wanderers team on Friday night at the Plainfield Community House club. The boys have been put through some trick plays and brushing up on their shooting will give the local fans all the many thrills of the game tonight. The fast forwards, Benjamin and Normandie will wear the Plainfield colors, while the crack center, Murphy, will be in his old position at center. Nolan, Provost and Belair will defend Plainfield's hoop. The Army and Nacy club has one victory to their credit and the local bets are placed two to one that the home team takes the beem tonight. The boys from Baltic claim that they make basketball players and will attempt to take the home club down a few notches. Every one is keyed up for the game and extra bleachers have been put up to handle the crowd.

The Baltic lineup will include Ridgeway, J. Robertaille, Siminesti, Charron, Sullivan, R. Swanson, W. Robertaille and Cote.

CALIFORNIA TRIUMPHS OVER MISSOURI GRIDSTERS

Coliseum, Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 25.—(By the A. P.)—The Trojan football gladiators of the University of Southern California had tiger meat in addition to turkey today. In the second intersectional gridiron conflict played on the Pacific coast this year, the Trojans defeated the Bengal gridiron men of the University, champions of the Missouri Valley conference, 20 to 7.

Outplayed by the Middle Western team throughout the first half, the Southern Californians clinched victory in the third period. Forward passes gave the Trojans two of the three touchdowns they scored in this period. The Missouri touchdown came in the last 30 seconds of play when Tutle recovered a fumble 20 yards from the Trojan goal and dashed across the last white line.

The Missouri team, rated by the "experts" as being two touchdowns weaker than the Trojans, showed unexpected strength in the first period. They played hard, clean football and displayed a daring attack. They came within scoring distance twice during the first two periods.

In the third period the Trojans ran wild. Rams, most of them by the squat, square built Le Fevre took the oval to the seven yard line. A minute later Le Fevre followed his three man interference across the goal line.

Missouri kicked off after a poor start, the Southern Californians again began to travel. With the ball on Missouri's 42-yard line, Chief Newman, an Indian, threw a pass to Right End Badgre, who continued 24 yards to a touchdown.

Newman featured in the next and final U. S. C. tallies when he stood on the Missouri 6-yard line and threw the ball into the grimy hands of Phythian, who stood one foot across the Missouri goal line. For the first time during the game Hawkins missed goal.

The remainder of the game the Tigers made one desperate attempt after another. Halfback Whiteman threw forward passes until his right arm must have been weary and then Coach Gwynn Henry sent in Collier, whose right toe defeated the University of Chicago, 3 to 0, last October. Collier continued the passing attack. The Tigers completed seven of the 21 passes they attempted for a total gain of 67 yards, while the Trojans completed four out of nine for a total gain of 87 yards.

With less than a minute to play the Trojans near their own goal line made their first serious misplay. Riddle, carrying the ball into the center of the line fumbled and Tutle grabbed it from a maze of arms and legs and gallops 30 yards to a touchdown. Walsh kicked goal.

The Trojans gained 371 yards from scrimmage and Missouri 142. The victors made eleven first downs and the defeated team one less. The Missouri punters had the better of the kicking, averaging 42 yards to the Trojan kickers' 39. California was penalized five times for a total of 45 yards, while two affside penalties cost Missouri 10 yards. There were three fumbles, two of them being charged to the winner.

The Missourians proved from the moment Referee Walter Eckersall sounded the first blast on his whistle, that they were in Los Angeles to play football. After holding the Trojans for no gain, they cut loose with a flock of forward passes. Whiteman being on the throwing end of a majority of them while Faurot was successfully receiving.

The first break drive, with dashes into the line by Captain Bond, and Faurot carried Missouri to Southern California's 32-yard line, but here they were turned back.

The first break of the game went against Missouri when Quarterback Jackson fumbled a put on his 38-yard line, and Thomas recovered for U. S. C.

The next break favored Missouri. Hawkins, attempting a placement kick from his 45-yard line, failed in his effort by a poor pass from center.

From this point the Tiger made another prolonged advance. It ended when Walsh's placement kick from 17 yard line went wide of its intended mark. At this point Coach Henderson sent in his "offensive" backfield, but it failed to make much of an impression until late in the second period. At the end of the first half the Trojans were attempting a number of forward passes.

Today's contest brought to a close the intercollegiate football careers of seven Missouri and eight Southern California players. Graduation will take from the Tigers ranks Captain Arthur Bond, John Walsh, Charles Van Dyne, Jerry Lewis, Clyde Smith, James Palerno and Don Faurot. The Trojan team will lose Captain John Hawkins, Norman Anderson, Reginald Dupuy, Hayden Phythian, Wallace Newman, Holly Adams, Otto Anderson and John Riddle.

Forty thousand football fans saw the game which was played on a dry turf field.

COLD WEATHER HALTS PRACTICE OF PENN TEAM

Philadelphia, Dec. 25.—Bitter cold weather today prevented the University of Pennsylvania football squad from taking its final hard practice on Franklin field in preparation for the intersectional contest with the University of California at Berkeley on New Year's day. A regulation four-period game between teams of the red and blue varsity was scheduled, but when coaches found the ground frozen and covered with ice they called it off. The squad took short, fast drill, but did no scrimmage work.

Pennsylvania has been hard hit by injury since the close of its successful eastern season Thanksgiving day, and probably will be forced to meet the Californians without the services of three of its best players. Joe Willson, right tackle, the latest casualty, broke a small bone in his ankle yesterday during indoor practice. Clark Craig has been prohibited by his physician from playing because of injuries received in the Cornell game and Ted Fairchild has appendicitis.

The squad will leave for the Pacific coast tomorrow afternoon.

CALIFORNIA READY TO REPEAL PENN INVADERS

Berkeley, Cal., Dec. 25.—Coach Andy Smith of the undefeated University of California football team, is tapering off a strenuous week of training for the game here New Year's day with the University of Pennsylvania, another outfit that has bowed to no eleven.

Huber, an end, and Rau, a guard, are recovering from injuries. They are expected to be back in the lineup before the end of the week.

Some observers look for the game to be decided in the air. The Quakers' passing attack, which defeated Cornell, is highly respected here. The California Bears have done some likely passing themselves this season. A favorite combination carries the ball from Jimmy Dixon to "Tut" Imlay, the great open field runner. Imlay also plays Safety, and has run back punts in sensational style all season.

TREMAINE KNOCKS OUT WOLGAST IN SIXTH

Philadelphia, Dec. 25.—Carl Tremaine, Cleveland bantamweight, knocked out Bobby Wolgast, Atlantic City, in the sixth round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the arena today. Wolgast was floored four times before, he finally took the full count, once in the fifth round and three times in the sixth. Three of the five knockdowns, including the last one, were scored with left hooks to the jaw. The weights of both men were announced at 120 pounds.

Jack Zivic, Pittsburgh, won the judges' decision over Joe Reno, Trenton, at the end of their ten-round semi-final.

Danny Gartin, Philadelphia, received the verdict over Mickey Travers, Bridgeport, Conn., after ten rounds of hard fast fighting. Gartin weighed 134 and Travers 132.

MAGUIRE WINS EASY DECISION OVER SCHULTZ

Philadelphia, Dec. 25.—Frankie Maguire, veteran boxer of Williamsport, Pa., won an easy decision today from Mike Schultz, Philadelphia, in the ten-round windup of the Christmas matinee at the Cambria A. C. Maguire, with an advantage of eight pounds in weight, proved too strong for the local man.

The semi-windup between George Tully, Philadelphia, and Jackie Bahel, Camden, N. J., was stopped at the end of the third round when the club physician declared that a cut under Tully's eye required several stitches.

Johnny Attel won a technical knockout over Terry Ferguson. Both are Philadelphians.

In other six round preliminaries, Johnny Kadrich, Philadelphia, defeated Tommy Maher, also of this city, and Johnny DeMarco, Atlantic City, won the judges' decision over George Nellon, Philadelphia.

TENDLER GETS DECISION OVER JOE TIPLITZ

Philadelphia, Dec. 25.—Lew Tendler was awarded the judges' decision over Joe Tiplitz today at the end of their ten round bout, the feature of the Christmas matinee at the armory. The fight was hard and fast. Tendler, displaying much of his old time boxing skill and ring generalship, managed to evade most of the Tiplitz savage punches. Tendler weighed 141 pounds; Tiplitz 139. Both are Philadelphians.

Rocky Smith knocked out Joe Libby in the third round both are Philadelphia lightweights.

Benny Bass, Philadelphia, knockedout Earl Baird, Los Angeles, in the second round. They are feather weights.

Joe Dundee, Baltimore, won the judges decision over Johnny Mosley, Atlantic City negro lightweight, in ten rounds. Dundee was the aggressor throughout.

STANFORD TO HAVE SQUAD OF 31 AGAINST NOTRE DAME

Stanford University, Calif., Dec. 25.—Thirty-one men will compose the Stanford University football squad which will leave Saturday for Pasadena for the game against Notre Dame of New Year's day, Coach Glen Warner announced today.

The squad went through signal practice, Dummy scrimmage and exercises yesterday. Coach Warner said today that no more actual scrimmage would be held before the game, although light workouts are planned daily.

Ed Sandy's substitute tackle, was operated on for appendicitis last night and will be unable to make the trip.

SOUTH KINGSTOWN FIVE SWAMPS ARMY-NAVY TEAM IN HOLIDAY GAME

The Army-Navy club of Taftville bit off more than they could comfortably chew Christmas afternoon when they tackled the fast South Kingston Five Rhode Island champions. The local team was snowed under by a score of 31 to 15. Despite the one-sided score the game was by no means lacking in action and fans who attended the game saw one of the smoothest working teams in the South Kingston aggregation that has ever set foot in Parish hall.

South Kingston showed a brilliant passing game with an attack led by Fiddle Morley. Their defensive game was of an equally high order and at no time during the contest were the visitors really in danger. The visitors swept into action at the first whistle and in the first two minutes of play scored three field baskets and from that time on held the lead.

The Army-Navy team while no real match for the Rhody champions, played a hard game right up to the last minute. The local team lacked the speed and finish that marked the performance of the visitors but they fought hard and their showing was not at all bad considering that they were up against some of the country's fastest chalked court men. Joe Belair was the only one that showed any basket ball on a par with the Rhode Island team. Belair's floor work was very fast and his speed was the only thing that gave the visitors any trouble. If Belair had four men with as much speed as himself it might have been another story.

"Fiddle" Morley and Bill Barrett, of the Chicago White Sox, were the outstanding stars of the visitors' lineup. Morley's floor work and his long shots from midfloor could not be excelled. He was here, there and everywhere shooting baskets from all angles. Barrett's guard game ticketed him as one of the leading defensive players in the sport. Martin also played a nice game at center.

FRENCH TEAM ON GERMAN SOIL IS DEFEATED, 6 TO 2

Paris, Dec. 25.—For the first time since the war a French football team has visited the Rhineland to meet a German club. The athletic club of the fourteenth ward, Paris, today played the German club of Mayence at the latter city and was defeated by the score of 6 to 2. The game was played before the surprisingly large attendance of 5,000. Prior to the start of the game committees representing both teams met in the center of the field and exchanged bouquets of flowers.

"Y" EMPS WIN EASILY FROM BALTIC BANTAMS

The "Y" Emps slipped a defeat over their Baltic rivals, the Bantams, on the Y. M. C. A. court yesterday afternoon, when in a very interesting and snappy fashion they succeeded in slipping the ball through the hoop for 31 counters to, their opponents 15. The game was featured by unusually good teamwork on the part of both teams, and their playing indicated that they will without a question be in the running when the local championships are conducted this spring.

AN ATTEMPT MADE TO ENTER BANK STREET STORE, NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Dec. 25.—An attempt was made last night or today to burglarize the Thames Crockey company's store, 314 Bank street, the crooks failing in their effort to gain admission to the place only because of the strength of the door they attacked. When an employe of the store visited the place at 8.30 o'clock tonight he discovered that the glass in one of the rear doors was smash, and further investigation revealed that after the glass had been broken two bolts had been removed and that because of still another lock so low on the door that it could not be reached the crooks were unable to gain admission to the place because of a series of bars being across the door where the glass was broken. The police were notified and Patrolman Clarence Wells was assigned to the case.

An automobile owned and operated by R. Scott Linsley, residing at the Thames club, and a machine owned and operated by Joseph Fine, 83 Blydenburg avenue, were in collision this afternoon at the corner of Montauk avenue and Bank street. Both cars were damaged.

The automobile owned and operated by Edward Flynn, Mystic automobile dealer, and a Groton and Stonington treet railway trolley car were in collision on Thames street, Groton, this afternoon. The automobile was completely wrecked and the trolley car was damaged. Flynn miraculously escaped death, sustaining only a lacerated cheek, although the body of the car was torn from the axles and with Flynn a prisoner in the machine. Flynn had operated a machine, a Cunningham, to New London and was on the return trip home when the accident occurred. On leaving the Thames river highway bridge and entering Thames street, Flynn operated the machine at a fast rate of speed. After passing Broad street and at a point familiarly known as Copp's curve, the rear wheels became caught in the rails of the trolley company, causing the automobile to skid. Before Flynn was able to get the car under control, or materially reduce the speed of the machine, it crashed head-on with the trolley car, which was en route to New London. With the crash the automobile was forced across the highway, over the sidewalk and against a dwelling. The entire body was forced off the axles and the rear end was damaged. Flynn extricated himself from the wrecked automobile and went to the office of a physician, where an ugly cut in the left cheek was dressed. He then went to his home. The wrecked car was towed to a garage an hour following the accident.

Seventeen homeless men, lodgers who were housed at the S. P. Learned mission today, were given a treat, a turkey dinner, at noon. The dinner was made possible through the generosity of a merchant who contributed the turkey. When 160 children appeared at the mission this afternoon they were given stockings that had been suspended from a huge Christmas tree, the stockings containing fruit and candy. Next Wednesday afternoon the mission Christmas service will take place, and at that time the 260 children who attend services there will be given their Christmas gifts, which for the most part will be of a serviceable nature, although the smallest of the children will be given toys.

With the city's entire population participating in the celebration of Christmas today, but one victim of drink was taken into custody. The unfortunate fellow was found helpless on North Bank street.

The New Haven police this evening requested the New London authorities to maintain a watch for a Hudson sedan, stolen from the street in the former city early this evening. The car bears registration A-951.

The Connecticut company trolley car scheduled to arrive in New London this afternoon at 5.15 o'clock became disabled at Best View, Waterford, and caused a slight inconvenience to passengers. An extra car was operated from this city so that passengers depending upon transportation from New London at the hour scheduled for the departure of the regular car were not delayed.

A trio of young men was conspicuous at the corner of State and Bank streets shortly before 9 o'clock tonight where they negotiated for the purchase of a bottle of whiskey, another evidence that liquer can be purchased in New London, providing the consumer in possessed of the price.

Palestine commandery held Christmas services at Brainard lodge temple this noon. The attendance was large.

Low temperature this afternoon and evening put the hills about the city in fine condition for coasting and children enjoyed a sport they had not anticipated yesterday. All over the city the sidewalks were ice-covered and walking was treacherous.

All street work has come to a halt with the setting in of freezing weather. Patching of the highways will be the only repairs to be made till spring comes.

The Episcopal and Catholic churches of the city had unusually large congregations today. The music programs were especially elaborate.

In the markets and the stores where turkeys are sold the volume of trade was not as large for the Christmas season as it was at Thanksgiving. The price of turkeys was higher, five cents a pound or more, the increase being attributed to the cold weather that preceded Christmas day.

A still alarm this afternoon at 5.15 called the Allen Hook and Ladder company to the Isaac Fanning house at Blackhall and Truman streets, where chimney fire occasioned by soot was progressing. The work of extinguishing the fire was a slight task and was soon accomplished.

Dr. M. E. Fox of Uncasville was fined $50 for reckless operation of an automobile last night at 12.30. He operated the car around the corner of Bank and State streets at that hour and ran inte a trolley car. "Where do you come from?" was the query of the policeman. "I am not from; I am to." was the reijinder of the doctor. Then the arrest was made and the fine came today. Dr. Fox paid.

No such throng of people has been seen in St. Mary's church in years as was at the midnight mass of Wednesday. As the church is ordinarily filled at two masses each Sunday, the size of the congregation at the midnight service can be imagined. The music of voice, organ and violins was of a high order and the service was impressive.

At Seabury church in Groton there was an unusually large congregation at the night service. At St. Joseph's church in New London the seating capacity of the edifice was insufficient to accommodate all who attended the mass.

The authorities of the city took the hint from The Bulletin's warning that broken bones would come to pedestrians unless the walks of the city were sanded, and today at points where the walks sloped sand was sprinkled. Where the sand was not distributed the walking was most treacherous.

Harry Manheimer, who has conducted a store at Green and Pearl streets, is to go on the road for a tobacco company and Mrs. Manheimer is to have the management of the store.

Mrs. David Conner is visiting her daughter at Stamford over the Christmas holiday.

Louis Cade Butler, colored, was sent to jail to stay six months from the police court this morning. That was a Santa Claus gift that Louis did not anticipate till he was run in by Patrolman Babcock and accused of robbing the store of Nicholas Haddad at 128 Main street. Butler was accused of burglary, but the breaking and entering could not be fastened upon him, so the charge was made simple theft though there was not a particle of doubt that he burglarized though how he got in was not apparent. Butler, when confronted with the facts, had to admit his guilt. The goods—half a dozen shirts, a few pairs of trousers, some cloth and other wearing apparel—were found in his possession under the mattress in his room at the home of Mrs. Lindsey, where he had a room. Butler explained when he apologized to "Hisoner, gentlemen and others" in the court room that he was "intoxicon" or he would not think of taking the goods, which he said he found in an alleyway alongside the Haddad store. Butler's stories were conflicting, and he could not connect them up. He said he had been in the city three months and for three weeks had been at work on the long dock. Butler said he was willing to compensate Mr. Haddad for any damage occasioned and asked for that reason that the court should show him leniency. He said the theft was committed between 2.30 and 3 o'clock in the morning. "All right," said Judge Prince, "you go to jail for a stay of six months." "I thank you, judge," was Butler's response.

T. Harold Pinney, a student at Harvard university, is spending the holidays with his parents, Captain of Police and Mrs. Charles A. Pinney of Howard street.

James Delmore, 74 Connecticut avenue, complained to the police shortly after last midnight that while he was playing pool in the Lawrence building, Bank street, his overcoat, which had been suspended from a hanger, had been stolen and that another overcoat had been left in its place. This noon Delmore informed the police that he had recovered his garment and that it had not been stolen, but had been taken by mistake.

An automobile, the identity of the owner not known, collided with the blinker traffic signal, corner of Connecticut avenue and Broad street, early this morning, the collision forcing the signal 15 feet from its position, but not damaging it.

Alice Blake, a patient at the Norwich State Hospital, Preston, made her escape from the institution Wednesday afternoon and came to New London. Before the police here had been notified of the escape of the woman, Louis Green of the New York, New Haven & Hartford force of special agents and Patrolman Michael Dorsey found her loitering about the union station and took her into custody. This forenoon the patient was taken back to the institution by a guard.

An automobile owned and operated by Alfred Maynard, 28 Linden street, crashed through a fence in front of the residence of Julius Hendel, 28 Linden street, last night. The car was not damaged.

George Yates, 11 Moore court, was arrested this morning, charged with breach of the peace. He was not presented at the holiday session of the police court because of his intoxicated condition. Yates went to the residence of his brother, John Yates, 21 Walbach street, shortly before 7 o'clock and shortly after his arrival there engaged in a quarrel with his brother. The latter communicated with the police, and Patrolmen Carlos Selesnitsky and John Clifford were sent to the location of the row, where the accused was found and taken into custody.

Edgar Gracey, about 8, son of Mrs. Elizabeth T. Gracey, Nameaug avenue, was struck this morning by an automobile, owned and operated by Y. C. Christensen, a sailor, stationed at the United States Coast Guard academy and is now under treatment at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, suffering from lacerations of the right arm and head. The boy was coasting on Nameaug avenue with a sled that he received as a Christmas gift and at the corner of Thatcher street the youthful coaster encountered the automobile driven by Christensen. The boy was unable to guide his sled away from the automobile and Christensen could not bring his machine to a stop in time to avoid striking the youngster. Christensen placed the boy in his automobile and took him to the hospital, after which the mother of the child was notified of the accident. The boy will be under treatment at the hospital but a day or two.

LIBERTY HILL

The mercury Monday morning was 3 above zero and Tuesday morning at zero and below, with everything outside covered with heavy frost.

Rev. L. L. Harris preached a very able Christmas sermon Sunday morning. A Christmas anthem was well sung by a quartette, E. E. Caples, tenor, H. V. Oehlers, bass, Mrs. E. E. Caples, alto and Mrs. H. V. Oehlers, soprano.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul T. Nye and son, of West Springfield, visited Mrs. Nye's parents, Rev. and Mrs. L. L. Harris Sunday afternoon, coming by automobile.

Mrs. Henry V. Oehlers, Mrs. C. B. Adams and Mrs. Robert F. James were in Willimantic Thursday bringing gifts for the Christmas tree which was loaded with candy, oranges and presents preparatory to the Christmas entertainment at the church Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke leave Friday for Miami, Florida to spend the winter.

Saturday afternoon Mr. Bricken, who lives on what is known as the Henry Peckham place, went to Chestnut Hill station with his horse and buggy. He had his son with him. At the station the horse became frightened and ran overturning the wagon with the boy in it. He was badly bruised but is getting better and there seems to be nothing serious about his injuries. The horse was stopped at O. W. Gurley's store by Robert James.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Lost in a Snow Storm

Did we leave Little Jack Rabbit hiding under a bush? Yes, we did, you and I, little reader. And it was snowing and Mr. North Wind was blowing, and it was growing dark. Dear me, could anything be worse I should like to know? I guess if Charlie Chickadee had not been sitting in the bush, hiding from the storm, the poor little rabbit would have been dreadfully frightened. As it was, he wished over and over again he was safe at home in the dear Old Bramble Patch with his pretty little bunny mother. Then Mr. North Wind could blow till he grew black in the face and his cheeks puffed out like a toy balloon, for all the bunny boy cared.

"Can you see Danny Fox?" asked the little rabbit in a whisper, twinkling his pretty pink nose to find, if possible, the smell of that old robber's fur coat.

"He's just started off for his home on the wooded hillside," answered the bright-eyed little Chickadee, "but keep hidden. He might turn around all of a sudden, just like that, quick as a winkerty wink."

"I won't peek out; I won't stir,
He might see my coat of fur."

whispered the frightened little bunny boy. "Dear me, how I wish I were hopping home. Mother will be wondering where I am."

"What makes you so late?" asked the little birdie, thinking maybe and perhaps if he kept the little bunny boy talking he wouldn't start crying.

"I lost the clothespin that I bought at the Three-in-One-Cent Store for Mother," answered the little rabbit.

"Too bad—I mean, one bad," laughed the funny chickadee bird. "You didn't buy but two, did you?

"No, but the kind Policeman Dog gave me another. He took me home to dinner and Mrs. Dog pulled a clothespin off the line and gave it to me," answered the little rabbit, wiping a tear from his pinky eye. "I hope I won't begin to cry."

"There, Danny Fox has disappeared in the Weedy Glen," twittered Charlie Chickadee. "Mr. North Wind is blowing from that direction so the old fox can't smell the cologne on your little pocket handkerchief. Better hop off home."

"Oh, I will, I will. Thank you, Charlie Chickadee, you have helped poor little me," and away went the bunny boy clipperty clip, lipperty lip, in and out around the drifted snowbanks, down the Shady Forest Trail toward the dear Old Bramble Patch. But goodness me, have you ever been out in a blinding snowstorm little reader? It's easy to lose one's way at such a time. Oh, yes indeedy, and that's just what Little Jack Rabbit did. He lost his way and it will take all your Uncle Dave's wits to get him safely home.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Any rags? Any old iron?" asked the junkman as he knocked at the door.

The knock was answered by the man of the house himself. "No; go away!" he snapped irritably. "There's nothing for you. My wife's away."

The junkman hesitated a moment and then inquired. "Any empty bottles?"—Good Hardware..

Little Jimmy, 8 years old, was on an exercursion ride from New York to Boston by water, and just passing the statue of Liberty. Having seen statues of Lincoln, Grant, Washington and knowing of their deeds he asked: "Mother, what did Mister Liberty do to get his statue there?"—Chicago News.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

New Music This Week.

The coquettish waltz of Musetta from Puccini's "La Boheme" makes a charming new record by Lucrezia Bori. Anyone who has ever heard the gifted Spanish soprano in such parts will appreciate this record by her, as natural as the personality of the artist herself. To go with it Mlle. Bori sings Varney's delicious "Bird Waltz" (Valse d'Oiseau), full of light trills and exquisite cadenzas.

No music can ask more than Vladimir De Pachmann can give, as a hearing of the great pianist's two new records this week well proves. The subtleties of Schumann's "Novelette" and Chopin's "Prelude in D Flat Major," are as play in the master's hands. The "Novelette" ebbs and flows with color, while the "Prelude" reveals among other things an infinitely tender and haunting melody.

Willem Mengelberg, and the New York Philharmonic orchestra, record the overture and entra'acte to Schubert's "Rosamunde." These two beautifully melodious selections in themselves will explain to the hearer Schubert's great popularity. As recorded they immortalize some of his happiest moments.

The sensations aroused by the new dance records are an ever-fresh mystery to us. Take Paul Whiteman's new fox-trot records this week—"Indian Love Call" and "Tell Her In the Springtime." They are beset with splendor which is nothing short of amazing to us.

This week Dan Gregory's orchestra makes its first Victor record—"Me And My Boy Friend." It starts with a fine, triumphal trumpet fanfare and proceeds brilliantly with clean-cut timing—"Let Me Be the First to Kiss You Good-Morning," by Jack Chapman and His Drake Hotel orchestra is a number full of vivacity.

George Olson and His Music make it two with "My Best Girl" and "Put Away a Little Ray of Golden Sunshine for a Rainy Day." The first has a splendid "one-and-two" rhythm, flexible, smooth and strong. The companion number is agreeable.

"I Want to See My Tennessee" makes a pretty duet between Billy Murray and Ed Smalle this week. They offer to count the ties if necessary to attain their ends. "Choo-choo" by the same pair evidently helps them out.

Those famous "cuties," the Brox Sisters do some of their soubrette duets on a new record this week. "Mandy, Make Up Your Mind," is good advice harmoniously offered, while "Red Hot Mamma" has the accent in the right place.

A sure-enough vaudeville team transferred to a record disc is the Avon Comedy Four which makes its Victor bow this week. "The New School Teacher" and "Clancy's Minstrels" give them opportunity to display some clever sung and spoken dialect and song effects.

The splendid band selections of two fine patrols are to be found on a new record by the Victor Military band. "W. Freeland Kendrick March" is in honor of Philadelphia's mayor. The second number is "Heroes All."

Broadway Theatre Sunday

Bessie Love and Eileen Percy share feminine honors in support of Thomas Meighan in his newest Paramount picture "Tongues of Flame", produced by Joseph Henabery and coming to the Broadway Theatre for a run of four days on Sunday next.

The story is an adaptation by Townsend Martin of the last novel by Peter Clark Macfarlane. Cyril Ring, Burton Churchill, John Miltern, Nick Thompson and others appear in the cast.

Both girls are in love with Tom in the picture, Miss Love as Lahleet, a little half-breed Indian girl, Miss Percy playing Billie Boland, daughter of a wealthy manufacturer. The two girls were in Los Angeles at the time they were selected for parts in the picture. Inasmuch as the production was to be started within a week at the Paramount Long Island studio, some lively trans-continental traveling had to be effected to be on time for the first scenes.

In the picture Meighan has the role of a returned doughboy who takes up the practice of law in a small town. After Chateau Thierry and the Argonne Tom, as "Hell Fire" Harrington, can't seem to get excited over the petty lawsuits of the little town of Edgewater.

Then matters take a sudden turn. A pretty little Indian girl school teacher (Bessie Love) comes to him with the news that the Indians need his aid. The money men of the town are making inroads upon the Indian reservation and the red men suspect something underhanded.

The picture goes on to show how Meighan, first in the employ of the capitalists, then as the Indians' friend straightens the matter out.

"Tongues of Flame" is Meighan at his best. See it!

Broadway Theatre

Found—an American boy who doesn't want to grow up and be president.

He is "Peter Pan" in Herbert Brenon's production for Paramount of J. M. Barrie's popular fantasy.

Because Peter heard his mother say that one day he would grow up and be president, he ran away from home the day he was born.

"I won't grow up and be president. I want to remain a boy and have fun," says the wonderful little woodland sprite whose story has appealed to millions since it first appeared on the stage of the Duke of York theatre, in London, December twenty-seventh, in 1904.

Betty Bronson, selected by Barrie himself, plays the role of "Peter Pan." Ernest Torrence, Cyril Chadwick, Virginia Brown Faire and Anna May Wong are featured in the production which will be shown soon at the Broadway Theatre.

Willis Goldbeck write the scenario and Roy Pomeroy assisted Brenon on the technical end of the picture.

Palace Theatre

"If producers of great feature photoplays are to be successful they must be faithful in all ways to the stories chosen for transference to the screen, must film the scenes in actual localities, must reproduce the people of those localities true to life, and must unravel and honestly tell through the camera the legends and historical aspects of a vicinity and its people."

So declared Sol Lesser after completing production work in his screen version of Harold Bell Wright's latest and greatest novel, "The Mine With the Iron Door," which is announced as the chief attraction for next Sunday at the Palace Theatre under a Principal Pictures Corporation release.

"The strength of Harold Bell Wright, his tremendous popularity, with so many millions of the reading public can be credited to the accuracy with which he writes his stories," says Mr. Lesser, "and much of this has to do with the settings. No living author perhaps spends so much time in research, in gathering data and legendry for a tale he tells.

Breed Theatre

A tribute to the devotion of women who will risk life itself or the living death of dishonor for the men they love is paid by Thomas H. Ince in his new drama, "Those Who Dance," a First National release which comes to the Breed theatre today and Saturday.

Ince has told a remarkable story of a little country girl who falls in with the life of the New York underworld in the attempt to save her brother from gangsters who have "framed" him on a charge of murder. When every other attempt fails, Rose, rather than abandon her brother to his fate, throws away her good name and, by an affinity whom she takes into the home of the bootleg king of the underworld, gets the necessary evidence which frees her brother.

Blanche Sweet, as the innocent girl from up-state, who bobs her lovely curls and puts on the paint and flapper dress of an underworld queen to save a man from the electric chair, has one of the most compelling roles she ever has portrayed. The dual characterization gives her full scope for the dramatic ability she displayed so tellingly in "Anna Christie."

Bessie Love plays an audacious underworld flapper role with an abandon that wins every heart, while Warren Baxter, Mathew Betz and Robert Agnew are thoroughly satisfactory in the male roles of the production. Lambert Hillyer directed and has screened the drama with a fine sweep of action that keeps the audience on edge from start to finish.

Larry Semon in "Trouble Brewing", "Days of '48" and the Pathe News make up the remainder of the bill.

LEGAL NOTICES

CORA O. IMDAHL VS. JOHN IMDAHL. Supplemental Order of Notice.
State of Connecticut, County of New London, ss., Dec. 18th, 1924.
Upon the complaint of the said Cora O. Imdahl, claiming, for the reasons therein set forth, a divorce, now pending before this Court, having been returned thereto on the first Tuesday of September, 1924.
It appearing to and being found by this Court that John Imdahl, the said defendant, is absent from this State and gone to parts unknown, and that notice of the pendency of the complaint was given as required by order of notice heretofore issued, and now the plaintiff asks for a further order of notice in the premises.
Therefore, Ordered, That notice of the pendency of said complaint be given by publishing this order in The Norwich Bulletin, a newspaper printed in Norwich, Conn., once a week for two successive weeks, commencing on or before the 22d day of December, 1924.
By order of Court:
GEORGE E. PARSONS,
Clerk of the Superior Court for New London County. dec19F

NUMBER SEVEN

which would bring the best results found Shea of Hartford Public high the man for the coveted position Shea was the outstanding star of a team which with the exception of himself could do little against the line of New Britain High. His real qualities were brought out in this game, and his performance ranks far above that of Grip of New, Britain, Henkle of Bulkeley, Scalzi of Stamford, Lawley of Naugatuck and several other elevens who had a hold upon the state title. For second quarterback to Shea, Henkle of Bulkeley is selected for his ability to pick plays and to run back punts, his stants off-tackle, and end runs. Other quarterbacks named above rank in the same class as Henkle.

Backfield

Rice, Zeherer and Conway were the individual stars of the year. Their selection to an all-state team is comperative for a team without the names of these players gracing the backfield selection will be called no team at all. Rice's ability is known throughout the New England states as an intrepid player, a punter, passer, receiver and briken field runner par excellance. His interference with Zeherer or Conway carrying the ball would furnish as good interference as would be desired. He was one of the outstanding stars of the year, who has benefited with his team, Success that has not been matched.

Zeherer is another individual star, who after the high school season played a game or two with the professional All-New Britain team. His best asset is his offensive and defensive abilities. His name like Rice's cannot be left out of the all-state selection.

Conway of Ansonia, a burley player whose work this season was particularly good. His tackling and drop kicking has saved Ansonia on no less than two occasions from defeat, while his offensive work was also good. He excelled as a drop kicker, so that the backfield would need him as part of its makeup.

On the second team backfield we find, Le Volsi of Stamford, O'Brien of New Britain and Jakewezski of Bridgeport High taking their positions behind the direction of Henkle. This backfield is also good, but most of its strength lies in offensive ability. For this reason, Lawley of Naugatuck could be given a place at any position, having an excellent kicking record during the past season.

Honorable mention should be given to the following players who were neither included on the first or second team but whose work was noticeable during the past season. Ends: MacCarthy of New Britain; J. Lawley of Naugatuck. Tackles, Kazewkas of Naugatuck, Bronson of Torrington, Sims of Ansonia. Guards, Brown of Bulkeley, Phillips of Naugatuck. Centers, Hanson of Torrington, Dillon of Bulkeley. Quarter backs, MacDonald of Torrington, Lawley of Naugatuck, Ecalzi of Stamford, Shea of Bridgeport, Grip of New Britain. Left halfbacks, Devore of Torrington, Hanson of Torrington, Belcer of New Britain. Right halfbacks, Sheflott of Bulkeley, Hinrichs of Norwich Academy Brown of Chapman Tech, Tiana of Naugatuck. Fullbacks, Daly of Naugatuck, Kannenburg of Chapman Tech.

There has been considerable speculation of the relative standing of the high school teams in the state. To throw a little light on the matter as well as settle all future controversies on this subject, the exact standing of the high school teams in the state as listed by several leading sporting scribs of the state is as follows in the order that they are named. New Britain, Bulkeley, Ansonia, Stamford, Torrington, Bridgeport, Naugatuck Hartford, Meriden, New Haven.

However, the lineup that appears above is subject to change when a committee of the teams meets in Hartford next month. Bulkeley is making a strong claim for first honors even though this team lost to New Britain. The argument which Bulkeley presents is that a complete high school schedule has been played by this team with the exception of one game, while New Britain and one or two other teams in the state which are contenders for the title include several preparatory schools on their schedules, therefore affording them a week to relax from a hard game, for a game with prep schools does not count towards deciding the state championship. Torrington is also endeavoring to better her position in the standing, with Stamford and Ansonia also dissatisfied with their present standing. It is hoped that this matter be cleared up soon to distinguish the standing of the teams.

YOUTH, AGE AND COUNTRY LIFE

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

I've been reading Dr. Hall's big book on Old Age. Being myself well along towards the sear and yellow age I have found it interesting. It is a scholarly compendium of about everything known and everything which has been said or written upon that subject.

Of course no one reading such a work once can be expected to remember it all. But a few points stand out in my review of it with special prominence.

One is the fact that every long human life is divided into at least half-a dozen periods or eras or ages. They are not sharply delimited, so that one can feel himself passing from first to second or from second to third and record the day on which he stepped across. Nevertheless they are there, separate and different stages on the life journey. First there is infancy, then childhood; then pubescence, then adultness, then senescence; and last of all, senility.

There isn't, as I have said, any sharp break between any of these. They merge insensibly, one into the next. As a rule, for instance, we are most of us well into senescence before we really appreciate that we are anything more than middle-aged. And those who live long enough sink into actual senility without suspecting it. At least not at first.

The dividing of life in this way into stages, at the end of each one of which we change into a different vehicle taking a different route, makes very clear the reason why youth and age, pubescence and senescence, never have got along well together, and never will.

Each one of these stages has its own ambitions, it own appetites, its own yard-stick for measuring things and people. Each one has its special capacities and powers; each one its peculiar lucks and faults. It is scientifically as well as proverbially true that an old head cannot be expected on young shoulders, or an athlete's thews and endurance under the whitened locks of old age.

There is something almost pitiful in the "if" of the famous French saying: "If youth only knew; if age only was able." But neither one ever is or can be the other at the same time. Were such a combination possible as that of a man possessing, at the same age, the wisdom of senescence and the vigor of youth, it would tend towards an upsetting of the universe. Like the ancient Archimides, he would need only a place whereon to stand in order to tip the earth over.

Which, however attractive a proceeding to the eyes of extreme youth, is hardly to be classed as a desideratum by the judicious. For even the topsy-turvying of this small earth out of its appointed orbit would work havoc in the universe by disturbing the eternally arranged order of things. It would not only make an end of the human race—a consummation concerning the advantage of which different people may hold different opinions—but it would also, sooner or later, mean a smash-up of the solar system and a distinct danger to the bands of Orion and the sweet influences of the Pleiades.

...No, that would never do. "Crabbed age and youth cannot dwell together," and it is fortunate that they can not. Fortunate not only for the rest of the universe but most emphatically so for themselves.

In no single respect is the contrast between youth and age, between immaturity and maturity, shown more clearly than in the respective attitudes of the two towards the country life. To a great many boys and girls life in the country on a far seems almost like vegetation. It lacks gusto, it offers no charm: it is better fitted for beeves and cabbages than for soaring spirits. It presents no adequate opening for the exuberation of those aspiring ambitions and the exercise of those vast powers with which youth always feels itself over-dowered. "Towered cities please us then, and the busy hum of men." Of course, exactly what might be expected. It isn't till later, when we find that the city towers are mostly builded on the bones of failures, and the hum of the mart is too often only the combined moan of hordes of self-driven slaves under the lash of their own greeds—it is only when time and experience have taught this lesson, that we begin to appreciate the peace and rest which the country offers.

This is an age in which young men leave the country towns and work 40 years in the cities in order to get money enough to go live in the country towns."

So writes Don Marquis, who is a philosopher as well as a "columnist." It seem like a waste of precious opportunities, this spending the best 40 years of life in a mad squabble after the chance to put in the last 20 or so where the whole 60 might easily have been passed. Yet in this very fact is seen a proof of the divisions which separate our lives into contrasting if not actually antagonistic epochs.

When we farmers look over our home towns and see the empty cellar holes where once were busy farmsteads, when we see the level lands which once laughed with harvest crops reverting to weeds and sedge, when we see the hills over which used to browse herds of dairy cattle and flocks of sheep now returning to scrubby forest—when we see such things right before our eyes we can't help hating the itch for city life which has sent the youngsters away from their home nests.

We are inclined to grieve over what seems to us their foolishness or their laziness. We wonder where they got that strain into their blood. We are apt to expostulate and exhort. We try to make them see the error of their ways.

And we might just as well talk to or expostulate with chipmunks skipping along the tops of our fences in search of something new to eat.

When we look at it philosophically, recognising that youth is youth just as age is age, and that never the two shall meet on any ground of common desires or understandings, then we shall at least find an explanation.

"A boy's will is the wind's will,
And the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts."

So wrote Longfellow. "Youth is a blunder; manhood a struggle; old age a regret." That was disraeli's way of putting it. But was he right? What is a "blunder?" And what a "regret?" Remember that youth is a separate age, a distinct stage in life. It has its own desires about which it broods even when voiceless of expression. It has likewise its own hopes which it hasn't yet learned to differentiate from reasonable prospects. It has it own peculiar limitations. And it will have its fling, whether or no. Wisdom may shake warning fingers and parental love may avert tearful eyes from the looming shadow of disaster. But neither wisdom nor love can avail to stay the stars in their courses, or the throbbing of hot blood in young hearts.

We old 'uns might, perhaps, do bet-ter to look at the thing dispassionately and scientifically. Admitting that the young ones blunder sadly at times, we can, if not pardon, at least explain it by the very fact of their youth. For youth is a heady wine and incites to adventure.

We may even regret that they won't learn from our mistakes and are usually contemptuous of our hardly won wisdom. Again the philosophic explanation comes in. Youth being itself a distinct division of life, it is there in supreme master and makes its own laws. It can vault a six-rail fence with one hand laid on the top rail. But, again, we are to remember that youth is pitiless. It has not yet known in itself that heart-ache from whose gripping embrace pity is born. It is the fault, not of the boy or girl individually but of their youth. We orchardists do not expect ripe apples off a Baldwin tree in July. It is against nature.

I happen to live in a rural town which, 60 years ago, was a community of several hundred prosperous farms. Today I do not know of a single one in it which is prosperous, nor of a dozen which are so much as paying their own way. All because the youth who used to stand by and make farming profitable have been for 60 years turning their backs on it and flocking to the cities. There a select few have flourished beyond rural comparison. The great majority, however, have sunk out of even memory in hopeless oblivion. Just as will a majority of those today following their footsteps.

I used to find something almost hideous in this diversion from the country of the country's greatest asset. I still think it pitiful.

But I am more and more inclined to take it philosophically, as just one of the symptoms of youth which youth can escape only by outgrowing it.

And I am quite as doubtful of anybody's ability to stop it as I should have been of Mrs. Partington's ability to sweep the Atlantic out of her cottage with a kitchen broom.

ELIMINATION ZONE RULE WILL SPEED UP GAME

New York Dec. 25.—(By The A. P.) —General speeding up of play and a more keenly contested title race in the intercollegiate basketball league, which opens its season January 3, are predicted by Joe Deering, coach of the Columbia five, as a result of the abolishment of the zoning rule.

Deering believes the league's decision to abolish the zoning rule, which inflicted various penalties for fouls committed within certain areas, will eliminate constant whistle blowing, speed up the game and make the play more attractive to the spectators.

Deering, whose veteran team is expected to be one of the strongest contenders for the championship now held by Cornell, regards Princeton and Dartmouth as especially formidable rivals in the 1925 race. He was reticent in discussing Columbia's chances but experts predict the Blue and White quintet will be around the top from the start to finish.

With a veteran combination around Cort Wilson, Rochester, N. Y., player who captains this season's team, Columbia has a bright prospect for the coming campaign. Deering, now in his fifth year as coach, has developed some excellent new material to aid the veterans already on hand. Baldwin and Laub, the new forward combination, shows particular promise while Wannheim at center and Wilson and Kirchmeyer, football star, at guards are expected to round out the first string line-up.

Strom, star forward last year and runner-up to Sammy Pite of Yale for individual scoring honors, has not been available so far because of the time taken by his law studies but he may rejoin the squad later.

BERLENBACH UP AGAINST TOUGH FIGHTER TONIGHT

New York, Dec. 25.—Paul Berlenbach, New York light heavyweight, faces one of the most difficult assignments of his career in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night when he meets Larry Estridge, negro southpaw, in a 12 round match. Estridge holds the negro middleweight title having won it from Panama Joe Gans in the Milk fund bouts at the Yankee stadium, June 26.

Both the principals in this headliner are sluggers and both carry their most powerful punch in their left hand. Estridge is a keen boxer, a shifty puncher who can both take and give it, while Berlenbach is a two-fisted puncher and carried a harder blow than his adversary.

Pale Reed of Boston, another southpaw, meets Jack Delaney, Bridgeport Conn., middleweight in the second bout on the card.

Both of these matches may have a decided bearing on future championship matches. Berlenbach is angling for a tilt with Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion and Delaney is seeking a match with Harry Greb, middleweight titleholder.

FORCE REFEREE TO CHANGE HIS DECISION

Paris, Dec. 25.—Southern France's warm-blooded inhabitants take their football seriously, not to say passionately, but none more so than the ardent fans of the Lexigman club, recently, after a defeat inflicted upon their team by the perpignan Harlequins, according to L'Auto's perignan correspondent, they became so enraged that they beseiged the referee in his dressing room for more than an hour.

A few impartial sportsmen who tried to settled the dispute were badly mauled, one having two ribs broken. The referee was released only after he had signed a statement recording the match as a draw. Upon the referee's complaint, the Langnedoc football league committee suspended the Lexignan club for three years, banned the president of the club from football for life and severely disciplined several of the official players.

NOTRE DAME TEAM HAS STIFF PRACTICE AT HOUSTON

Houston, Texas, Dec. 25.—Christmas meant nothing to the Notre Dame football team except another day of practice for the game New Year's day at Pasadena, Calif., with Leland Stanford.

Tonight Coach Knute Rockne will have his warriors aboard a train from Arizona, where he hopes to find clear weather that will permit his men to engage in real hard practice.

A stiff workout was held yesterday, witnessed by several hundred fans who braved the cold weather to journey to Rice field. Fans will be barred from the practice today, however.

Walsh, the all-American center, was in harness yesterday afternoon but he is not in the best of condition. The Notre Dame pivot man has been indisposed several days.

TAFTVILLE

Wednesday, during the rain and sleet storm. Post office hill proved dangerous for automobile traffic. All morning, cars were sliding and skidding at this point, some almost making the hill, then sliding back to the bottom or crashing against the curbing on the sides. One car turned completely around on the hill and then slid all the way to the junction of Norwich avenue.

The road over Merchants avenue to Norwich Town has never been completed because the state failed to appropriate money enough. The first [illegible] is sufficient only for [illegible] ried to the Ponemah the Canterbury turnair the approach to the next year, the ch would have been appued to the completion of the road, was vetoed by the governor. The annual state appropriation is about $10,000, and this is too small an amount to even open negotiations with a contractor. Contractors are obligged to transport a great deal of equipment, with quite a bit of expense, and they cannot figure on small jobs. The selectmen of the town who have been working had to get this matter settled, and have deeds already from people whose property the road will have to touch have been in touch with the highway commissioner and others in order to get the road completed at the earliest possible time. It seems that the only thing that can be done is for the town to appropriate the money for the completion of the road, and let the state repay it in $10,000 yearly installments.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis C. Murphy, Jr., of Vernon, California, are the guests of Mr. Murphy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis C. Murphy of South A street.

Hundreds were in attendance at the midnight mass held Wednesday evening at the Sacred Heart church. The service was held with the permission of the Right Reverend John J. Nilan, bishop of Hartford, who acted under instructions of the pope. This dispensation is being given all parishes, because of the beginning of the holy year. An augmented choir sang the usual Christmas carols, hymns and chants, as well as the musical portions of the mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bogle of Providence street are spending the Christmas holidays with Mr. and Mrs. William Brierley and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brierley of New Bedford, Mass.

Mrs. George Berker of Long Island City, N. Y., was in town Wednesday to attend the anniversary mass for her mother, Mrs. Cora Blanchette, which was celebrated Wednesday morning in Sacred Heart church.

Napoleon Labarre caught a large white ferret Tuesday afternoon on North B street. The animal was wandering about the sidewalk when it was seen by Mr. Labarre who was passing in his truck. Making a glove of his cap, he captured the animal and took it to a nearby store where it was put in a box, and taken to Mr. Labarre's home.

Lewis A. Tillinghast of North Third avenue spent Christmas with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Tayler and family of New Haven, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. William Whitehead and son William H. Whitehead of Boswell avenue spent the holiday in Westerly with Thomas Whitehead and family and Mrs. Harry Smith.

Miss Francis O'Connell of Hartford, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Earle M. Wood of North Third avenue.

Elliott Grover, a student at Phillips Exeter Academy is spending the Christmas recess at his home on North Third avenue.

Because of the holidays, the Thursday Evening Basketry class omitted its regular meeting this week.

Wednesday morning, Mrs. Octave Bousquet of South B street slipped on the ice near the Ponemah house and injured her ankle. She was attended by Dr. George M. Thompson of North second avenue and was taken to the home of her mother, Mrs. Alexandra Lavigne of South B street.

HELD COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS TREE CELEBRATION AT NORWICH TOWN

Weather similar to that of last year prevailed for the Community Christmas tree and celebration held Christmas night on the Norwich Town Green. Although a drizzling snow fell all during the day, the clouds lifted and the sky was brilliant with stars in the evening. The thermometer registered around 20 degrees and the night air was crisp and cold, yet there was a good assemblage numbering several hundred, although not as large as last year, as the public did not respond quite as generously in attending the exercises. The tree in itself was beautiful with its gorgeous decorations of various colored electric light bulbs and the singing was fine under the leadership of Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, chairman of the music committee. The program opened at 7.30 and lasted about one-half hour.

From the steps of the First Congregational church Messrs Bard and Decker, cornetists, sent out a volume of music and led in the singing of the following Christmas carols: Silent Night, Oh Little Town of Bethlehem, O Come All Ye Faithful, Hark, the Herald Angels, The First Noel, The Christmas Tree, While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks, It Came Upon the Midnight Clear, What Child is This and We Three Kings. The nucleus chorus of about 100 voices which gathered around the tree comprised members from the choirs of the various churches of Norwich.

Preceding the celebration for some time automobilists, one by one, parked their cars around the Green, it being estimated there were about 75 in all. A delegation of state police from the Groton barracks was in attendance and rendered fine service in handling the traffic. All around the green in various locations boy scouts set off red fire which made a pretty effect in connection with the brilliantly lighted tree.

The tree is so tall that when approaching Town street from Washington street at a location near Harland's corner it can be seen in the distance, when lighted over the housetops at a height of five or six feet. In approaching the green from East Town street also in rounding the corner from West Town street, near the old church as well as coming up from New London turnpike and Town street its brilliancy is very conspicuous. The tree is to be lighted every evening until after New Year's. Francis Gilman was the general chairman and the chairmen on the several committee's comprised the following: Tree, Bartholomew Sullivan; decorations, Clyde M. Beebe; music and program, Rev. Alexander H. Abbott; finance, Robert Boisson; publicity, Mrs. Charles H. Lamb.

This community project under the auspices of the Norwich Rural association was introduced for the first time last year and undoubtedly will be an annual affair.

STATE CHAMBER ESTABLISHES INFORMATION SERVICE BUREAU

At the approaching session of the general assembly, the Connecticut chamber of commerce will offer its entire membership a first-hand information service regarding the leading bills introduced into the legislature.

Clark Belden, who has had advertising, publicity, newspaper and research experience, has been placed in charge of the chamber's information service bureau.

At the close of the period allowed for the introduction of new bills at the legislature, the Connecticut chamber of commerce will send its entire membership a booklet giving a classified list of all leading measures introduced together with their numbers, titles, a brief digest and the committee references.

If any members of the chamber is especially interested in a particular bill, the chamber's information service bureau will send him a copy of the bill and will keep him advised of all hearings, changes of reference, introduction of substitute bills and other information necessary to an intelligent following of the progress of the measure.

The Connecticut chamber of commerce also offers its members an information service regarding the activities of any administration department of the state government in which they are particularly interested.

The chamber also offers its membership, through its Washington connections, an information service regarding federal legislative or departmental matters at Washington.

LOCAL HOLIDAY MAIL PRACTICALLY CLEANED UP

Despite the avalanche of mail that poured into the local post office this week the clerks and carriers dug themselves out and by noon Thursday practically all the packages, cards and letters, with the exception of a shipment received in the morning had been delivered. One train Thursday morning brought in 120 sacks of Christmas mail and this will be delivered this (Friday) morning thus bringing to an end one of the busiest holiday rushes the local post office has ever experienced.

The employes at the postoffice did remarkably good work. Postmaster Casper K. Bailey said Thursday evening. Every effort was made to deliver the Christmas packages, letters and cards on time.

Sanded Slippery Walks.

Members of the street department were busy Thursday evening sanding the sidewalks in various sections of the city, especially on the hills, where walking was exceedingly difficult owing to ice and snow.

CONN. WOMEN TO ATTEND NEW YORK MEETING

Many prominent Connecticut women will go to New York to attend the fourth annual luncheon of the Women's National republican club on Saturday, January 10. The luncheon which will be at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, will be one of the most important events of the new year.

Members of the reception committee include Mrs. F. W. Alsop of Avon, Mrs. Austin Cheney of South Manchester and Mrs. Hermon M. Hubbard of Old Lyme. Mrs. George Orvis of Vermont, chairman of the reception committee, has called a meeting of this committee on January 8 at the club house, 3 East Thirty-seventh street, New York.

More than 1,000 reservations already have been made for the luncheon. Among the Connecticut women who will be present will be Mrs. Irving H. Chase, Waterbury; Mrs. Albert Crane, Stamford; Mrs. George A. Driggs, Waterbury; Mrs. Henry Leroy Lewis, Stamford; Mrs. Samuel Young, Stamford.

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, president of the Women's National Republican club will preside at the luncheon. The speakers will be United States Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania; Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, and Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, secretary of state for New York.

The Woman's National Republican club has more than 2,600 members representing nearly every state in the Union.

PAMPHLETS ISSUED BY STATE BOARD COMMENDED

Commendation of the literature recently published by the Connecticut state board of education on the subject of secondary schools has appeared in the "School Review," a journal of secondary education published by the University of Chicago, which makes the following editorial comment:

"From the point of view of the high schools of the state of Connecticut, those pamphlets must be recognized as contributing to a keener professional consciousness on the part of all of the high school teachers and officers. From the broader point of view of the high schools of the nation, they are examples which can be safely recommended to all state departments of education and to the federal bureau of education as distinctly worthy of imitation. State departments are too often absorbed in attention to elementary education and relatively neglectful of the high schools."

The pamphlets to which reference is made are "A Manual for Secondary School Libraries."

"A Manual of the Social Studies for Secondary Schools" and "A Study of the Cost of Secondary Education in Connecticut."

LARGE CONGREGATION AT GERMAN LUTHERAN CHURCH

At the Christmas morning service at the First German Lutheran church, Rev. Herman Hunzinger, pastor, preached on The Christmas Story. In his sermon Rev. Mr. Hunzinger told of the message delivered to the shepherds, "Fear ye not because I bring you tidings of great joy. For to you today a Saviour is born, Christ the Lord." The love of God was realized in the manger, said Rev. M. Hunzinger, and all nations should choose Him as their leader; this being done, all earthly troubles should cease.

Special Christmas music was rendered by the choir during the service. The church was crowded to capacity by the large congregation.

Cigars for Police Force.

Members of the police department received a gift of Nugget cigars from the George P. Madden company Christmas evening. The smokes were enjoyed by the officers, who returned thanks to the givers.

The police force was also remembered with cigars by Frank P. Fagan, the gift being greatly appreciated by the officers of the force.

ADJUTANT GENERAL ISSUES INAUGURAL ORDERS

Orders have been issued from the office of Adjutant General George M. Cole at the State Armory for the attendance of the governor's staff and the Governor's Foot Guard, First and Second Companies, at the inaugural parade on January 7. The governor's staff is ordered to report to General Cole at the Hartford Club on January 7 at 1.15 p. m. The commanding officers of the First and Second Companies are to report with their commands at 1.20 for escort duty and the commanding officers of Troop F and C, cavalry, are to report with their commands at 1.15 p. m. to escort the governor.

NUMBER FOUR

ists, Misses Sadie Driscoll, Elinore Donovan, Lucy Woods, Nicholas J. Spellman, Horace Corning, Walter La Fontaine deserves special mention.

At the nine o'clock mass the junior choir gave the traditional Yuletide carols, with true Christmas spirit. The ten thirty o'clock mass was a repetition of the midnight music which again pleased a large congregation.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC AND SERMON AT TRINITY CHURCH

An attractively arranged programme of music was given by the organist and choir of Trinity Episcopal church at the Christmas morning service at the church. A special Christmas sermon was preached by the rector, Rev. J. Eldred Brown. In part Rev. Mr. Brown said:

The active and main constituent in perception is the perceiving subject. We see only what we have the capacity for seeing. It is evident that that capacity is limited by many things. It is limited by ignorance. The architect sees things in a building and the naturalist in a wood which no one who is not an architect or a naturalist is fitted to see.

Again, capacity is limited by prejudice. The devoted partisan in any sphere of life is incapacitated to see things which may be perfectly plain to one who is less partial. Capacity is, further, limited by our wishes and desires. We are sometimes unwilling to proceed with an investigation because we have reached conclusions that satisfy us, falling in, as they do, with our wishes.

Our capacity is limited by our temperament, our mental training, our incomplete reasonings. There were devoted patriots in Lincoln's day who failed to perceive the greatness of his character because incapacitated by temperament. Of all men Lincoln had great seriousness of disposition, but along with it he had a deep sense of humor, which became, at times, the only thing which saved him from despair. It was only natural that men devoid of humor should misunderstand him. He seemed to them at times to act more or less like a buffoon. It is of course impossible for anyone to approach an investigation absolutely unbiased. Every mind has its store of impressions, maxims, opinions and beliefs. And these affect, and in a measure, predetermine both our attitude towards new phenomena and our reception of them. It is an indisputable fact of experience that our mental and spiritual judgments are largely influenced by our interests, affections and choices. There are men who adopt one moral code for their business life and quite a different one for their home life. There are few parents whose affections will allow them to judge their children impartially. And we are all inclined at times to let our choices rule our judgments. And nowhere is it more apparent that we see only what we have capacity to see than in our judgments on religious or spiritual matters. For our spiritual judgments are true and just only when they are in accord with our highest aspirations and visions. Speaking in the text, for himself and the other apostles, St. John says of Jesus: "We beheld His glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."

Now how was it that the apostles came to see in Jesus a glory that they judged to be divine, since it was always and everywhere so free from sin, so full of grace and truth? They were of course eyewitnesses of His whole career. They saw Him exhibiting in His whole character and conduct a gracious, benignant, merciful and loving temper and disposition, which never varied. They saw Him perform numerous miracles of healing and deeds of kindness. They listened to His teachings and found in them no ground for dissent or criticism. So far as they could see; after an intimate association of nearly four years, these teachings contained no error, but to abound in truth. And putting all these things together, the apostles judged them to be an accurate setting forth of God's glory, a revelation of gracious love and righteousness and truth which could have come from no less a being than God Himself. In a word, the apostles saw in all this what seemed to them an undeniable proof that He who could live this perfect life must be Himself the only begotten Son of the Father. But why this judgment? There were other eyewitnesses of Jesus' career who did not favor this judgment. The rulers of the Jews, indeed, had Him put to death as a malefactor. They saw outwardly just what the apostles saw. They were witnesses of Jesus' work of mercy and love. They could find in Him no semblance of moral fault or sin. They were worsted in their every attempts to entrap Him or refute His teaching. They could not deny His exceptional grace and majesty of speech and act. He could not be accused of denying or abrogating any essential of their moral law. He walked not in their definite grooves, but He worshipped in their temple, recognizing as the House of their Father and His. Yet they saw in Him only a malefactor, only a man who roused all their venom.

Did we not know it to be true, true in their case and in others, we should have said it would be impossible, that two such contradictory judgments should have been formed about the same person. What, then, is the explanation? It is in the difference of inner capacity. The apostles were simple minded men, but they were men of spiritual insight. They had no axe to grind, no party to uphold. They were men of humility, men of purity, men of lofty aspirations. They were familiar with their scriptures and had formed mental conceptions of the divine glory. According to their conception the glory of God meant for one think absolute oral perfection. That was a conception drawn from the teaching of their great prophet. It agreed with their own moral ideals. Anything less than this would have been derogatory to God and a falling short of their own expectations. Hitherto they had associated this idea with no one but God. But, after the closest possible intimacy with Jesus for nearly four years, they could discover in Him no slightest moral flaw. He was as perfect morally as they had ever conceived of God. And so they came to what seemed to them a necessary inference, namely that He who so perfectly manifested God's moral perfections, which were an essential constituent of the divine glory, must Himself be of divine nature and power. But another essential element in the divine glory, as pictured by the prophets, was perfect truth. If they could have expected beforehand to have God among them and speak to them, the Apostles would have pictured Him as always speaking truth in harmony with all their moral and spiritual ideals. God might recall to them many unanticipated truths, but they were sure beforehand that none of these revelations would have fallen short of their own highest ideals. Here, then, was another of their essential convictions about the divine glory which Jesus perfectly fulfilled. His teachings were full of truth. There was nothing in them to which they could take exception. There were things they failed to understand, but never anything which gave shock to their moral sense. On this ground, too, then, they could not evade the inference that Jesus was divine. They not only thought it, they felt it. It became a conviction which stirred the very depths of their souls.

Once more, a third essential element in the divine glory which the prophets and their own visions led them to hold to was perfect love. Despite all Israels historic failings and backslidings God had sent them through His prophets word: "I have loved thee with an everlasting love." God's love, then, must be unfailing, never deviating. It was alike the teaching of the Old Testament and the assured conviction of the Apostles. For men like the Apostles to have thought of God's love as capable of failing or proving cold would have been inconceivable. Here again, then Jesus fulfilled both their scriptural and their personal ideals. The unvarying tenderness and mercy of Jesus; His special seeking out of the poor, the lost, the outcast; His unhesitating association with publicans and sinners; His gracious work of healing on the sick and helpless, and His final sacrifice on the cross; all this was full of love, was as perfect a love as could be imagined, was such a love as God only could display. It was on all these counts that the Apostles said in Jesus "the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.' They saw all this in Him because they had the capacity to see it, because they had within them a vision of perfection, in morality, in truth, in God. And when that vision was embodied in human shape, they none the less recognized the Son of God beneath the veil of flesh. Why, then, did not the Pharisees and Sadducees see in Jesus what the Apostles saw? Because they were held down by their ruling ideas and preconceptions, the Pharisees by their slavery to pride of party and rites and ceremonies, the Sadducees by their unbelief in spiritual things and their absorption in political schemes. Manifestly both these parties were incapacitated to see anything divine in Christ. Manifestly they did to Him just what their principles taught them to do because they saw in Him only what their principles allowed them to see, namely, a peril to their power. Were then, the Apostles competent witnesses of what they saw? What constitutes competency in such a matter? Is it intellect? Or is moral and spiritual discernment. According to Jesus it is the latter. The Apostles then, were competent witnesses, Jesus Himself being the judge, and He chose them as such to proclaim Him to the world. For "spiritual things are spiritually discerned."

"He that willeth to do God's will," said Christ, "shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of Myself."

TYPHOID GERMS IN THE BODY OF "MILLIONAIRE ORPHAN"

Fact Disclosed in Autopsy of Exhumed Body—Cause of Death Undetermined—Statement Made That Foster Father Had Made Frequent Visits to Laboratories in Chicao, Displaying Particular Interest in Bacteria and Typhoid Cultures.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—An autopsy over the body of William Nelson McClintock, "millionaire orphan," who died three weeks ago at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Shepherd, his foster parents, while Miss Isabelle Pope, his fiancee, waited to marry him, has disclosed the presence of typhoid germs but has not determined the cause of death, Coroner Oscar Wolff, announced today.

The death certificate showed young McClintock, who left his fortune, under the terms of a will, to Mr. Shepherd except for an $8,000 annuity for Miss Pope, had died of typhoid fever. It will take two or three more days to complete the chemical analysis and determine exactly what caused death, the coroner was informed by his chemists.

An indication of the thoroughness of the investigation came tonight when George E. Gorman, assistant state's attorney, made public a statement made by F. T. Breidigan, of Battle Creek, Mich., formerly in charge of clinical routine of the Illinois research laboratories here.

In 1919, Breidigan said, Dr. Olson, now dead and a brother of Judge Harry Olson, chief justice of the municipal court and a friend of the McClintock family, who asked that the investigation be launched, brought two men to the laboratory.

They were introduced to him, he said, as "William McClintock and Mr. Shepherd." The man known as Shepherd, Breidigan said, came to the laboratories several times with Dr. Olson, and later made three or four trips alone.

During visits to the laboratory, Breidigan said the man known to him as Shepherd watched his work and expressed particular interest in bacteria cultures, also discussing typhoid germs with Breidigan, explaining that he was a chemist and druggist and was interested in clinical routine.

On three occasions, he said, a woman introduced to him as "Mrs. Shepherd" accompanied the man but she did not enter the laboratory. The last time he saw the couple, the statement said, was at the funeral of Mr. Olson, but he added that he did not talk with them then and did not know where they lived.

William D. Shepherd is now on his way back to Chicago from Albuquerque, N. M., where he and Mrs. Shepherd went to rest after young McClintock's death. He is expected to arrive here moorrow morning and Herbert E. Crowe, state's attorney, has indicated that Mr. Shepherd, who was a druggist and chemist, will be questioned at once about young McClintock's death.

Joseph Savage, assistant state's attorney, said that his office had not determined as yet what significance might be attached to Mr. Breidigan's statement, which came to the office from Judge Olson. Commenting on the investigation, he said:

"Our investigation is including all possibilities of the case, not excluding that of typhoid inoculation and the possibility of improper treatment of the patient, such as the feeding of solid foods. Our examination of Dr. Rupert Stolp, attending physician, today failed to elicit any confirmation of the possibility that McClintock's death had been hastened or his illness intentionally aggravated."

"Dr. Stolp told us that he was called in November 23, and that from then until his death, Dec. 4, the patient was constantly under his observation, and under the care of nurses assigned to the case by himself. Two of the nurses we shall examine tomorrow.

"Dr. Stolp said that the reported request that visitors not come to the residence was made at his instance in the interest of the patient's health. He said, too, the servants had complained that there was too much company, and that they had to get too many meals for guests."

Dr. Stolp also said that when he was first called young McClintock seemed to be suffering from an affection of the nose and throat, and while he seemed very ill, showed no symptoms of typhoid fever until a few days later.

Dr. Stolp also said that he had never heard McClintock or Miss Pope express the wish during his illness to consummate their romance by an immediate marriage. The first he learned of this, he said, was through the newspapers after the young millionaire's death. Several servants were also questioned at the state's attorney's office today regarding their duties during McClintock's illness, but it was indicated that their information was not considered important.

Judge Olson, who asked that the inquiry be instituted, in commenting on the autopsy as thus far revealed, said:

"I never have expected that poison or anything of that sort would be found. It would not surprise me at all if the autopsy clearly showed that McClintock died of typhoid fever, as his physicians said. But the autopsy will not be the end of it. The whole story has not yet been told. Much remains to be cleared up, and the investigation should not end until it is clear that McClintock's death was natural."

The body of McClintock which had been disinterred for the autopsy, was again buried in Oakwood cemetery today.

COPPER SHARES FEATURE IN N. Y. STOCK MARKET

New York, Dec. 26 (By the A. P.).—Wall street was treated to another surprise today when the stock market, in defiance of the tradition of dull and featureless price movements in the first post-holiday session, developed another burst of bullish enthusiasm under the leadership of the copper shares, which contributed 18 of the 47 new 1924 high records established during the day.

Net gains in the active issues ranged from 1 to 7 1-2 points, with the general industrial average being carried to the highest level since the post-war boom in 1919. While trading was not quite as extensive a scale as in some of the late November markets, the day's sales fell only slightly short of one and one-half million shares.

Heavy buying of the copper shares was predicted upon the establishment of a new high price for the year in the west by the red metal at 15 cents a pound, and speculative expectation of dividend resumptions or increases by some of the larger companies. American Smelting and Refining was the leader in that group, crossing par for the first time in seven years. Anaconda, Chile, Kennecott, Utah, Inspirating, Magma, Butte and Superior and Cerro De Pasco also sold at new high levels.

U. S. Steel common and New York Central each touched 119 3-4, the highest price in seven and twelve years, respectively. American Locomotive crossed 102 to the highest price since the split-up of the stock in 1923. Other issues to sell at new tops were Ludlam Steel, S. U. Cast Iron Pipe, Worthington Pump, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Sears-Roebuck, Nash, Hudson and General Motors, Mack Trucks, American Car and Foundry, Radio Corporation, Philadelphia Company and Norfolk and Western.

W. M. RITTER COMMENDED BY PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

Columbus, O., Dec. 26.—A good portion of the person fortune wrought by William McClellan Ritter, millionaire hardwood lumberman of Columbus and Washington, D. C., from forests of West Virginia and other states, is to revert to his employes, according to the terms of a trust agreement made here. The gift may aggregate $3,000,000.

Washington, Dec. 26.—William M. Ritter, founder of the W. M. Ritter Lumber company of Columbus, O., was publicly commended today by President Coolidge for his action in giving to employes of his company a quarter of the capital stock of his concern as a Christmas present.

Mr. Coolidge, on reading the announcement of Mr. Ritter's action in today's newspapers, sent him this letter:

"I have been very much interested in reading of the fine thing you have done for those in your employ at Christmas time. Such acts of generosity cannot but help lead to better co-operation and understanding between the employers and employes, and you are to be commended for the fine example you have shown."

PROVISIONS IN WILL OF GEORGE ST. JOHN SHEFFIELD

Providence, R. I., Dec. 26.—Under the terms of the will of the late George St. John Sheffield, of this city, filed for probate in municipal court today, Yale university will receive a greater portion of the testator's estate after the death of his widow, Mrs. Amelia Maxcy Daggett Sheffield. George Parmly Day, treasurer of Yale university, and Frederick G. Mason, of Attleboro, Mass., are executors of the will.

Upon the death of Mrs. Sheffield the estate is to be divided in three equal parts, one part being bequeathed to Yale university as a separate trust fund in memory of Joseph Earl Sheffield, deceased son of the testator, the net income from which is to be used by Yale college in such manner as its authorities shall determine. The second part is left to the board of trustees of Sheffield Scientific school as a memorial to George Sheffield, another son, and to be used for the benefit of the scientific school, which was founded by the testator's father. The third part of the estate is to go to Yale university without restrictions as to the use of the income or principal.

Mr. Sheffield, who was a Yale graduate and called "the father of rowing at Yale," and was a retired Wall street banker. He also willed $10,000 outright to the Russell Trust Association of New Haven and $2,000 to the Yale University Alumni fund as a memorial to his two sons, Joseph Earl and George Sheffield, both of the class of 1894 of Yale.

PROGRESS MADE BY THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD

New York, Dec. 26.—The New York New Haven and Hartford Railroad company made further progress in November, net income of $613,965 showing an increase of $108,482 over the month before, a gain of $234,859 over November, 1923. In contrast to a deficit of $3,324,854 for the first 11 months of 1923, net income for the same period this year was $2,489,764, which is a gain of $5,814,618. Railway operating revenues in November were $666,194 lower than November, 1923, but net railway operating income increased $780,342. Railway operating expenses for the month were cut $1,381,289, while the reduction for the 11 months amounted to $10,426,446.

HOW TINY GIRL ESCAPED WHILE OTHERS PERISHED

Hobart, Okla., Dec. 26 (By the A. P.).—Crawling on hands and knees, dodging in between shuffling feet and straining bodies, a tiny girl, Lilia Biggers, 4 1-2 years old, escaped without a scratch from the Babb's Switch Christmas eve holocaust in which 34 persons lost their lives.

"I crawled until I got out into the cold," was the simple way in which Lelia described her escape.

The child was listed among the missing in early lists of the victims. Her two brothers, Walter and William, died in the fire, and her mother, Mrs. W. H. Biggers, was probably fatally burned.

It is believed a number of other small children escaped injury or death in the same manner.

Holy Year Postage Stamps.

Rome, Dec. 26.—New postage stamps commemorative of Holy year were placed on sale today throughout Italy. The stamps are in denominations of 20, 30, 50 and 60 centimes and of 5 lire. The purchasers, however, must pay a certain amount over the face value of the stamps, the extra amount varying according to the denomination. There has also been issued a special set of stamps commemorating the Vatican missionary exposition.

REPORTS OF STUDENTS AT YALE IN CHINA ON STRIKE

New Haven, Dec. 26.—Receiving unofficial reports that students of the college of Yale in China are on strike, Prof. Frederick W. Williams of Yale university, chairman of the board of trustees of the institution in China, today placed the blame on the bolshevik movement in China and the antagonism of half trained Chinese students returning from Japan and demanding teaching positions.

"The trustees of the college of Yale in China have not as yet received any communication from the faculty at Changsha about the strike of students there. This is in itself an indication that the matter is not more serious than other student strikes which have occurred in the past dozen years. It appears highly probable that the unrest which has for the moment swept the undergraduates into common action results from a flare-up by an old group called the anti-imperialists which has lately been crying for states rights or provincial independence of Peking. Students everywhere in China take things over they are apt to listen to reason and go back to school, leaving the execution of new conceptions to professional agitators.

"Two elements are in evidence all over the country. One of them is bolshevism, with its strong irreligious basis, which instigates for the moment a fierce antagonism against every kind of religious teaching. The other is the presence of great numbers of partially trained Chinese who on returning from Japan find themselves outclassed by western educated teachers in competing for places in schools of modern type. They play upon the prevailing opposition to European influences and incite students to combat foreign institutions. The study of the Bible in Ya-Li is conducted upon the same basis as the study of Confucian classics; it is necessary to an understanding of the foundation of western civilization; no dogma is imparted and no pressure is exercised to make Christian converts. The fact that the college is frankly Christian has thus far in its history greatly appealed to the better elements in the community because of its practical application of moral living, in playing the game and in character building. There is no reason, to suppose that this attitude will undergo much change among sensible men when this little wave of agitation is passed."

SCHMIDT HELD PENDING THE CORONER'S INJUEST

Middletown, Dec 26.—Following the formal arraignment today of Casper Schmidt, local photographer on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of his wife, shot and killed when a shotgun was discharged in the Schmidt home Wednesday, Acting Medical Examiner John E. Loveland filed his report of the autopsy with Coroner L. A. Smith late today. The report failed to disclose that the course taken by the charge from the gun, which examination by the police led them to believe was downward. To clear up the question, the coroner and the medical examiner will hold a conference tomorrow. In his report of shooting to the police, Schmidt said that the gun had been discharged when he had thrown it onto the table after he had slipped on a banana peel. With the exception of the gunshot wound, the autopsy disclosed no other marks on the body.

Coroner Smith said this afternoon that his inquest would be delayed until next week pending further investigation by himself and State's Attorney E. A. Inglis. The state's attorney announced that the police department would continue to be in charge of the investigation and that the state police had not been called upon to act.

Schmidt at the hearing today was held in $5,000 bail pending the coroner's inquest.

MRS. JACKSON GOES TO BEDSIDE OF HUSBAND

Boston, Dec. 26.—The wife against whom Caleb B. Jackson filed suit for divorce on grounds of desertion three months ago went today to his bedside at the City hospital, where he is recovering from two attempts at suicide that followed his resignation as treasurer of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway company and its insurance subsidiary because of alleged improper disposition of $48,000 of the latter's funds.

Mrs. Jackson, who has made her home at Washington, N. H., for the four years of their separation, spent an hour with her husband. Although neither would make a statement, it was said at the hospital that they had reconciled their difficulties.

Jackson will be discharged from the hospital in a day or two and arrested immediately on a warrant for larceny, issued in the municipal court. Prosecution by Attorney General Benton may result from his independent inquiry.

THREE MEN BURNED TO DEATH IN BUFFALO

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 26.—Three men were burned to death and one injured in a fire which swept the Washington hotel, North Tonawanda, early today. The three-story structure housed 45 lodgers.

Paul Kabby, 40 years old, who succeeded in making his way to the street rushed back to rescue his pal, William Smith, 45 years old. Their charred bodies, with arms clasped, were found in Smith's room on the top floor.

The third victim was John Roach, 55 years old. It had been believed that he escaped by jumping from a window and was reported at a local hospital with a broken leg, but later his body was found. The loss was $40,000.

BRITAIN DECLARES EMBARGO ON AMERICAN POTATOES

London, Dec. 26.—Great Britain has declared an embargo on American potatoes. The ministry of agriculture, in an order issued today, states that "for the prevention of the introduction of the Colorado beetle, the landing in England and Wales of any potatoes grown in the United States is prohibited."

A Terrifying Ride On Pilot of Engine

Mrs. Mary Clark Narrates Experience of Compulsory Adventure on Locomotive of N. Y. C. Express Train.

Indianapolis, Dec. 26.—"I've thanked God a thousand times that I'm alive," sobbed Mrs. Mary Clark, 19, as she lay on a hospital cot here today and described a Christmas night ride of 12 miles on the locomotive pilot of the Knickerbocker Special, a fast New York Central train running from Indianapolis to Conwork. Mrs. Clark was caught on the pilot when the train demolished an automobile at a crossing here, killing one member of her family and injuring two others.

Mrs. Clark's mother-in-law, Mrs. Clyde Clark, died today of injuries. Kenneth Clark, 22, husband of the woman who was carried on the locomotive, and Clyde Clark, Kenneth's father were injured. "Bill" Hartman, 20-months-old nephew of Mrs. Kenneth Clark, escaped uninjured.

"It was the most terrifying experience I ever expect to have," said Mrs. Clark as she told of clinging to the locomotive until she finally became unconscious and was swept off into a ditch where she was found by a farmer who heard her last desperate scream.

Mrs. Clark said as the automobile started across the tracks she heard a terrific crash and then remembered nothing until she found herself on the engine pilot.

"I was still somewhat dazed," she said, "but I realized where I was and I apparently had enough presence of mind to cling to some kind of iron bar on the head of the locomotive.

"I screamed, shrieked and shouted until my throat became so raw I was unable to make further outcry. It seemed that I was flying, the train was going so fast. I thought the engineer or fireman surely had realized the train had struck something and would slow down in a minute or two.

"The minutes seemed like hours and the wind was so strong I was afraid to turn around and look ahead. It was the coldest wind I ever felt and it went through my coat and shirtwaist and skirt as if I had on no clothing at all. I thought of a thousand and one things I guess, and the longer I remained there the more horrifying it seemed."

Mrs. Clark was wearing a pair of cloth gloves and she said she soon felt her hands growing numb.

"I felt then that it would be only a question of a few seconds until I probably would be dashed to the tracks below and ground to pieces. It was terrible. I prayed to God to give me strength to hang on just a little further. I also asked that if he intended to take me to please spare Kenneth and the rest of the family.

"I thought of Kenneth and his father and mother and little Billy many times as the train sped on and I wondered if they had been killed. I prayed and prayed that they be saved. Realizing that the train was not going to stop, I hoped that some of them could get word to a dispatcher somewhere along the line, so the train could be flagged. I thought if it would only slow down a little I would try to jump, but it only seemed to go faster and faster."

"Thoughts of the happy Christmas I had had also flashed through my mind," she continued, "as once or twice I got a fleeting glimpse of a gaily lighted Christmas tree in a house near the tracks as the train sped on.

"I felt myself growing weaker and weaker and I remember making one last frantic effort to make myself heard. I guess I then lapsed into unconsciousness because I remembered nothing more until I came to in a farmhouse out in the country.

"They told me they found me lying in the snow near the side of the tracks. Persons at the farmhouse said they had heard my screams and began a search for me. My legs and hands were almost frozen. I guess I don't remember any more, but I am sure I had enough thrills to last me a lifetime."

33 DEFENDANTS FOR LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS

Newark, N. J., Dec. 26.—As the result of two raids by prohibition agents from New York, 33 defendants held on charges of violation of the liquor prohibition laws were arraigned today before United States Commissioner George R. Sommer, who released them on $1,000 bail each.

At the office of the divisional director of enforcement it was announced that there would be no more raids in New Jersey for some time.

Albanian Cabinet Fled From Capital

They Escaped Before the Rebellious Forces, Led by Former Premier, Entered the City.

Rome, Dec. 25.—(By the A. P.)—The members of the Albanian cabinet, headed by Premier Fannoli, fled the night before the capital was occupied by the rebellious forces of Ahmed Zogu, former premier, according to the special correspondent of the Giornale D'Italia at Tirana. The Fan Noli cabinet embarked at Durazzo for Avlona.

The correspondent learns that Ahmed Zogu's government will install itself at Scutari.

Describing the entry into Tirana of the Zogu forces, the correspondent says:

"The first detachment, strong sturdy mountaineeds from the Dibra region, entered at 10 o'clock in the morning, commanded by a lieutenant.

Their ragged uniforms showed the hardships they had experienced. The population of Tirana sent special delegates imploring the commander of the rebellious troops to enter the city without causing bloodshed.

"As the contingent of troops arrived, the city, which only a few months ago was befagged for the arrival of Fan Noli, was decorated for the entry of the Zogu troops. Communication between Tirana and Durazzo had been interrupted, both by the disbanded government troops and by the rebels pursuing them.

"From my hotel I witnessed the departure of Fan Noli in an automobile loaded with valises. Simultaneously at the ministry of finance the state funds were being loaded in an automobile.

"Durazzo remained for two days without a government, because the prefect representing the cabinet of Fan Noli, [illegible] awoke to the fact that it was without a government there was panic at first, but shortly the fusilade which could be heard together with the crackling of machine guns on the hills nearby, suddenly ceased. After a time the populace which had barricaded their houses, gradually regained confidence. Windows and doors were opened and flags were displayed. They were further reassured when the rebel contingents entrd without molesting the inhabitants.

"Ahmed Zogu made a triumphant entry, saluted by the booming of cannon and enthusiastic hurrahs. He wore a lieutenant colonels uniform. He proceeded on horseback, bowing and smiling to right and left in acknowledgment of the shouts of greeting.

"There are many in Tirana who believe that the position of Premier Fan Noli is untenable, even at Avlona, as Mufid Bey, one of Zogu's lieutenants, has already occupied Argyrokastron making the situation at Avlona most precarious.

"Neither Italians nor Americans suffered through the change of government."

SEEKING RECOVERY OF MONEY LOST ON RACES

Newark, N. J., Dec. 26.—Louis Freeder, and his wife, Tillie, filed a complaint today in Essex county circuit court here against Samuel Hecht, for the recovery of $951.25 which Freeder alleges that he placed with Hecht as bets on horse races and lost.

The Freders in the charges against Hecht say that under an old statute imposing a $2,000 fine upon any one conducting a lottery Hecht owed the county $3200 and that they are entitled to half of that sum under the law.

The suit may lead county authorities to act against race track bookmaking in Newark, it was said by officials here today.

GRAND TRUNK MAY SELL PART OF ITS SYSTEM

Toronto, Dec. 24.—The Canadian National Railways considering the disposal of a portion of the old Grand Trunk Railway lines in the United States. It is understood that a tentative offer has been made for the portion of the main line running east from Montreal to Portland, Me., and that a tentative price has been set upon the section by Sir Henry Thornton. The offer comes as result of consolidation recommendations in the New England states made by a commission headed by Howard G. Kelley, former president of the Grand Trunk, who was appointed by the states of Maine, Massachusetts, Vermont and Rhode Island to work out a plan under which railroads serving those states could be put on a profitable basis.

"HOBSON'S CHOICE"

Long ago Toby Hobson kept the only horses for hire in Cambridge. It was his rule that customers had to take the horse nearest to the door, whether they liked it or not. "So Hobson's choice" came to mean —"Take this or none."

Don't be satisfied with "Hobson's choice." Through advertisements you have a chance to compare and select almost anything you want or need. They offer you the world to choose from.

Advertisements are an accurate index of what other people are buying, selling, wearing, eating, doing, learning; of what the world of industry is accomplishing for you and how, where and by whom it is being accomplished.

It's a good habit to readThe Bulletin's advertisements. It's a profitable habit, too.

COOLIDGE CONFIDENT THAT COLOGNE WILL BE EVACUATED

The President Believes That a Satisfactory Arrangement Will Be Reached by the Allied Nations and Germany—Officials in Washington Will Await With Interest the Action to Be Taken by the Council of Ambassadors At Its Meeting in Paris Today.

Washington, Dec. 26.—President Coolidge is confident that a satisfactory arrangement will be reached by the allied nations and Germany with respect to evacuation of the Cologne bridgehead.

The American government has no official interest in the question of the Cologne evacuation, and consequently no action by the United States is required or contemplated in the matter. The United States, however, has a general interest in anything affecting the welfare of Europe, and accordingly officials in Washington will give attention in an unofficial way to the action to be taken by the council of ambassadors at its meeting tomorrow in Paris and to the forthcoming final reports of the military control commission concerning the status of German disarmament.

HOW COOLIDGE STANDS ON EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS

Washington, Dec. 26.—Decision as to an extra session of congress after March 4 is being withheld by President Coolidge, but in his opinion, one should be called only in event of some development of great importance.

The president will await the termination of the present session before making any attempt to decide on the question of an extra session. The chief task before the present session is the enactment of the regular appropriation bills, and with three of these already approved by the house the feeling in administration quarters is that this work will be performed before March 4.

Mr. Coolidge recommended a wide diversity of other legislation to the attention of congress in his annual message, some of which he regards as very important, but whether any of this, if not acted upon, is sufficiently important to warrant an extra session is a question he is not ready to determine.

Several republican leaders in congress including Chairman Borah of the senate foreign relations committee, believe that the new congress should be called into session immediately after March 4, while others, including Chairman Smoot of the finance committee, think an extra session would be advisable in the late summer or early fall. Still other leaders are not infavor of any meeting of congress prior to the regular assemblage next December.

"MR. ZERO" HAS ABANDONED HIS 200 JOBLESS MEN

New York, Dec. 26.—Worn out by his efforts in behalf of his two hundred jobless men Urbain J. Ledoux, known as "Mr. Zero," today went into temporary seclusion. He was found in bed in his furnished room opposite "The Tub" where the unemployed have been holding forth.

"My friends have forced me to cease my efforts for a day or two," he said. "I am not sick and I am not weary of my fight, but I have yielded to advice to go to bed for the day. I propose to resume my drive on behalf of these men just as soon as I can get out of this room.

"You may say that I will bring fifty men to St. Marks-in-the-Bouwerie at the four o'clock service on Sunday. The men will be furnished with shovels and will be prepared to do the kind of dance they do with a shovel when they are road ballasting. We have had dances of beauty in the church as it is going that an industrial dance be staged there."

The men again entered the Camp Memorial church at Chrystie and Delancey streets tonight and made themselves comfortable on the floor and on benches. Zero tells the men will retain possession on through the winter months and is making plans to add to their comfort in the building. He said that a Congregational minister who was also a carpenter and a printer had offered his services and if the New York Congregational conference give consent he may undertake the improvement of the place.

DEADLOCK IN JURY OF M'COY MURDER TRIAL

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 26.—Indications that the jury sitting in the trial of Kid McCoy, ex-pugilist, charged with the murder of Mrs. Theresa W. Mocs, last August, was deadlocked were had when Judge Charles S. Crail called the 12 to a conference here late today. Court attaches anticipated no early verdict.

Judge Crail called the jurors to the conference at 5:10 p. m. From the discussion in open court it was evident that contentions had arisen concerning reference to notes taken during the trial by the jurors.

From the criminal code the judge interpreted it a privilege of the juror to refer to notes taken during the trial or opinions written by the individual jurors before they adjourned to the jury's deliberation rooms.

After the conference the jurors adjourned for dinner and were to resume deliberations at 8 p. m. Unless a verdict was reached they would be locked up for the night at 10 p. m., Judge Crail announced.

While the jury held his fortune in the balance McCoy talked and joked with his jailers in the reception room of the county jail across the street from the court house.

"I can't believe they will convict me," he said. "Theresa was the only woman I ever loved, and I did not kill her. She committed suicide."

PREPARING ESTIMATES FOR GIANT BATTLE CRUISERS

Washington, Dec. 26.—The budget bureau, at the direction of President Coolidge, has begun preparation of estimates for appropriation for the eight battle cruisers recently authorized by congress.

The appropriations to be recommended will be for carrying on the work to be done within the next year under the building program as authorized by congress. Some suggestion has been made that building be started only on four of the eight, but navy department officials are insisting that all of the ships be laid down immediately.

PREPARING STATEMENT TO SENATE NAVAL COMMITTEE

Washington, Dec. 26. — Secretary Wilbur began work today on a statement he will make to the senate naval committee Monday when it takes up the appropriation bill for the coming fiscal year.

Chairman Hale of the committee has submitted to Mr. Wilbur a list of questions on which committee members desire information. The secretary did not indicate today what specific points as to conditions in the fleet or the naval plant ashore the committee inquired about, but he said his statement would overlap the statements he made to the house naval appropriations sub-committee only in certain features.

The appropriation bill does not include provisions for the increase of the navy or for carrying out the modernization program, those projects having been included in a separate measure when authorization for the work was given by congress. The question of providing the funds to carry out this work is still before the budget director. The appropriation bill now before the senate naval committee has to do with the ordinary expenditures for the navy in the fiscal year 1925-26.

There have been intimations that the senate committee proposed to inquire particularly on the question of gun elevations. Secretary Wilbur would not say, however, whether the questions he had received touched on this subject.

Mr. Wilbur took occasion today to look up records of the naval battle off Santiago and the logs of certain ships engaged in the fighting along the Cuban coast in 1891, in order to verify a recollection he had that American ships at that time had been fitted in order to increase the range of their guns, a procedure which has been experimented with recently by both the British and American navies. He found that the battleship Indiana, on July 11, after the naval engagement and while endeavoring to bombard the city of Santiago over a high bluff, had swung her two main battery turrets and added to the elevation of her eight-inch secondary battery on the shoreward side.

Mr. Wilbur also found in old American and British scientific magazines comparisons of the American and Spanish navies made before war was declared between those two countries. The "experts" of that day, he discovered, held the two navies to be relatively equal in strength as far as their ships were concerned, although the Spanish naval strength consisted largely of heavily armored fast cruisers, while the American navy included a far larger proportion of battleships.

The secretary made no comment in connection with his explorations into the old records, saying he had looked these matters up only to verify his own recollections.

DRENCHING RAINS HALT RAIDS OF SPANISH AVIATORS

Tetuan, Morocco, Dec. 26.—(By The A. P.)—Drenching rains during Christmas prevented the Spanish aviators carrying out raids over the territory where rebellious Moorish troops have concentrated north of Tetuan. Large forces of Spaniards stationed in Tetuan and vicinity since the retirement of the troops from Chechauen, consequently enjoyed a period of comparative tranquility.

Behind the newly formed line, stretching from Teuan to Tangier, most of the former Spanish forts have been abandoned. This obviates the necessity of frequent convoys and leaves the flying columns under General Saro and Colonel Franco free to operate in the work of suppressing uprisings among the natives. The tribesmen at the present moment are showing a disposition to submit, although several groups still maintain hostile activities in the neighborhood of Zoco-El-Teltata.

FIRST MOTION PICTURE ARRANGED FOR THE BLIND

New York, Dec. 26.—Twelve hundred blind men, women and children sat in a darkened theatre today and "saw" their first motion picture. The reading of an atmospheric narrative with a rhythmic arrangement, together with special music, enabled the audience to conceive the story as it was unreeled on the screen.

The hero of the screen story was a blind lighthouse keeper. The company which produced it intends to make other pictures which will be arranged

The police here are holding John Robert Santon, 26, of Sherbrooke, Canada, under the suspicion that he violated the immigration laws of the United States and Canada based on an admission of the young man that four months ago he jumped to the Canadian border. Since that time he has lived in Vermont and Massachusetts. Other admissions of violating the law, including a theft are being investigated by the police. Santon's apprehension came about late Thursday night, when he ambled into the main boiler room of the Mansfield State Training School and Hospital in Mansfield Depot and made himself at home. His actions led one of the officials at the institution to have the man taken to this city and looked up in a cell room. Santon's history as he tols it to Chief Allan McArthur was quite interesting. He is an orphan, the World war leaving him fatherless. At the age of twelve he was placed in a home in England and five years ago, at the age of fifteen while an inmate of St. Boniface's Protestant Home for Boys at Sandford Teverell, Devonshire, England, he and several other little inmates were sent to Canada where they were bound over to farmers. Santon was designated to a farm near Sherbrooke and like the story of Oliver Twist, he worked for his keeping. At the age of eighteen he was given his freedom and four months ago he crossed the border and settled in Underhill, Vt., where he worked for three months. He met a young man named Albert Tetreault and when the latter asked him to go with him and look for work in New Bedford, Santon passed a fraudulent check and took the trip. In New Bedford, the two pals did odd jobs and lived together. One day he got a job washing cars in a garage but this work was distasteful to him and he returned to his room. There he found Tetrault's watch and $1.25 in cash and taking his findings along he started to return to Canada. Somehow he went in the opposite direction and the end of a long hike found him in Mansfield Depot. The New Bedford police stated that they had not received any complaints relative to the theft of the watch but would investigate. James P. Johnson, commissionar of immigration at East Boston, Mass., was communicated with and he informed Chief McArthur to hold the young traveler until a special officer could arrive to look into the case. Santon turned the stolen watch, a Waltham make, over to the local police.

With the record-breaking rush over at the post office the employes breathed a little easier Friday and thanked their stars that it was all over. The men have been putting long hours and hard labor and they received and dispatched 2,600 and 2,000 sacks of mail respectively without breaking a single article. In letters alone there were 96,240 which were run through the numbering machine from December 18 to December 25, seven days. Simultaneously the clerks and carriers handled close to half a million packages, letters and large bundles. 6,000 packages too large to be run through the machine had to be stamped by hand. That job alone would tire out any man. Working under Postmaster Walter R. King, and Assistant Postmaster Daniel A. Sullivan a force of thirty-eight people handled the Christmas mail. Eighty-five per cent. of the huge money order business consisted of Christmas remembrances sent to Great Britain, Ireland and Poland. The employes are thankful for boxes of "smokes" received from the Max Pollock Company and from James B. Fullerton.

Charles Robinson, former resident of this city died Wednesday evening at the Hartford hospital after a short illness. He had lived at 21 Buckingham street. Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. John Dillon of North Attleboro, Mass., and Mrs. Henry Sanford of Taunton, Mass., and three sisters, Mrs. M. C. Doty of Pawtucket, R. I., Mrs. George Collins of Providence, and Mrs. Lawrence Millette of Central Falls, R. I.

Funeral services for Miss Esther L. Daw were held at Killourey Brothers' parlors on Union street Friday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock conducted the services. Burial was in the family plot at the Willimantic cemetery. There was a large attendance and beautiful floral tributes. The bearers were Howard Hinckley, Harold Rosebrooks, Alfred Girardin and William B. Sweeney.

At a special session of the police court Friday afternoon, Joseph Girard of Easthampton, Mass., was fined $10 and costs on a charge of intoxication. Girard's downfall came when he attempted to "skin" a local taxi driver out of fares. He and a party of local young men hired Hymie Brettschneider's public service car Thursday night and upon returning here about three o'clock Friday morning the men got out at Railroad street with the exception of Girard who commanded the driver to take him to a hotel. When the driver tried to collect his charges Girard said that he would pay what he himself owed but refused to go good for the remainder of the party. An argument started and while the driver called on Officers Orlando and Bombria, Girard beat it but was found hiding under steps in the rear of the Hebrew synagogue on Bank street. He was taken before the court in the morning but he pleaded not guilty and the police officers had to be called in for the special session to testify against him.

Miss Margaret O'Connell of Hartford is a guest of her sisters on Broadway for the Christmas vacation. Miss O'Connell is principal of one of the Hartford schools.

The schools closed Friday for the Christmas vacation and will open on Monday, Dec. 29th. Christmas trees and exercises were held in all of the schools.

The Ransom school has again been closed by the borough health officer, Dr. Edward J. Howland. The building was condemned for school purposes last summer, but temporary permission for its use was granted until the Christmas vacation. Before the building can again be used the town must either make repairs to meet requirements of the state department of education and the borough health officer, or must make a definite move toward erecting a suitable building.

Hattie Jackson Temple, No. 28, Pythian Sisters, held a regular meeting in Pythian hall, Tuesday evening with a large attendance. The election of officers for the ensuing year was held. Seven ladies and four Knights were initiated. After the work of the evening a banquet was held and an entertainment followed. The temple has had a very prosperous year, gaining several new members. The installation will be held Tuesday evening, Jan. 6, jointly with Oliver Wood lodge, No. 51, K. P. Miss Marion Sullivan was a visitor in Hartford over Sunday.

Charles T. Williams of Worcester was in town Tuesday.

BALTIC

The regular meeting of Hoev Assembly was held in the K. of C. rooms and was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. Woods. After regular business plans were discussed in regard to the joint installation of the officers of Mercier Assembly, of Norwich, and Hoev Assembly of Baltic, to take place Jan. 4 in the Community House in Norwich, at 2.30. The state president, Mrs. E. Riordan of Rockville, is to install the officers of both assemblies for the coming year. The members of Hoey assembly are greatly enthused over having a joint installation with the sisters of Norwich as it shows the good spirit existing in both assemblies. The members will go to Norwich on the 1 o'clock trolley. The state president expects to be a passenger on that trolley also.

CANTERBURY GREEN

Christmas and its activities have been the all engrossing subject this week. The annual Christmas celebration for Sunday school and community was held at the church Wednesday evening. A large number of people were present to enjoy the program and the unloading of the tree. A cantata, Santa's Decision, was given by the children, who were trained by Mrs. Edward Lovell and Miss Elise Hawes. The parts were well taken by all the children, as well as by Santa himself, who was impersonated by Herbert Tracy. A social time was enjoyed during the distribution of gifts and candy. Before the cantata a Book of History was given Nelson Carpenter by Mrs. Edward Lovell, the Sunday school superintendent, for the best attendance for the year.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

TESTS OF SEEDS IN LITCHFIELD COUNTY

Newly seeded clover fields on 28 farms situated in 14 towns in Litchfield county were inspected by the writer within the past few weeks. All of these were seeded with guaranteed American grown clover seed of high quality. On only two farms could the tands be considered failures and practically all of the remainder were remarkably good. Not a single complaint about germination vitality, or weed seeds was heard. In fact, many farmers volunteered high praise for this clover seed.

The past season has not been the most favorable for starting small grass plants. May and June were very wet, weeds and oats grew rank and this deprived the clover plants of moisture and other food materials. The remainder of the season was exceptionally dry and only hardy plants survived.

There were about one hundred and seventy-five other Litchfield county farmers who purchased clover seed of the same quality as the twenty-eight visited. Since the latter were chosen at random except to represent a large number of towns, we are safe in concluding that other farmers were equally successful with this high quality seed.

The large number who have found clover seed with a guaranteed statement of origin and quality highly satisfactory ought to be a convincing argument for selecting next year's seed. The domestic crop of red clover seed is low again and much low quality seed will certainly be on the market for next season. Alsike clover and alfalfa are far more plentiful but there is grave danger of low quality seed with these.—I. S. Owens, Crops Specialist.

POINTS ON THE BUYING OF LIME

As the writer sees the problem, the first question is that of deciding what form of liming material to purchase as determined by price, ease of handling and comfort of the laborers in spreading the material. Burned and hydrated limes and burnt lime products sold in New England contain from 1,000 to 1,800 pounds of oxides per ton. Lime ashes have from 700 to 1,300 pounds of oxides per ton while ground limestones contain from 900 to 1,125 pounds of oxides per ton. Futher, some oyster shells with 650 to 800 pounds of oxides are on the market.

The limestone is easy to handle and will not slake and burst the containers or fire the storage place. On the other hand, a ton of the burned and slaked product may contain from three sevenths to five-thirteenths more oxides, thus reducing the freight and hauling charge by that much. However, it should be added that the better ground limestones have as much oxide as many of the lower grade agricultural limes. One should insist upon having the analysis of the material before purchasing. It may be added that the ground limestone should all pass a twenty mesh sieve and none of the finer material should be removed after crushing.

Ground limestone can now be purchased at $3.25 per ton in bulk by the carload. In paper bags the same will cost $4.75 and in cloth bags $5.25 per ton at the plant. The saving is $1.50 or $2.00 per ton by buying in bulk. On a twenty-five ton carload this amounts to $37.50 saving over the paper bags or $50 saving over the cloth bag purchase. These sums represent real savings and should be considered. Limestone in bulk is not difficult to shovel into a tight cart, truck or wagon box and then to dump for storage. Further, paper bags are liable to tear and in the end necessitate shoveling.

The winter months are a suitable time for hauling the limestone or other lime material so as to avoid the rush at seeding time. It may even be spread where the land is fall plowed ready for the spring harrowing for seeding the oats and clover.

The important points then are to buy as high analyzing materials as possible for the same money; to save as much as possible in the carriage and charges for bags and to buy and draw the material when labor is not pressing during the fall and winter. Now is the time to get prices and to arrange with the neighbor to use part of the carload so that two farms may have good clover.—Henry Dorsey in Connecticut Agricultural College Review.

DAIRY CLUB BOY GETS MILK PRODUCTION

Fourteen thousand nine pounds of milk in ten and one-half months from a second calf Holstein heifer is a record made by Arnold Manning, a club boy of North Franklin last year. This is equivalent to 6,514 quarts which would bring $455.98 if sold at seven cents per quart. Allowing one pint of milk per person per day, which is a little more than the average milk consumed by city people in Connecticut, this one heifer furnished enough milk during that ten and one-half months for 41 persons.

The heifer, Eveline Soldene Johanna, is a purebred Holstein which was bought by Arnold's father as a calf three years ago. Arnold did much of the milking and all of the record keeping on this heifer and three other purebreds even though he was attending the Windham County High school some six miles away in Willimantic. All of these animals were milked twice a day, were run on rather poor pastures during the summer and were fed only grass hay and a grain ration during the winter months. No silage has ever been grown on this place and no beet pulp or other succulent feed was purchased until this fall. The conditions under which this heifer made her record make it all the more remarkable.

Three other purebred Holstein heifers were in the barn with Eveline, two of which were milking with their first calves and the third with her second calf. These three heifers together with Eveline gave an average for twelve months of 11,176 pounds of milk each. At seven cents per quart these four purebred heifers produce $1,454.96 worth of milk in one year. This shows what good breeding combined with the kind of care that the 4-H Dairy club members give, even with no silage or other succulent feed and a old barn, can do for production and profits. In spite of the low price of milk last spring both Arnold and his father found that they could still make milk at a profit.

Eveline at her best milked only 35 to 37 quarts of milk a day. She was a very persistent milker though and was still making 15 or 16 quarts daily at the end of nine and one-half months when Arnold started to dry her off. She was bred to come in in less than 13 months from her preceding calving as were the other purebreds in the barn with her.

This little herd averaged 33 pounds of milk per day for the four purebred heifers in the barn for the entire year. During the month of August, 1924, the four milking cows in the barn averaged 37 pounds of milk per day each. The entire herd is characterized by persistency in production.

Arnold is now doing his second years' work as a 4-H Dairy Club member. He has attended the Junior Short Course at Storrs for the last two years, took a one day judging trip in 1923 and went through New Haven county this summer on a two-day judging team before he is too old for 4-H Dairy Club work.

BANISHING THE POULTRY PARASITES

A long winter generally means a weakened vitality to all animals, and anything that can be done to remove obstacles and supply the essentials should be done. One of the great obstacles to successful poultry husbandry is the invasion of intestinal parasites. These creatures flourish within the birds winter or summer, taking their toll unseen and irrespective of weather conditions. They are worse than potato beetles, which are honest enough to do their mischief in plain view, and work just eight hours a day but for six weeks of the year. The intestinal parasites infesting poultry have a union code of their own—"24 hours per day and 365 days per year get all you can, why worry about the poultry keeper's profits." At the Ontario Agricultural College the intestinal parasites infesting the poultry flocks were banished for good and forever 18 months ago. How was it done?

The method—A gallon of a mixture of wheat and oats, to which is added a small teaspoonful of concentrated lye, is cooked slowly for two hours and allowed to cool. The birds are given their ordinary feed one morning and then nothing else until the next morning when they are given as much of the lye mixture as they will eat with plenty of water. This is done two or three times during the season at intervals of one month.

The large round worm infesting poultry may be as short as one inch and the caecum worm only three-tenths of an inch, and one of tape worms only one-fiftieth of an inch long, very easy to overlook.

GREEN FEED FOR POULTRY

Now that the poultry are off the range and no longer benefit by the picking of fresh green feed at liberty, a substitute should be provided. Mangels, kale, cabbage and sprouted oats do very well, supply in part the very necessary vitamines, A and D, so essential to proper nutrition. A little attention to a seemingly unimportant point frequently means the difference between success and failure in breeding stock.

World's Biggest Basket

It is said that the Ponca Indians, scattered remnants of a tribe that still live in Mendocino County, Calif., some time ago made a monster basket, which is declared to be the largest in the world. The lower or main part of this basket is composed of osier twigs very skilfully intertwined. Between the warp and woof the interstices are very small—so that the huge basket will hold any kind of fine grain.

Many similar, though much smaller receptacles—willow baskets—are made by these Indians and are used as granaries to hold provisions for the Winter store. Mendocino County abounds in oak forests, which produce a great harvest of acorns, of which the Red Man, his squaw and papooses are very fond. Hundreds of bushels of the acorns are annually gathered and stored away in baskets for the long rainy days. Other kinds of stores—grains—are also placed in these baskets. These willow granaries are generally mounted on a rude platform.

The immense basket mentioned is 6 feet from the bottom to rim and 25 feet in circumference.

The wood the mangrave tree, which is found in French Guiana, is declared by investigators to be a wood that will not rot. The grain of the wood is so close as to practically exclude all moisture. Its density is placed at 110, as against 40 for fir and 70 for oak.

Moving Pictures at "Y" Sunday.

An intensely stirring tale of Revolutionary days with the dangers and the worries incident to the times will be portrayed in feature moving pictures at the local Y. M. C. A. on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. This picture is more instructive than history, and more thrilling than fiction. It is an impressive visualization of the life of Nathan Hale. The scene opens in the peaceful little schoolhouse where Hale is instructor. Soon trouble with England arises, and the school house is used as a meeting place for the revolutionists; Hale joins heartily and is so capable and enthusiastic in the cause that he is made a captain. At the crucial point in the war, he is sent into the enemy's quarters at the risk of his life. Hale undertakes a series of adventures which lead him into much trouble, and he utters the inspiring words of patriotism, "I only regret that I have but one life to give for my country." Both men and women are cordially invited, and boys and girls are admitted provided they are accompanied by adults.

The pictures will be shown in the large gymnasium, and the doors will be opened at 3.30 p. m.

United Congregational Church.

Services of the week at the United Congregational church will be as follows:

The Pequot Camp Fire Girls are to meet at the Community House at half past three o'clock, Monday afternoon.

The annual Christmas party of the church school will be held at the Community House at 7.30 Tuesday evening. There will be an entertainment by the Colonial Quartette, a Christmas tree, candy for all but adults, and refreshments.

The usual New Year's meeting for prayer and consecration will be held in the church school rooms at 8 o'clock on Thursday morning, Jan. 1.

The Pequot Camp Fire will hold a business meeting at the Community House at 7.15 on Friday evening.

The Philathea Christmas party is to be held on Friday evening, Jan. 2 at the home of Mrs. Philip O. Roberts, 89 Lafayette street.

Grace Church, Yantic.

Church activities at Grace church, Yantic, next week, will include the following:

Palace.

While there was an almost country-wide discussion not so long ago about moving the "movies" away from Hollywood—to points south, east or north—one big producing company that hadn't had much to say in this general discussion actually did move an entire motion picture studio unit across the deserts and into the mountains of Arizona.

Transplanting a film studio is a tremendous task at the best, but Sol Lesser, president of Principal Pictures Corporation decided that his production of "The Mine With the Iron Door," Harold Bell Wright's new and tremendously popular novel, should be made under the personal supervision of the famous author, and right in his own backyard, as it were.

The locale of the story of "The Mine With the Iron Door" is in the Catalina mountain country near Tucson, Arizona. It was Mr. Wright's wish, fully concurred in by Mr. Lesser, that the story for the screen should be photographed on the very ground and in the atmosphere that gave the inspiration for this biggest of the many best sellers of this widely read author.

And so Mr. Lesser transferred the entire Principal Pictures unit into the Canada del Oro (Canyon of Gold) and on a big ranch near Oracle, some forty miles from Tucson, his company of players camped for the two months required to get all the main scenes of the story.

Broadway Theater

Thomas Meighan comes to the Broadway theater Sunday in a Paramount screen version of Tongues of Flame, the last novel by the late Peter Clark Macfarlane—a Joseph Henabery production with Bessie Love, Eileen Percy and others playing in support of the star.

The picture shows how Boland, an unscrupulous business man, and Scanlon, his tricky lawyer, steal a large tract of land from the Indians. Through Boland's efforts [illegible] towns spring up on the land and thirty years later Boland, rich and powerful, rules the towns and everyone in them.

At the close of the Great war, "Hell Fire" Harrington, the role played by Tom Meighan, opens a law office in one of the towns. He falls in love with Boland's daughter, Billie, and for a time works for Boland, wilfully blind to the latter's unethical transactions. Then a little half-breed school teacher who is in love with Harrington, opens his eyes to the fact that Boland is using him as a tool to swindle the Indians for the second time.

There's action-plus in Tongues of Flame, drama, heart-appeal and all the rest. Meighan has never done anything quite like it before.

If you're a Meighan fan, you'll see this one!

The story was adapted for the screen by Townsend Martin. Others in the cast include Cyril Ring, Nick Thompson, Burton Churchill, John Milton, Leslie Stowe, Jerry Devine and Kate Mayhew.

Comedy, Kinogram and orchestra are the short subjects.

Watch for special New Year's program.

Breed Theater

One of the most thrilling love stories ever written is brought to the screen at the Breed theater, where His Hour, the Metro-Goldwyn picturization of the Elinor Glyn story will be shown for four days starting Sunday.

A young English widow, Tamara Loraine meets Gritsko, a Russian Prince. She is prim and conventional due to the face that she has been reader as one of the English aristocracy and her emotions are hidden far beneath a frigid exterior. Gritsko, on the other hand, is wild, impulsive, handsome and the most beloved man in all Russia. Tamara is attracted to him, but resolves not to fall under his spell as every other woman has. She intrigues him by her distant charm which is different from anything he has ever before encountered.

By her pronounced aloofness she spurs him to deeds of devilry. She openly dislikes him, but is really hypnotised by the brilliant fascinating Prince.

The affair reaches a climax and a declaration of love is forced from the lips of the proud Tamara.

Alleen Pringle plays the leading feminine role, while John Gilbert is cast as the Prince. They both hold by their dynamic personalities and Elinor Glyn in choosing them as her [illegible] have made a selection which should be generally popular.

[illegible] staged and brought out realism and richness. The production was presented by Louis B. Mayer.

Topics of the Day and a comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

Today's bill consists of Blanche Sweet in Those Who Dance, Larry Semon Trouble Brewing, Days of 49 and Pathe news. Continuous show to from 1:30 to 10:30 P. M.

Three men died in New York city hospitals, four are in an extremely serious condition at Bellevue hospital and altogether twenty three men were taken to the latter institution suffering from the effects of drinking poisonous liquor.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The new year holds promise of a bit of added prosperity for the town of Killingly. Indications are that the Whitestone mill of the American Woolen company at Elmville is to resume operations. The plant has been closed since the early spring of this year. In the meantime the plant has been equipped with automatic looms and otherwise given such attention as was required to prepare for operation in the near future.

It is understood that Thomas Hope of the American Woolen company's plant at Moosup is to have supervision of the plant in conjunction with his duties at Moosup. It is also said that the finishing of the goods produced at the Elmville plant will be handled at Moosup.

Installation of automatic looms at the Whitestone mill is taken as indicating that the multiple loom system of operation is to be introduced at Elmville. If this be the case, the weaver, operating several looms, will be able to make a very generous week's pay. No indication has been given as to the exact date when the plant will resume operations, but it is believed that manufacturing will be going on there soon after the first of the new year. This will be good news to the town of Killingly, which during the general period of depression in the textile industry has been more fortunate than most textile towns, in that its plants have been idle or on short time much less than has been the rule in most towns and cities where the mill business is one of the big essentials in considering prosperity.

The funeral of Mrs. Luce Pincine was held at her home in Plainfield Friday morning, with a high mass in Woonsocket at 10 o'clock and burial in that city. Numbers of relatives and friends from Plainfield attended the services. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

The proposal for the re-establishment of a motor bus line between Danielson and Putnam, supplying service incidentally to Attawaugan, which is of all regularly established transportation lines, bids fair to reopen an issue that was hard fought out several years ago and eventually was concluded with the elimination of the bus service in favor of the existing trolley line service between Danielson and Putnam. The issue of a bus line between Putnam and Danielson as a competitor of the trolley line is always an interesting one to a great many people in the territory. The outcome of the latest effort to re-establish the busses will be watched with more than passing interest.

The blacksmiths have been getting busy of late, the past few days, ice and snow having brought a rush of calk work for them. While the great number of motor vehicles tends to create the impression that few horses are in use in this territory, such is not the case, thousands of horses are owned in this and immediate surrounding territory and they require just as much attention, as to sharp shoes, as in days gone by.

Frederick Oats received a Christmas gift of a half dozen poinsettias forwarded to him from Winter Haven by Henry C. Babson, who, following his custom, is at Winter Haven for the season. The flowers arrived here in practically perfect condition. Mr. Oats presented the flowers to the Methodist church for use in the decorations.

Miss Blanche Smith was at Huntington, L. I., to spend Christmas with relatives.

PUTNAM

At a dinner given Christmas evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Silas M. Wheelock, the engagement of their youngest daughter, Elizabeth, to James Roy Fulton, was announced. Miss Wheelock is a graduate of Putnam High school, of the Mary Lyon school at Swarthmore, Pa., and of Simmons college, Boston, having been a member of the Simmons senior class of 1924. Mr. Fulton is a graduate of the University of Washington and is now a student of Harvard Medical school, class of 1925.

On Christmas day an automobile owned and driven by Byron Tefft, of Quadic collided on Mechanics street with one owned by Mary J. Rooney of South Willington, and driven by Herbert R. Slye of Stafford Springs. No one was hurt and the cars were not badly damaged. The slippery condition of the street is given as the reason for the accident.

A despatch from Washington reads —Depositors in the failed First National bank of Putnam, Conn., will not get a dividend until some days after Christmas. It is understood that the first dividend will be paid around the first of the year. Treasury officials here are working on the matter and are about ready to mail out checks. They will not say what per cent of the total the first dividend will be. Two or three smaller dividends will follow the coming one. About a month ago treasury officials hoped that the depositors would get a first dividend in time for Christmas."

Notwithstanding the application for injunctions on the part of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad against the running of competitive motor busses, and the protests made by officials of the road against the granting of a charter to the Farnum Bus Line, the announcement is made that the railroad is considering the abandonment of 60 miles of local lines. Among the branch lines named is one from East Thompson to Webster which serves part of the territory that the Farnum Bus Line would cover.

At the town farm, Christmas, the inmates were served a roast pork dinner. There were gifts from Putnam Lodge of Elks, from the clerks of the Byrne Store and the Bugbee & Wulf store. Miss Katherine Byrne gave personal attention to seeing that every inmate was remembered. The Putnam News company contributed several quarts of ice cream.

Mrs. Jennie Smith and daughter, Miss Ethel Smith, of Bridgeport, are guests this week of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hyde.

There is excellent skating on Perry's pond and the young people are taking advantage of it.

TWO CIVIL WAR COMRADES ARE JOINED IN DEATH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, Dec. 26.—Eugene T. Williams, 80, another colored veteran of the Civil war, died Christmas afternoon at his home at Harrisville, a few yards from the home of Charles Munroe, also colored, and a soldier in the Civil war, whose death occurred a week ago, due to injuries received in an automobile accident. Mr. Williams attended the funeral of his friend but had not left the house since then, because of physical infirmities. Thursday afternoon he grew worse and developed acute indigestion which ended in his death in a few hours.

Mr. Williams was born at Barre, Mass., Aug. 26, 1844. His parents moved to Oxford, Mass., from where Mr. Williams enlisted in the 54th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, the same regiment to which Mr. Munroe belonged, although not in the same company. He served three years in the war and took part in many important battles and minor engagements.

He returned to Oxford at the end of his enlistment and in 1864 married Miss Elizabeth Hemingway of Gardner, Mass. They have lived together 60 years, 40 years of that time in Harrisville, which is a suburb of Putnam, north of Woodstock avenue. Mr. Williams was an expert shoe cutter and most of his working days were spent at that trade.

Besides his wife, five children survive him—George H. Williams of Providence, R. I., Alonzo M. Williams of Harrisville and Eugene P. Williams of Danielson, Mrs. Mary E. Woodson of West Groton, Mass., and Mrs. Celia E. Woodson of Danielson.

The lives of Mr. Williams and Mr. Munroe touched at many different angles. Both were born in Massachusetts in 1844, both were employed in the same shoe factory at Oxford, Mass., both served in the same regiment during the war between the states and for forty years they were friends and neighbors at Harrisville.

OLD YANKEE WHISTLER HAD ENTERTAINED GRANT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, Dec. 26.—Charles B. Montgomery, of Oneco, pays the following tribute to George H. Taylor who died here suddenly ten days ago:

"Perhaps there is no place on earth where Yankee Whistler was better known than in Packerville, so pardon me for saying a word about the passing of the old man. George H. Taylor, father of (Souvenir) Elily Taylor, was known when I was a boy as Yankee Whistler. He drove a Yankee notions wagon through Connecticut and Rhode Island, and was one of the best fellows, greatest story tellers and most expert whistlers that ever lived.

I remember following him for ten miles, back in 1867, to hear him whistle the Mocking Bird. He not only whistled over this part of the country, often stopping to take up a collection to give to some needy person, but when P. T. Barnum had Tom Thumb on the old circus grounds in Danielsonville he whistled for the little fellow at Barnum's request. He whistled the Arkansaw Traveler for President Grant up in Woodstock, and entertained Henry Ward Beecher on the porch of the Mortlake House in Brooklyn.

"The Mocking Bird, Home Sweet Home, The Last Rose of Summer, and the Arkansaw Traveler were his masterpieces, as I remember. Sometimes when Gert. Cady got tied down in Plainfield, he'd whistle Money Musk, Jenny Lind's Favorite Polka, and the Virginia Reel. The world was brightened considerably in the old days by Yankee Whistler, and he has gone to his well-earned rest and peace."

PLAINFIELD

Driving for the motorist is dangerous since a thin coating of ice is on the state highways. Chains are in great demand. Sand has been sprinkled through the main street and on the main highway through the town.

Miss Marion Cleland, secretary at Storrs college, is able to be about after being confined to her home the past week with an acute attack of indigestion.

The class of 1918 of Plainfield High school is planning a big class reunion and dance. The last reunion was held at the home of Miss Helen Gallup six years ago.

Plainfield has the crossword puzzle craze and in most of the families the crossword puzzle comes first and then the daily news. It is claimed that this town has the champ wizard dopester.

People are beginning to wonder wonder where all the commotion about the new fire apparatus has gone. Plainfield surely is not waiting for another disastrous fire to put the thing over. How about including it in the New Year's resolutions?

All of Plainfield's needy were well taken care of during the Christmas period, as Santa Claus remembered all the little folks. The Christmas spirit prevailed through the town.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wood, who has been a patient at Memorial hospital in Worcester, undergoing an operation for bone cure, returned home Christmas morning with his parents.

The children of the village are more than enjoying the school vacation, as the ice is in perfect condition for hockey games and other ice sports.

Dealers in ice hope that they are assured of a good supply from the surrounding ponds. It has been reported that the ice on some ponds is from seven to eight inches thick.

Everybody is talking and thinking basketball. Every day the boys practice in the Community house, from the youngsters to the big fellows.

Plainfield Community House association has about 580 members. Renewed efforts of the membership drive committee will probably bring the membership up to 1,500 by the first of the year.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Mercier of New Haven are spending the holidays with local relatives.

NORWICH TOWN

The annual Christmas exercises of the First M. E. Sunday school were held Thursday evening in the vestry. A fine program of recitations, tableaux, carols and instrumental music was given. Mrs. Richard Carter was in charge. The program rendered included: Prayer, by pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich; recitations, Welcome Wreath, Ruth Miller; Under My Christmas Tree, Marion Miller; Santa Little Girl, May Smith; exercise, Cradle Roll Boby, Dorothy Gracie and Mrs. Earl Miller; recitation, The Bells Helen Rudd; exercise, What Stands for Christmas, teacher) Mrs. Theodora Brown and class, Isabell Gimball, Doris and Muriel and Clayton Rose, Arthur Bennett, Lynwood Aldriche, John Carter; piano solo, Holy Night, Doris Rose; recitations, The Christmas Tree, Arthur Bennett; His Story, Mark Aldriche; Bethlehem, Claude Stanton; exercise, The Christmas Express, primary children. Blossom Ward, Mary Waters, Norma Rose, Elmer Myers, Clarence Smith, Lester Gifford; exercise, Christmas Memories, in four tableaux, Miss Grace Mitchell was the fairy and did the reciting. Mrs. J. B. Aldrich was grandmother.

Tableaux No. 1 showed a group of little children hanging up their stockings, while the carolers sang O Little Town of Bethlehem.

Tableaux No. 2, a group of carolers, singing Holy Night. The carolers were Hazel Cruthers, Florence Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Irish, Lewis Aldriche, Leroy Miner.

Tableaux No. 3, Young Mother and baby, Mrs. Earl Miller and daughter Gracie. Mrs. Lewis Irish sang Away in the Manger.

Tableaux No. 4, a mother surrounded by a group of little children; a small Christmas tree. The carolers sang, Joy to the World.

Tableau No. 4, all who participated in the Christmas memories; they sang O Come All Ye Faithful. Miss Agnes Miller was at the piano.

Exercise, To Tell Good Night, Virginia Ward. At this time Santa Claus arrived and helped distribute the presents from a large tree in the corner of the room.

Members of the Johnson Home family were made happy, Christmas Day, as everyone in the home received gifts from relatives and friends. At 12 o'clock under the supervision of the efficient matron, Mrs. May Rollins, an appetizing dinner was served to thirteen, three members having taken dinner outside. The following menu was provided for the entire family of sixteen: Roast chicken with dressing, mashed potatoes, mashed turnip, creamed onions, hubbard squash, cranberry sauce, squash pie, fruit pudding, oranges, grapes, apples, nuts and candy.

Those absent included Mrs. Philena Hough-Noland, who was entertained at the home of her brother, Wm. Hough of West Town street; Mrs. Agnes Blackburn, a guest at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Edward J. Jones of Bliss place, and Miss Sarah Armstrong who had dinner at a Norwich restaurant. This is a custom adopted by Miss Armstrong on holidays, when an elaborate dinner is always provided at the home. The chickens used for the dinner were raised at the home.

The Johnson Home committee remembered each with a card, as did also Dr. and Mrs. Edward H. Linnell. Home Chapter of the King's Daughters presented each a beautiful box of note paper with book of stamps. Following out a custom of the past few years, the Johnson Home was presented a gift of $2 from Miss Dorothy Adams of Westport, in memory of her aunt, Miss Sarah Bartlett, a former member of the home family. This amount is to be used for the benefit of the home and this year Mrs. Rollins purchased fruit with it for the dinner.

The annual Christmas exercises of the Sunday school of the First Congregational church were held on Friday evening at 7 o'clock. A program of songs and recitations was as follows: Hymn, Hark the Herald Angels Sing, school; It Came Upon the Midnight Clear, school; exercise, primary department; song, Away in a Manger; Bells of Christmas, Anita Potter; A Christmas Ship, James Kies and Fred Ross; Smiles, Phyllis Hinrichs; Do You Know, Charles Browning, Kenneth Sterry, Martha Chapman; The Christmas Doctor, Edward Eccleston; Lullaby, song by Anita Potter and Betty Browning; The Stable Was Humble, Russell Edmond; I Have a Christmas Wish, Junior LaPierre; Merry Christmas, Woodruff Sullivan, Joseph Godfrey, Vincent Godfrey, Frank Jordan, John Browning; The Christmas Rule, Everett Eccleston; The Christmas Fairy, Betty Browning; recitation, Charlotte LaPierre; songs by primary department; exercise, Five Bells for Christmas, by Miss Louise Bailey's class of girls; hymn, O Come All Ye Faithful, school; exercise, by Miss Elizabeth Avery's class of girls; song, The King's Birthday, Rachel Avery, Fanny LaPierre, Rose Schwenk, Beatrice Smith; recitations, Jesus Our Hope, Rachel Avery, Rose Schwenk; We Bring Him Today, Fanny LaPierre, piano; prayer, Dwight Avery, superintendent of Sunday school, offering taken for Near East Relief fund.

A big Christmas tree was the chief attraction and was decorated with colored electric lights and many gifts. Each member of the Sunday school received from Santa Claus a gift also box of candy and an orange; closing hymn, O Little Town of Bethlehem. The committee in charge of the Christmas exercises was Bernice Underwood chairman, Rose Durr, Marion Bailey, Ralph Marsh and Helen Avery.

Benjamin Houlihan of Washington, D. C., was a guest over Christmas at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Houlihan of Norwich Town.

Miss Mary Buckley and Miss Sarah Buckley of Peck's Corner, are passing the Christmas season with their sisters, Miss Nellie Buckley, D. C., and Miss Alice Buckley of New York, also at the home of relatives in New Jersey.

Large congregations attended both masses Christmas morning at the Sacred Heart church. After wishing all a Merry Christmas the pastor, Rev. Charles W. Brennan read the gospel of the day from St. Luke, second chapter.

Under the direction of the organist, Miss Elizabeth A. Malone, a specially arranged programme was carried out. The children's choir sang Christmas hymns at the 7.30 mass. At the nine o'clock mass Rosewig's Mass was given by the choir, Mrs. Morgan Strohin, Henry Jarvis and Leroy Hubbard sustaining the solo parts.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament followed the last mass. It is expected that the Christmas music will be repeated at the Sunday morning masses.

The church was artistically decorated with roses, lilies, carnations, flowering plants, and arranged about the altar were evergreen wreaths, which with the lighted candles proved most effective.

Local institutions and many of the homes around Norwich Town were serenaded Christmas eve, by a large company of young people mostly representatives of the First Congregational church, who, accompanied by the pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, sang Christmas carols the greater part of the evening.

A number of the homes were brilliantly illuminated all along the route, either by lighted candles in the windows, or by electricity, and it was chiefly at those places that the voices of the singers were heard with pleasure from those within, many of whom are elderly or shut-ins. The start was made from the home of Clyde M. Beebe on East Town street, and continued through that street to Huntington avenue and around to Peck's Corner, down upper Washington street to Harland road, returning through Town street, the last stop being at the Johnson home.

The institutions visited were the Sheltering Arms, and the Johnson Home. Some of the stops included the several houses at the foot of Norwich Town Green, Bacheler homestead, houses on Huntington lane and Peck's corner, the Gilman homestead, Mrs. S. I. Bonney's on Harland road and the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb on Town street, these with the Congregational parsonage on Elm avenue and several locations on Washington street, Bliss and Julian terrace, being among the specially lighted homes.

Under the leadership of Harold Bailey, of Hartford, the following carols were sung: Silent Night, O Come All Ye Faithful, We Three Kings, Good King Wenceslas, The First Noel, God Rest Ye, Merry Gentlemen and O Little Town of Bethlehem.

Besides Rev. Mr. Bailey, and the leader, Harold Bailey, the others who sang were: Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Hitchon, Jr., Miss Helen Avery, Miss Marion L. Bailey, Miss Louise P. Bailey, Miss Marjory Merry, Miss Ida Beebe, Miss Elizabeth Avery, Miss Rose K. Durr, Miss Doris Browning, Robert Avery, also Mr. Dewey of Hartford, a guest at the Bailey home. After the singers had completed their numbers, by special invitation, they went to the Merry home on New London turnpike where sandwiches and coffee were served.

Rev. and Mrs. Harry Pettis of Elm avenue presented the children of the Rock Nook Home for Christmas, a gift of 200 beautiful stereoscopic views, which include some of the very finest made. This valuable and much appreciated collection comprises a variety of views of scenery, historical events, people, customs, the manners, also many views of industries, showing silk, hemp, iron and coal mining as well as tea, coffee, cocoa, as grown and marketed.

L. Stanley Gay, draughtsman for the Sea Sled Co., of West Mystic, was the guest over Wednesday night of his father, Edwin S. Gay, of Judian terrace. Christmas day, Mr. Gay and his son were guests at the home of Mr. Gay's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice E. Gay, of North Waterford.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Golkowske and little son, Bill, of Whitneyville, formerly of Norwich Town, were callers Christmas afternoon at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Hitchon of 327 Washington street, and their son, Howard, who is attending the holiday recess at his home, were Christmas guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hitchon's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wright of Medford Heights, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Park and son, Wilfred, of Preston City, were guests Christmas at the home of Mrs. Park's father, Edwin R. Scott, of Norwich Town.

FORMER WESTERLY BOY ON GOV. BINGHAM'S STAFF

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Westerly, R. I., Dec. 26.—Again a Westerly boy has been named a member of a governor's staff and this time a naval man and attached to the staff of Governor-elect Bingham. Several days ago Governor-elect Pothier announced the appointment of Captain John Datson of Westerly as a member of his personal staff. Christmas day the governor of Connecticut announced the appointment of Naval Aid Lieutenant Commander Nelson W. Pickering of Ansonia, a graduate of the Annapolis Military Academy, in the navy during the World war and now in command of Connecticut's Naval Militia, in his boyhood days Commander Nelson Pickering made his home at Avondale, R. I., with his parents, and attended the public high school in Westerly before leaving town.

Stars in Paris

There are many stars that are double says Nature Magazine That is, they are made up of stars revolving around one another. Most of these pairs are of contrasting colors, one blue and the other gold, or one red and the other green. Albireo is considered to be one of the finest of the pairs that are visible in small telescopes.

POETRY

GENERAL SUMMARY.

We are very slightly changed
From the semi-apes who ranged India's prehistoric clay.
Whoso drew the longest bow
Ran his brother down, you know,
As we run men down today.

"Dowb," the first of all his race,
Met the mammoth face to face
On the lake or in the cave,
Stole the steadiest canoe,
Ate the quarry others slew.
Died—and took the finest grave.

When they scratched the reindeer-bone
Someone made the sketch his own,
Filched it from the artist—then,
Even in those early days,
Won a simple Viceroy's praise
Through the toil of other men.

Ere they hewed the Sphinx's visage,
Favoritism governed kissage,
Even as it does in this age.

Who shall doubt the secret hid
Under Cheops' pyramid
Was that the contractor did
Cheops out of several millions?
Or that Joseph's sudden rise
To Comptroller of Supplies
Was a fraud of monstrous size
On King Pharaoh's swart civilians?

Thus, the artless songs I sing
Do not deal with anything
New or never said before.
As it was in the beginning
Is today official sinning
And shall be for evermore.
—Rudyard Kipling.

NATURE'S BED.

The moaning trees dropped down their clothes
And naked stood in shivering rows,
Beneath, a golden couch uprose,
Where drowsy Nature might repose,

A mass of shining red and gold
Their garments fell, fold on fold,
The busy wind the bed did mold
With fingers roughened with the cold.

Then Nature sought her lowly bed,
White blankets drew above her head
And dreamed, while through her kingdom sped
The giant Winter's martial tread.

She dreamed of gleaming, gracious morn,
And heeded not the night forlorn,
But nourished in her sleeping form
The germ of life for springs unborn.
—Mary E. Hayhurst.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Lot's wife hasn't anything on me," said convict No. 47793 as he turned to a pile of stone.—Notre Dame Juggler.

Do you think Alice is as old as she looks?

Not that old. But she is about as old as her mother looks.—Kansas City Star.

She—Jack has asked me to play tennis with him again this afternoon.

Her rival—He told me the doctor advised him to exercise with a dumbbell every day.—Boston Transcript.

Wifey—I acknowledge that I have faults, and am cross sometimes, dear, but if I had the last two years to live over again I'd marry you just the same.

Hubby—I have my doubts about it, dear.—Stray Stories.

Lawyer—Well, I've proved that you are crazy and you are, thanks to me, a free man. My fee is $5,000.

Client—But I'm not that crazy.—Exchange.

Stage Director—All right, now run up the curtain.

Stage Hand—Say, what do you think I am, a squirrel?—Northwestern Purple Parrot.

Is this a first class restaurant?

Yes, but we'll serve you just the same.—Brown Jug.

Faith—The young man who sends flowers to a girl who has broken a date on account of illness.

Hope—The man who calls a girl for a date at 8:30 o'clock Saturday evening.

Charity—The girl who suggests they go to the movies.—Northwestern Purple

And how do you like our town? said the Continental landlord to his American visitor.

"I hate it," was the reply. "It's as hot as the nether regions, and just as uncomfortable."

"Ah!" said the landlord, admiringly. "Is there anywhere you Americans haven't been?"—London Telegraph.

Argentina has recently become a heavy purchaser of United States eggs in the shell, exports to that country having increased from 31,800 dozen in 1922 to 740,100 dozen in 1923 and to 1,881,719 dozen the first nine months of 1924. The poultry industry in Argentina is not yet specialized, and although efforts are being made in that direction, it is hardly probable that Argentina will produce for some time enough eggs to supply its own requirements.

A new locomotive, designed to meet special switching conditions in freight yards, consists of a complete electrical plant on wheels. It is smokeless and silent. An oil engine is directly connected with the generator and the current made by the latter is passed to four motors, each geared to one of the axles. The engine is of 300-horse power, burning oil, and each of the four motors on the four axles has a rating of something less than 100 horse power. As ordinarily used in the switching service, this engine consumes from 20 cents to 28 cents' worth of fuel oil an hour.

THE BOBB'S SWITCH TRAGEDY.

It is a horrible story that comes from Hobart, Okla., telling of 32 lives lost in the Babb's Switch schoolhouse fire where Christmas exercises were being held, where that dangerous combination of lighted candles and a Christmas tree renews again the warning against such a fire hazard and where the schoolhouse with the single entrance and the door opening in emphasizes the menace of such a firetrap.

It is too late now for the repetition of warnings to do any good to those who have perished, but it is timely that a sufficient amount of thought should be directed to this tragedy to have its full meaning understood by others who may be disposed in the future to create just such a condition.

No worse combination could hardly be pictured. It is presumed that the small community had no other means of lighting the Christmas tree, but how much better it would have been to have done without such a feature than to have sacrificed so many lives. When lighted candles and the inflammable material which goes with the tree and decorations come in contact it is unusual if a fire doesn't result. Use all reasonable care and as in this case it requires only the slightest misstep to cause excitement, confusion and death.

Add to that a situation where a packed school room has but one door and all its windows barred and all the situation needs is a door that opens in and a crowd pressed against it seeking exit and no better illustration of the need of making the most of every opportunity for fire prevention is conceivable.

The death of more than twice as many in the Collinswood schoolhouse 16 years ago resulted in immediate steps for safer public buildings throughout the country, for doors opening outward and for more than one exit plainly marked. Apparently these things were not considered necessary at Babb's Switch, but every such distressing affair shows that there is always a first time and safety lies in taking the precautions which have been shown necessary by the experience of others. How many more such tragedies as that at Babb's Switch will be necessary in order to bring a greater respect for the obvious need for greater safety in public buildings and the recognition of the danger of Christmas trees and candles?

TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS.

The abandonment of transportation service by any railroad is something which is bound to get close attention on the part of the public, before it goes very far. While the Boston & Maine has indicated its intention to discontinue more than 250 miles of road the idea is not looked upon with favor by all who are interested in that railroad system. It can therefore expect opposition, quite the same as it would have encountered opposition had it decided to fight it out without abandoning the non-paying lines. In fact it is because it is faced with competition which makes it unprofitable that it is disposed to favor the suggested plan.

On the New Haven system there are short lines which are operated under much the same conditions as on the Boston & Maine, but the New Haven, though putting on gas cars, busses and auto trucks, is not ready to abandon service. It proposes in fact to make a fight against the invasion of its field of service by other transportation lines.

In either instance it is a case where the public is vitally concerned, and it is bound to be called upon to see that its interests are protected, both by refusing to be abandoned unless there is shown to be real reason for it and by refusing to ask a transportation company to provide free service. It also must determine whether it wants a dependable and responsible transportation system or a multitude of the other kind.

When the railroads talk about the abandonment of existing lines it cannot fail to start the public to thinking as to whether it has failed to do its part. If it has withdrawn patronage and made it financially unwise for railroads to operate certain lines it cannot offer much serious objection to abandonment. If on the other hand it desires to prevent abandonment it seems to be clearly set forth that no little responsibility rests upon its attitude in the way of patronage. In the case of either of the railroad systems this phase of the transportation system is bound to come to the front.

STATE POLICE.

Experience is a great teacher, and this is now being admitted by the governor of New York who, some five years ago, opposed the continuance of a state constabulary in the Empire state. Action was taken contrary to his advice and efforts. In the intervening years he has had an opportunity to see where he was wrong and where others were right. He has not only had a chance to witness the good work being done by the state police but he has been brought to the realization that it is an efficient and much needed organization.

He was ready to throw the state police into the discard without a fair trial for back in 1919 he set forth in one of his addresses as governor to the legislature of his state, "I believe you can abolish the department of state police. There seems to be no justification for its further existence. The return to the state is not commensurate with its cost."

There are many ways of cutting expenses. It is possible to slash in without much regard for what is being done and cry down expenditures for this and that, or it is possible to distinguish between what is necessary and what is extravagance. Governor Smith was out to cut expenses without realizing what he was doing. He now says, "The man, woman or child who calls out the state troopers, gets service and gets it quickly—not as a postmortem ceremony." "After seven and a half years service it stands today above criticism."

The availability and flexibility of the state police cannot fail to appeal to those states which have them. It is a valuable organization and of particular service to those towns where the old, slow moving and inexperienced system of fighting crime was little better than nothing. Cities also find the state police of great aid in running down criminals and keeping lawless conditions in the country at a minimum. The experience in New York state is in keeping with that in Connecticut and other commonwealths.

THE ST. LAWRENCE PROJECT.

Not much has been heard of late concerning the plan to make the St. Lawrence to the great lakes a waterway that would accommodate large vessels and provide for the transportation by water of many of the cargoes that are now sent by rail. Ocean going traffic for the lake ports is the object aimed at.

That it is a huge project is disclosed by the amount involved and the fact that there must be an agreement reached between this country and Canada. There is favor and opposition to be found on both sides of the boundary. While it would seem to mean much for Canada the people of the dominion are not all of the same mind concerning it. While it would mean the taking away of much business that is now handled on our railroads and at our ports there doesn't appear to be much effort underway for the increased use of the canal across New York state which offers a water outlet for lake ports for a larger volume of traffic than it is called upon to accommodate at the present time.

Attention is directed to the St. Lawrence project by the announcement that the engineers representing the two countries who are at work upon the matter have come to agreements concerning the inquiry that must be made and the diversion of the lake water at Chicago and Niagara, subject of course to ratification, and by the statement which always comes about this time that the St. Lawrence is now closed to navigation by ice to a point within three miles of Montreal.

Perhaps through educational efforts the opposition to the project and the outlay involved will be overcome, but like the reaching of agreements it promises to take time. The St. Lawrence will not be used by ocean going vessels destined for lake ports in the immediate future.

AIRPLANE WRECKS.

Right after the wrecking of one of our mail carrying airplanes, from which the aviator tried to jump by using his parachute only to be found dead, there comes the story of the falling of one of the passenger carrying airplanes being used between London and Paris in which wreck eight lives were lost.

Many are the lives which have been lost through flying, trying to fly and doing stunts in the air, but when we stop to consider the figures the automobile on terra firma is responsible for many more. Flying hasn't got to the perfection stage but less lives are lost in airplanes than in many other vehicles of transportation.

Aside from the loss of life, the unfortunate part of the crash at Croydon, England, is that there is no way of telling what caused the wreck. It is possible to guess at what might have happened but conjecture doesn't permit the putting of the finger on the real trouble and allowing it to stand forth as the thing to be guarded against in the future.

Every fatality invariably holds out its lesson. It is usually possible for others to learn something from it, but aside from convincing many that they will not be killed in an airplane wrock if they keep out of them this crash furnishes nothing to guide others. It discloses neither defect in the machine nor fault by the aviator. Fixing responsibility is thus out of the question, though tests before taking flight showed the machine to have passed the customary inspection.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Well, it's all over, isn't it? I mean, of course this Christmas merchandising that has worn you out to a frazzle! You have honestly tried to remember all your relatives and friends, and you have a host of them, particularly as the year draws to a close. You're very tired, aren't you? and you are very glad that it's all over, that is, the season "it ought to bring to you joy, peace and happiness! No season of the year ought to bring greater joyfulness of spirit than Christmas. Still you are all fagged out in racing over the whole city in selecting a suitable present for Uncle Jabes who is nearly blind, and could —on a pinch—get along without that volume of sermons. Uncle Jabes has had his two sermons a week for the last forty years. You spent a miserable night, didn't you simply because you forgot cousin Matilda who gave you a broad hint back in October that she would like a clothespin bag for Christmas. And yet Christmas reminds us of "peace on earth."

Much is so-saying in public print in regard to the proposed child labor admendment to be made a part of the federal Constitution. Before we pass our final judgment in the matter would it not be well to find out just what its provisions are? If it puts a drastic limitation on a youth's working opportunities up to his 18th year, without any modifying clauses it ought to be voted out of existence once for all. But is this a fact? How does the text of the act read? Copies of this proposed amendment ought to be out into the hands of the people. At first thought it would seem that a parent ought to have some voice in determining the activities of his own child during his minority. The people have some rights that ought not to be given over to congresses and parliaments.

It must be very galling to those who are engaged in the velvet business —all the more so because it is so palpably unjust—to see velvet goods of German manufacture, displayed in show windows at one half the price they can afford to manufacture in this country. Because of the lower prices paid for labor in Germany they can afford to ship it here and undercut our manufacturers. Ought not a matter of this character to come under the regulation of our protective tariff? What a howl there would go here if wages were put down to the German scale! We believe that our manufacturers are entitled to reasonable protection. If they are not then, sooner or later, they must go down. There is a screw loose somewhere when the products of almost starvation wages are allowed to enter competition with wages that allow workmen to live like human beings.

The writer wonders if it is true that military training actually develops a desire for war. If so it ought to be banished by all nations. And we ought not to linger over the decision a single moment. Any training that creates a thirst for human blood has no right to exist anywhere on the earth a single day. The writer believes that this sentiment would be indorsed by nine-tenths of the inhabitants of any nation not strictly militaristic, and perhaps by the rank and file of the so-called militaristic nations. If, on the other hand, it does not there is much to be said in its favor. It brings out the possibilities of the physical form as nothing else does or can. It teaches the recruit how to stand, how to walk, how to breathe. It puts him on a diet most conducive to the attainment of perfect health. It reduces all of his functions to a regularity that is scientifically perfect.

In ways not a few the Bible states its belief in evolutionary processes. It has much to say in the Old Testament as well as in the New about things that grow. Not only does it characterize vegetable growth, but everything else capable of development. Nations pass through the same evolutionary process as forests, wheat fields and flower beds. Three hundred and four years ago a band of devout men and women landed on Plymouth Rock. December 21 was the exact date of their landing. This band in a very humble way began a work of outreaching importance far beyond their wildest dreams. Nothing seemed very propitious in that hard, cold winter of 1620. They had to deal with ice, snow, sickness and savages. And the savages were the most lenient of their new experiences because they were so responsive to kindness. From these beginnings grew this great republic. Let us not forget Forefathers day!

Have you arranged for good reading matter for 1925? The year that is so soon to burst upon us with its vast uncertainties makes a demand upon us precisely like the present year when it was young. You must make some provision for reading matter if you are going to maintain your intellectual life. Don't be selfish in the matter. If you try to skin yourself the only reward will be the resultant pain! If you must skimp somewhere don't do it in your reading matter! If necessary go with your elbows sticking out, and your one shirt worn to a frazzle, but don't let your mind go clad in rags when so many books, magazines and papers are at your beck and call. The variety of subjects treated today by the printed page is not only amazing but perfectly bewildering. The time has been when the ignoramus was pardonable, but that day is wholly past.

It is not at all difficult at this advanced season of the old year to predict, my brother how you are going to enter 1925. That period of time is now so close at hand that it is reasonable to say that you will step across the imaginary line that separates the two years just the man you have been for months, and possibly for years, past. Entering a new year is not like entering into a new life. The mere shifting of dates in the calendar has no effect on character whatever. Passing over into January is merely projecting ourselves with our own individualism into another month. The vast majority of people are going to live in 1925 very much as they have lived in 1924. But a vastly more important question is how are we going to end the coming year. The time is so short between now and the new year that we cannot be very much worse or very much better by Jan. 1. But before the close of 1925 we may be very much worse or very much better. This decision lies largely in our own hands.

As this is the last message that The Man Who Talks can for the current year, he would extend the greetings of the New Year to all the readers, and would thank all those who have expressed to him the interest they have in this column. He has traveled over a wide area in these Talks, and has endeavored to avoid all those issues that would be likely to lead to unprofitable controversy and possibly stir up resentment. Whatever the theme the underlying motive has been to present some stimulating helpful thought. May the coming year be promising to both writer and reader. Let us try to make the distinct contribution to human well being in the coming year.

The Chinese have lately developed a fondness for American chewing gum.

THE FIRST TURNPIKE IN NEW ENGLAND AND THE SECOND IN AMERICA

By ARTHUR L. PEALE

Thousands of automobiles go over the highway between Norwich and New London, every week, the trolley cars at frequent intervals carry passengers between the two cities over nearly the same route, and while this section of Connecticut is visited by tourists annually who come from every state in the union, yet few are aware that, between these two old New England towns was built the first turnpike in New England, and the second in the United States. If this road with its many historical associations and landmarks had been located in California or some parts of the progressive western states it would have probably been appropriately marked by milestones, and at night brilliantly lighted over the entire route. It also would have had publicity in the newspapers and magazines, but the people of Connecticut have been rather slow in the acquiring and marking of historical places, although there has been some progress in the past few years.

New England's First Turnpike

Under the reign of Charles II, King of England, the first "turnpike act" was passed in 1663, and while the system may have been an evil one, eminent engineers state that during this period Telford and Macadam developed their plans for the improvement of the English roads. Many historians and writers have called the Norwich-New London turnpike the first one established in America, but the state of Virginia lays claim to that title. In 1785 turnpike acts were passed by that commonwealth, and one year later we are informed turnpikes were in operation from Alexandria to Snicker's and Vesta's gaps. The New London-Norwich pike was the second to be established, and the "old post road" at Greenwich, Conn., was made into a turnpike the same year.

The Norwich-New London Road

The road between Norwich and New London passing through the Mohegan fields was first laid out by order of the legislature under the survey and direction of Joshua Raymond, who was remunerated with a tract of land, sufficient for a large farm upon the route. This was about the year 1670. For more than a century this road was nothing more than an Indian trail, with its many windings, curves, fords and precipitous hills made travelling very inconvenient and hazardous. The method of travel was chiefly on horseback and with ox carts. In 1789 several prominent persons formed an association to effect an improvement of the road, and the legislature granted them permission to have a lottery, the proceeds of which were to be expended in repairing as much of the route as passed through the Indian lands in the present township limits of Montville. The lottery was held at Norwich in June 1791, and the following May a company was incorporated to make the road a turnpike and erect a toll gate. This accomplishment reduced the distance to fourteen miles from the court house on Norwichtown green to the court house at New London, and travelling was rendered tolerably safe. The toll for four wheel carriages was nine pence, two wheel carriages two and one half pence and a person on horseback was charged one pence. This brought the inhabitants of Norwich and New London more than half a days journey nearer to each other, as formerly few persons attempted to go from one of these places to the other and return the same day. The turnpike almost immediately became very popular and an important thoroughfare to Norwich and the towns in her vicinity, and was used for the driving of cattle and the transportation of produce to the town by the sea. In 1806 a new road was built from the landing to connect with the old road at Trading Cove bridge, and in 112 a new piece of road was laid out in a straight line to the Mohegan road. The turnpike company was dissolved in 1852 and tolls abolished.

Famous Travelers of This Road

In the early days the inhabitants of New London and Norwich were accustomed to meet on various occasions, and parties on horseback and others in vehicles would assemble at Indian hill, Massapeag, Cochegun rock and other well known places where refreshments were held, hunting indulged in, and many witnessed the Indian dances. During the winter season there were sleighing parties to Raymond's, Haughton's and Bradford's. The road through the Mohegan fields has been travelled by many distinguished persons. Uncas, the sachem of the Mohegans was a frequent visitor at Norwich, and his son Owaneco stopped on the green to confer with Maj. John Mason and the Rev. James Fitch when on his way to Boston to offer help to the colonists in the King Philip war in 1675. Joshua, the other son of the noted sachem, followed this path when on the way to Hartford and Hadley during the same war. Madam Knight, who is remembered by her journey alone on horseback from Boston to New York, was a frequent traveler on this road, and at one time owned lands near the saw mill brook in Montville. In 1724 a party of Rogerenes from Groton and New London were arrested in Norwich for travelling on Sunday, and were sentenced to pay a fine of 20 shillings each, or to be whipped 10 or 20 lashes. Not being able to pay the fine they were obliged to submit to the latter punishment. The same year Whitefield, the renowned revivalist, held a meeting at Mohegan which was largely attended by the Indians. In 1774 the delegates from New London and adjacent towns came to Norwich to consult upon measures for the common welfare. One year later Capt. Colt's famous company of New London marched north en route for Boston. One Sunday during these critical times a courier arrived in Norwich at the time divine service was being held, and stated "that three men of war and eleven transports had appeared in the sound, and were near Fishers island." The exercises ceased and within an hour all of the able bodied men were on the way to help in the defense of New London. In 1776, when New London was menaced by a hostile fleet, all of the militia of the eastern part of the state marched to that town. The early records at that time state that General George Washington called at Norwich, and then went south by land. During the year 1778 a party of French troops on the way to New London, halted at Norwich for 10 or 15 days. About 20 of their number died and were interred in the old burying ground near Norwichtown green.

The Southern Gateway

The old town, first named in the early records as Nameaug, subsequently called Pequot and later New London was founded by John Winthrop (the younger) in 1646-46. The original plan of the town was that the first lines of dwelling houses bordering the semi-circular shore from the head of Winthrop Cove to the east end of the point known as Shaw's Neck a distance of one and one half miles should as far as practical face the water, with an open street or quay in front of them. All of the first houses on Main and Bank streets were built on the west side. The earliest roads were from Mill brook over Post hill, Main street, first called Town street, and Bank street named "The Bank." Hempstead street was connected with Town street by a path which followed nearly the same lines and direction as the present State street. Names were not given to the streets for nearly a century after the town was founded. The first house of worship in this plantation as it was called in those days, was a large barn which stood on Meeting House hill, the location being near the south west corner of what is called Granite and Hempstead streets. The best of a drum called the worshippers to services. A mill was erected by Winthrop in 1650 as the grinding of corn was one of the first needs. The fortified places were at the mill, meeting house and the home of Hugh Caulkins. The first court house in eastern Connecticut was built on the southwest corner of "Meeting house square" and "The Green" by John Rough and cost 48 pounds, and when finished the arms and ammunition were lodged in the garret. The eastern part of State street was originally called Fort Hill and during the period of the Revolutionary war the name was changed to "The Parade." The burning of New London by the British under Benedict Arnold in 1781, destroyed most all of the public buildings, stores and homes. In 1784 the town voted to build a new court house on the site of the old school house, and the present edifice was erected.

New London the Chief Post Office

On account of its advantageous location as a seaport, and with the post road from Boston to New York passing through the town, New London was early recognized as an important postal center. By an act of parliament in 1710 this town was made the chief post office in the Connecticut colony Letters were first dispatched by couriers on horseback, and with the improvement of the highways stage coach lines were established. The cost of a letter to New York was nine pence. The route from Providence via Wickford, Charlestown and Westerly, R. I., to New London was originally called the Pequot path, a little later the King's highway and finally the Post road. During the administration of Benjamin Franklin as the head of postal affairs during the colonial period, the setting up of milestones on post roads was inaugurated. The stage coach line of Jesse Brown the famous tavern keeper at Norwich passed through New London to Boston and Providence, three trips being made weekly during summer and two during the winter season. The stage that left Providence on Sunday morning arrived in Norwich at noon, and the stage horn sounded usually as the congregation were coming from church at the morning service. The fare from Boston to Providence was $3, Providence to New London $4, and four and one half cents a mile for the remainder of the trip.

Northern Terminus at Norwich Town Green

The northern terminus of the "path to New London" so called by the early colonists was at Norwichtown green." This was a space left for public buildings and military parades, and on the south west corner stood the first meeting house. In 1673 the town contracted with John Elderkin to build a new meeting house on the hill now known as "Meeting House rocks" to serve as a watch tower, arsenal, garrison post and the house of worship. Near by was the whipping post and pillory. A "liberty tree" or high pole was later erected on the easterly end of the plot where the people assembled for public gatherings and to hear speeches. On the south west side was the home lot and dwelling of the Rev. James Fitch, the first minister of the settlement, and the residence and lands of Capt. John Mason were on the south west side. In later years the shop of William Cleveland the grandfather of President Grover Cleveland stood on the Mason lands. On the north west were the lands of Stephen Gifford, and on the east end of the green was the home of Simeon Huntington. The "path" to the north west was called the road to Connecticut. Many famous inns or taverns were near or adjacent to the green, Deacon Simeon Huntington being the second to establish a public house. Joseph Peck's tavern had a wonderful arbor under which refreshments were served, and Eleazer Lord's tavern on the New London turnpike was very popular with the lawyers who came to attend court. On the site of the present Johnson home was located Lathrop's tavern where it was related that when the guests complained of the cold the landlord replied "there was plenty of fire in the bar." From this well known hostelry the first line of coaches to Providence was established in 1768. The tavern of Jesse Brown was said to have been patronized by merchants from the West Indies, and many hunting parties made their headquarters there. This enterprising innkeeper also established many stage lines, one between Hartford and Boston by the way of Norwich and another between Boston and New York via Providence. At one time President John Adams and wife were entertained at Brown's tavern.

A Trip Today Over the Old Turnpike

Not only to the student of history, but to the tourist the trip from the old court house at New London to Meeting House green at Norwich—would at the present time be an interesting one. The court house where sessions of the superior court are held is of colonial architecture, and has been greatly admired by those who are interested in the buildings of the earlier periods. One could stop at the "old burying ground," and not far distant is the school where Nathan Hale taught while in New London. This building is now used by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Before ascending the hill, a visit to the "old mill" should be indulged in as this is one of the historical places of note. On returning to the old turnpike Connecticut College for Women would be passed, and while a comparatively new institution, the standards are high and under Dr. Benjamin T. Marshall has taken a high position among the colleges for the higher education of women. To the left "Bolles wood with its many traditions, and from the college grounds can be seen the winding Thames, the Submarine base, the monument at Groton, the harbor of New London and Fishers island in the distance. Passing through Waterford one comes to Quaker Hill so called on account of the sect who formerly resided in that locality.

From a high elevation on the Montville hills, Gales Ferry on the opposite side of the river comes into view, and to the north is Decatur mountain where Commodore Decatur in the war of 1812 built his fort when his vessels were driven up the Thames by the British. About midway between the two towns is the picturesque little village of Uncasville, named after the famous sachem Uncas. The old Haughton tavern was burned many years ago, but to the left about two miles on the Raymond hill road is Cochegun rock which is visited by many sight-seers. At one time it was stated that this was the largest single boulder in New England. We now ascend Mohegan or Indian hill and to the left is the old tribal farm, now called Fort hill farm. A stop should be made at the summit of the hill. Here was one of the old forts of the Mohegans, and at the end of the path to the right is the little church used by the descendants of the old tribe. Fielding, Fowler, and Baker are the names of some of the living, and Tantaquidgeon, the sagamore who captured Miantinimo has his name perpetuated by direct descent. Near by is the "Uncas spring" and about two miles below on the river bank can be seen the site of Fort Shantok famous in the early colonial and Indian history. At the present time the state park commissioners have this location under consideration for a state park. About half way down the hill and to the right on the Baker farm was the home of Samson Occom, the Indian boy who became a preacher, visited England and Scotland, and raised a large amount of money which was used in the founding of the Indian school at Lebanon, and which afterwards was moved to Hanover, N. H., and ultimately became Dartmouth college. The house has been demolished, and a barn now rests on the stone foundation. Trading cove soon comes into view where the first settlers traded with the Indians, and here we turn to the left to keep on the road to "Old Norwich." On the East Great Plain we pass the grounds of the New London County Agricultural Society, and on this great plain was fought the battle between Uncas and Miantonomo of the Narragansetts, which resulted in the defeat of the latter. Passing through a beautiful rural section we cross the Yantic river and arrive at the "Green or parade at Norwichtown."

While there have been many changes since the time when Washington, La Fayette, Trumbull, Tracy, Leffingwell and the Huntingtons were seen here, many of the old buildings still remain. The old story is now occupied by the Daughters of the American Revolution as a museum, the old school house as a club, and many of the inns have been converted into residences. During the holidays a community Christmas tree has been set up near the site of the old liberty tree.

Official Milestones for All Towns and Cities

The American Automobile Association has made the suggestion, that, every city and town in the United States have an official milestone, from which local distances can be measured. Already steps have been taken by the association to put the plan into effect. Washington and Los Angeles have taken the lead and milestones have been set up in those cities. At the present time markers have been placed between many of the towns of New England by various business houses, but these are not official and distances are sometimes stated incorrectly. The idea, has been advanced that these milestones can serve as memorials to individuals who have rendered service to the city or community where they lived. Some progressive localities have at the present time planted trees in memory of the World War veterans. A number of states have given names to their roadways. The Lincoln highway being a notable example. Massachusetts has The Mohawk Trail, Benjamin Franklin during his term as Postmaster general inaugurated the establishment of milestones on the post roads.

New England is rich with its historical associations and many appropriate names and designations could be provided for the milestones. On the historic highway between Norwich and New London the following names of prominent persons and historical places could be suggested: Gov. Winthrop 2nd, Nathan Hale, Samsom Occom, Fort of Uncas, Trading Cove, Battle of Great Plains Maj. John Mason and Rev. James Fitch.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

Christ, the Door.

Then said Jesus unto them again, "Verily, Verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep."—John 10:7.

The directions how we shall enter into the fold are very plain. We must come in by Jesus Christ as the door. By faith in Him as the great Mediator between God and man we came into covenant and communion with God. They shall be in His fold as a man at his own house, where they have free ingress or egress. True believers are at home in Christ. They go out to the field in the morning, they come in to the fold at night, and in both the Shepherd leads and keeps them, and they find pasture in both, grass in the field, and fodder in the fold.

In public, in private, by which their spiritual life is supported and strengthened, and out of which their gracious desires are satisfied. They are replenished day by day with the goodness of God. There is no use seeking eternal life apart from the Lord Jesus. All prayer, all effort of whatever kind on our part, all thought of securing the compassionate consideration of God without the death and deliverance of the Divine Christ—all this is utterly vain. He who died on Calvary is the door. No one can enter the fold another way.

Christ is the Shepherd. Peter calls Him the Chief Shepherd and Bishop of our souls. God, our Great Owner, and whose we rightfully are by creation, has constituted His Son Jesus to be our Shepherd. Christ is a good Shepherd, and not as a hireling. There are many that are thieves who seek to destroy the sheep.

Jesus Christ is indeed, the best of shepherds in the world to take the oversight of souls. None so skilful. So pitiful, so tender as He; no such nourisher and leader, protector and healer of souls as He. It is to the comfort of the church that however she may be damaged and endangered by the under-shepherds, the Lord Jesus is and ever will be, as He ever has been the Good Shepherd. He knows His sheep. He knows who are His sheep and who are not. Knows the sheep under their many infirmities, and knows, too, the goats under their most plausible disguises. He knows those that in truth are His own.

Seeds of Chinese fir trees particularly suited for the manufacture of wood pulp are being tested by the United States forestry bureau in the hope of adding to the pulp producing resources.

Man—The Builder

Civilization is largely the result of man's inherent qualities as a builder.

In every age skilled tradesmen preserved and perpetuated the arts of industry with an ever increasing perfection. It is still the mission of the skilled artisan to render this type of service to humanity.

The State Trade School, Putnam, provides training in the established methods, skill, and practices of the following trades:

Cotton Manufacturing, Machine Shop Practice, Carpentry, Electrical, Architectural and Mechanical Drafting, and academic subjects related to these trades.

Marion Harland Could Not Cook

Her childhood was happy, her schooling finished and her literary success brilliant, but when Mary Virginia Hawes became a bride she knew nothing about housework or cooking.

The Hawes home in Amelia County, Virginia, was charming and Mary was trained by tutors, governesses and at private schools. She began to write poetry at nine and sent contributions to Richmond newspapers and the Central Presbyterian before she was 14.

After three years' effort she completed her first novel, entitled Alone. Her father submitted the manuscript to a publisher who returned it with the remark that he did not think it worthy of publication. Hawes then had the book published at his own expense, and it won instant recognition. At 16 she wrote the short story, Marrying For Prudential Movies for Godey's Magazine and it was copied in England and France. Other stories and books followed and she became famous as an author.

Married to Rev. Edward Payson Terhune of Brooklyn, at 26 she faced the cares of housekeeping but had never dusted a room or cooked a meal. An incompetent cook made it necessary for her to take charge of the kitchen. The first beefsteak she tried to cook she washed and placed in the frying pan. Cook books were weak and she had to learn as she worked.

After 15 years' preparation she completed a cook book. Her friends and her publisher objected to its publication, saying it would injure her literary reputation, but she persisted and sold. She wrote other books and articles to help the women in the home, and the name of Marion Harland, her pseudonyme, became known to nearly every woman in the country. She also continued to write novels that added to her fame.

The death of a gifted child following a period of trying work caused her physical breakdown and she spent two years in Europe while regaining her health. This inspired her Loitering in Pleasant Places. When an accident crippled her wrist she learned at 35 to use a typewriter, and continued her writing until the time of her death at 91, after which she was mourned as one of America's most beloved women.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Walter J. Damrosch, who is to be given a dinner by his New York admirers tonight as a mark of appreciation for his great services in the case of music during the last 40 years, is a son of the celebrated musician Leopold Damrosch. His education in music was derived from his father and from eminent teachers in Germany, including Hans von Bulow. When only 19 years old young Damrosch essayed his first task as a conductor with an orchestra in Newark, N. J. Later he came to hold positions once held by his father, and as an opera and symphony concert director he won a national reputation. Throughout his career he has preached the duty of art and of artists to serve society with disinterestedness. By his marriage to a daughter of James G. Blaine, the great statesman, Mr. Damrosch came into a prominence at one time that was wider in its scope than he had then achieved as a musician.

CHILD TRAINING

Jane Carpenter

"Gee, I hope I get some new skates for Christmas," said Tom, as he rubbed vigorously at the nine months' accumulation of rust on his old ones.

"And I hope I get a new book-bag," answered his sister, "this one's pathetic."

"I wonder how many times you children have said, 'I hope I get . . . for Christmas,'" said their mother irritably.

The girl shrugged her shoulders and the boy scowled. "I thought that was what Christmas was for," he muttered.

The mother was shocked out of her irritation. Did the child really mean that? It had seemed to her, since the children both knew that their father had just met with a serious financial loss, they ought not to expect much for Christmas. To be sure a pair of skates and a book-bag might be managed, but these were only two of the many things for which they had expressed a wish. She had not for a moment thought of saying, as she knew some mothers would have done, "We can have no Christmas this year," for to her Christmas held a significance that mere giving or receiving could not affect. How would it fit Tom and Katherine had such a limited concept? She felt very unhappy about it.

Now was she not taking the boy's remark much too seriously? He had spoken in an attempt to justify himself. This really ought not to have been necessary for his wish had been childishly natural. It did not mean that he was selfish or that he wanted more than his parents could afford. Probably neither of the children had the least expectation of getting many of the things they had said they wanted. Whether or not this mother had real cause to be troubled, however, depended on the answer to the question: What was the significance of Christmas to these young people? Was it a day to be cherished by them always, not merely on account of its sacred origin but because of their own happy existences? Was Christmas a season fraught with so much gladness and enjoyable activity that no matter what they might wish for, or really receive this was after all only a very delightful side issue? When children think too much about presents it is because their concept of the day and its meaning is so lean and barren that if it were not for these there would be nothing to it all. But no profusion of presents can make the twenty-fifth of December Christmas.

If the parent "makes the Christmas" as it were and presents it to the family to finish, product, what there for the children to do but to receive it? And how can they be expected to know or to think of anything beyond or above that act? Often when they are given money to buy gifts for their relatives and friends, they are over-advised with regard to the selection: sometimes they are given no choice at all. How then can they be expected to understand the joy of giving?

The wise mother lets the children prepare the Christmas festivities under her guidance. She helps them to make gifts for each other and for their friends. She plans with them means for providing relief and cheer for those who are in trouble. When it is possible, she encourages them to earn the money for the things they want to buy. She lets them do most of the decorating; if there is to be a tree, they dress it; and, if she cooks it herself, she allows them to help in the preparation of the dinner. She has secrets with each one of them and the surprises that are planned are always throwing them into a state of excitement. She reads with them the best Christmas stories, and they sing together the carols that never grow old. Presents? They like them, of course, but receiving it quite a secondary matter after all—only one of many pleasant incidents of a very happy season.

More than one-half the people of the earth live upon less than one-seventh of its surface.

INCREASES STATE DEPOSIT IN NEW LONDON BANK

State Treasurer Anson T. McCook has taken steps to equalize the distribution of state funds among the various banks of the state and in so doing has what Bridgeport interests have claimed was political discrimination against that city by his predecessor, G. Harold Gilpatric, now serving a sentence in the Atlanta federal penitentiary. Treasurer McCook has increased the state deposits in banks of Bridgeport by about $50,000.

Other increases in state deposits made by Treasurer McCook are as follows: Banks of New Haven, about $40,000; banks of Waterbury, about $20,000; banks of New London, about $60,000; banks of Stamford, about $60,000. At the time the special state audit recently completed for Governor Charles A. Templeton, was made the state deposits in Bridgeport banks totaled $261,000.

Under the law the treasurer is permitted to deposit state funds up to 50 per cent. of a bank's capital surplus and undivided property but Treasurer McCook is insisting on keeping the deposits outside of banks in this city below 20 per cent., as a safety measure. In Hartford active balance of the state is deposited and the totals shift from day to day, sometimes running above and sometimes below 20 per cent. ratio. Those Hartford banks in which the active balance is not kept come under the 20 per cent. rule just as do those outside the city.

For a number of years Bridgeport banks have sought to obtain a larger portion of state deposits but, although Treasurer Gilpatric promised to give the matter more consideration, the funds were never forthcoming.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL HELD AT TRINITY EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Trinity Episcopal church school held its annual Christmas festival in the church parlors Friday evening, the same as usual, proving successful. The rooms were prettily decorated with Christmas effects including three large trees which were laden with gifts. The exercises of the evening comprised songs and recitations by members of the school, the singing of Christmas carols and the showing of three reels of motion pictures.

Following the entertainment the large trees were lighted and Santa Claus made his annual distribution of gifts and boxes of candy to the children and older people. The Little Helpers class who were not able to attend were also remembered with gifts and candy, the distribution of which was under the direction of Miss Agnes Cardwell.

Rev. J. Eldred Brown, rector of the church was remembered during the evening being presented a beautiful leather vestment case, the joint gift of the Ladies' Aid society and St. Margaret's Guild. Rev. Mr. Brown thanked the two societies for the gift.

FORMAL OPENING OF PUBLIC SKATING POND NEW YEAR'S DAY

The new public skating pond near Backus corner, made possible through the activities of the West End Community association, will be formally opened New Year's day. Announcement to this effect was made Friday evening following a meeting of the general committee in charge of the skating pond at the home of John McWilliams, East Great Plain. An attractive programme is being arranged for the afternoon and Samuel Slosberg has been appointed to take charge of the various events.

According to present plans the programme will open with a grand march of the skaters to be followed by games, and a baseball game on the ice. The players will use indoor baseball equipment in the case. It was stated Friday evening that any young men who desire to take part in the baseball game should notify Mr. Slosberg. Teams will be picked from the list of players. Additional details regarding the sporting events on the programme will be announced shortly by the committee.

The plans also call for a band concert at the pond during the afternoon, provided the committee meet with success in their efforts to raise the necessary money to provide the band. The community association and C. Edward Carpenter have started the band fund with contributions of $5 each. Anyone desiring to help increase the fund may send their subscriptions to the secretary, Frank I. Royce.

Paul A. Brown, president of the community association, said Friday evening that the recreation commission of the city has taken an active interest in the skating pond plans and has offered to take care of the expense of the lease on the land and the flooding of the brook. Mr. Brown said that all that is needed now to insure the success of the opening day is continued cold weather and the raising of the fund to provide the band.

The brook was dammed Wednesday and the six or seven-acre lot is now pretty well flooded. It is expected that by Monday there will be excellent skating on the pond. William Ricker has been appointed to take care of the skating pond during the season. The general committee in charge of the pond comprises C. E. Carpenter, Morris Berestresser, Frank I. Royce, John McWilliams and Paul A. Brown.

HUNTERS GET FOXES IN CHRISTMAS DAY CHASE

Ideal weather Christmas morning went a long way towards making the holiday fox hunt a success. The event, in which about 50 hunters took part, was held in the Wauwecus Hill section. The hunters arrived on the scene of the chase shortly after daybreak and the committee in charge interviewed each hunter individually to impress on them the general desire that the rules of the hunt be strictly lived up to.

No traps, snares, picks or shovels were found in the possession of the hunters so that the committee were entirely satisfied that no fox would be taken in any but a sportsmanlike way. Word was soon given to unleash the twenty-five or thirty hounds and the chase was on, and in a very short time the dogs were driving the game around the hills.

George McGowan was the first man to get a shot at a fox driven by Mr. Lathrop's dogs and Mr. Lamb's dogs, but registered a clean miss. Soon afterward John Filburn scored another miss and also Louis Young, usually a sure shot with the gun. By this time the foxes began to scent danger and proceeded to leave the Tadma section.

Then the hunters tramped to the Pine swamp section and the hunt was at its best there. It was not long before Fred Botham scored No. 1 fox. Then a council was held as to where to start the next fox. Reuben Potter, the well known fox hunter, was consulted and Gager's mountain was picked out. Soon the dogs had the game on the move. After a thrilling chase of three hours Harry Holden scored this fox with a well directed shot. This put Mr. Holden in high spirits as the older hunters had considered him more or less a novice at the game.

This ended the scoring for the day but the dogs soon afterwards started another fox and were trailing him at dark. Credit must be given Mr. Potter's dogs, Eggie, a pure bred redbone, and Doc, a pure bred Goodman, as they stayed in the chase to the finish with Mr. Lathrop's and Mr. Young's superior bred Walkers, Duke and Bill.

These four dogs furnished the most sport for the hunters. Near every barway and alongside the roads one could see automobiles parked. The hunters were well pleased with the chase and expect to hold another one in the near future. W. H. Lathrop, the master mind of the hunt and regarded as the king of hunters in these parts, deserves much credit for the masterly way in which he handled the plans for the hunt. One of those who took part in the chase said Friday evening that it would be hard to get a more sportsmanlike gathering of men than attended the event. E. C. Gay and C. A. Gager, two old timers at the game, were missed by the hunters.

Another dog worthy of mention is Mr. Miller's famous New England-bred hound, Hunter, which trailed a fox all day long by himself and furnished plenty of amusement for the hunters in the Bear Hill section. The prize was divided between the two men who scored hits.

COMMISSIONER DONOHUE HANDS DOWN DECISION

Compensation Commissioner James J. Donohue of this city, acting for Commissioner Leo J. Noonan of Hartford, has awarded compensation amounting to $32.40 to James Izzo, claimant, of No. 39 Winthrop street, Hartford, for partial disability from Nov. 20 to Dec. 18, according to an award handed down Friday. By a voluntary agreement between the claimant and the H. Wales Lines company of Meriden, employers, Izzo received until Nov. 20 compensation at the rate of $8.10 per week since Sept. 11, 1922. It was found that the incapacity of the claimant from arthritis and displacement was ended Dec. 18.

Commissioner Donohue dismissed the claim of Carl Lindahl of Hartford against the Hartford Electric Light company for compensation for total incapacity resulting from a carbuncle and operation for its removal. The commissioner found that the claimant had been receiving compensation from the company by a voluntary agreement for a previous injury but that the carbuncle was in no way connected with that injury.

NORWICH VETERANS TO ATTEND BRISTOL CONVENTION

Members of the various posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Norwich and vicinity are watching with interest the plans for the annual convention of the state organization to be held in Bristol next spring. Thomas F. Cahill, general chairman of the Bristol convention has received word that practically every post in the state will send representatives to Bristol to be at the convention, and to participate in the monster parade.

In conjunction with the convention a "Miss Bristol" will be chosen from several young women who have already entered the contest, this being one of the features. She will be crowned "Miss Bristol" at the convention, at the big military ball, at which it is expected that the then Governor John H. Trumbull and his official staff, besides the other state officials will attend. High military officials who served the colors across the sea will also attend the ball, which will be full of color and splendor. Charles Blanchard, commander of Harold P. Emmett post of Bristol, has received word from state headquarters that the state officers of the organization will be at the convention, and that they will also be present at the military ball.

A number of Norwich veterans will attend the convention.

ST. PATRICK'S BOY SCOUTS GIVEN CHRISTMAS SURPRISE

After the regular meeting of St. Patrick's Boy Scouts Tuesday evening the boys were given a Christmas tree entertainment. Mrs. Bernard Coyle was at the piano and William Shannon and James Casey assisted with violins. Raymond Cote and Raymond Coyle were heard in songs, after which Santa Claus appeared on the stage with gifts for all. Santa was impersonated by Raymond J. Lafontaine, who was assisted by Leo Sterck, Fred Aldi, Albert Zeigelmayer, Leonard Suntheimer, John Hill and Fred Keeley.

The affair was a surprise to the 80 boys assembled and all spent a pleasant evening, at its close thanking Rev. John J. Reilly and John P. Corcoran for the delightful Christmas surprise. The chaperones were Mrs. James J. Casey and Mrs. Bernard M. Coyle.

HELD FAMILY DINNER PARTY CHRISTMAS DAY

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Kinney of Orchard street a family party was entertained Christmas day. OBITUARY

Elliott Richards

Elliott Richards, 19, died very suddenly Wednesday morning at the Hartford hospital of what was probably a relapse into acute typhoid. His home was in Hebron with his grandmother, Mrs. Emily Rathbun. At the time of his death he was in the employment of the Morrison W. Johnson undertaking establishment in Hartford. He leaves his mother, Mrs. Ivy Richards of Versailles.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germ that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

Can you anticipate refreshing sleep?—

Or, are you a victim of itching, burning skin trouble that is maddening at night and makes you scratch and toss from side to side until exhausted?

Apply Resinol Ointment, then bandage lightly. As soon as this soothing, healing ointment touches an itching skin, the itching usually stops, the inflammation is allayed, and healing begins.

BERLENBACK KNOCKS OUT ESTRIDGE IN SECOND ROUND; DELANEY BEATS REED

New York, Dec. 26.—(By The A. P.)—Paul Berlenbach of Astoria, Long Island, knocked out Larry Estridge, Harlem negro middleweight, in the second round of a scheduled twelve round contest at Madison Square Garden tonight. Berleibach weighed 158 3-4 and Estridge 155 3-4.

In the semi-final of 12-rounds, Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., played with Pal Reed of Boston and captured the decision although the crowd railed at the conqueror of Berlenbach for his failure to deliver the finishing blow. Reed fought gamely but could not equal the speed or meet the jabs of his advisary.

Estridge, heralded as the best among the negro middleweights, proved a dismal failure, being on the run and otuclassed throughout the 5 minutes of fighting which preceded the knockout. Berlenbach hurled rights and lefts at the start but they failed to land because his opponent was continually on the move, contending himself with a feeble jab.

After two minutes of the second round the negro went down under a volley to the head from both hands, he arose at eight but was unable to continue and the referee stepped between them.

Tracey Ferguson of Wallingford, Conn., knocked out Mike Carrier of New York in the fifth round of a bout scheduled for six rounds.

Eddie Elkins of New York outpointed Sid Kempen of Beaver Falls, Pa., in four rounds.

PENN SQUAD STARTS FOR PACIFIC COAST

Philadelphia, Dec. 26.—The football squad of the University of Pennsylvania thirty-three strong, left today for Berkeley, Cal., to put its undefeated eastern gridiron strategy against the Pacific coast tactics of the University of California's mighty eleven.

Crippled by the loss of Fairchild and Craig, its two regular ends, and the inlisability of Joe Willson, tackle, injured in practice recently, the team found itself gliding out of Broad street station of the Pennsylvania railroad on track thirteen. But that omen was disregarded when the strains of "Hail, Pennsylvania," from the University band, and a chorus of exhortations to "beat those bears!" sent the Red and Blue forth on its expedition into the west.

On its way, the train will pass through Johnstown, Pa., where Fairchild, stricken with appendicitis, lies waiting for an operation to be performed. At Pittsburgh, Clyde Floro, a quarterback, who was injured on the eve of the Cornell game, is expected to join the squad.

More than a hundred followers accompanied the team, the special train comprising eleven cars. The baggage car is equipped with shower baths and gymnasium apparatus. Equipment in other cars, supplied by enthusiastic students, included books and magazines, playing cards and cross-word puzzles.

SKATING DEMONS ENTERED IN NEWBURGH CLASSIC

Newburgh, N. Y., Dec. 26.—Leading skaters of the United States and Canada have been entered for the middle Atlantic speed skating championships here New Year's day.

Heading the list is Charles Gorman, of St. John, N. B., the Canadian star who won both the American and International amateur title last season. His principal American rivals will be Joe Moore, of New York, International indoor titleholder; Valentine Bialis, of Utica, N. Y., and Duke Donova, of St. Paul, all members of the United States Olympic team.

Paul Forsman of New York, champion last season, is not among the entries. Emory Stephenson, of Toronto; Eddie Meyers, West Becker, George Pickering, Bobby Hearn, Leslie Boyd, Paul O'Brien, Billy Murphy and Sam Goldberg, all of New York, will compete.

Miss Elsie Muller of New York, will defend her title as middle Atlantic Women's champion against a group of rivals including Miss Kathleen McRae, of Toronto, and Mrs. Jack Ruping, of Watervliet, N. Y.

The feature race among men will be for the Donoghue Memorial trophy, which previously has been won by Moore, Meyers and Bialis. The trophy is a memorial to Joseph F. Donoghue, a native of Newburgh and former world's skating champion, whose records from 25 miles up still are unbeaten.

VILLA WILL DEFEND TITLE AT MANILA

New York, Dec. 26.—Pancho Villa, Filipino holder of the world's fly-weight title will defend his championship in a 20-round match at Manila the last week in January against Young Siencio, recognized flyweight titleholder of the Orient. Siencio also is a Filipino.

This match was arranged after the failure of negotiations for a contest between Villa and Johnny Breslin, New York fly weight. Manila promoters refused to grant Breslin's financial demands.

APPEL WINS FIRST MATCH IN DEFENSE OF TITLE

New York, Dec. 26.—Kenneth Appel of East Orange, N. J., and Mercersburg Academy, won his opening match today in defense of the National junior indoor tennis championship. After drawing a bye in the first round he defeated Herbert Duval, Choate school, Wallingford, Conn., 6-2, 6-2 in the second round.

Other favorites in the tournament advanced without upset in the opening day's competition. Among the victors were:

"Horace Orser, New York, who defeated Gilbert Chase, Boonton, N. J., 6-0, 6-1; Robert Raymond, Lehigh University, who defeated Solo Blank, Brooklyn, 8-6, 6-3; McLeolm Hill, Waban, Mass., who defeated Mason Blake, South Kent, Mass., 6-1, 6-1; H. L. Johnson, Waban, Mass., who defeated Louis Gest, Brooklyn, 6-0, 6-3; Morris Schultz, Cornell, who defeated Alexander Rosin, Patterson, N. J., 6-4, 8-6, 9-7.

WILL WIN TITLE WITH CUE OR NOT AT ALL

Paris, Dec. 26.—Roger Conti, French billiard star, after reading despatches from New York reporting that Willie Hoppe had said he would give him the world's title as a "Christmas gift", because of the former's recordbreaking performance last Wednesday when he ran 477 in the 18.2 championship tournament declared:

"I am deeply touched at the generosity of my eminent rival and friend, Hoppe. In the course of three world's championships in which I have participated in the United States, I have learned to appreciate the wonderful playing which has made him universally recognized as the world's champion billiardist. However, if some day I am to become champion of the world, I must win the championship with a cue and not through a Christmas gift."

Basketball Today

A lively tussle is anticipated for the "Y" Emps this afternoon when they are scheduled to meet the snappy Olympic five from Jewett City. The game will be called at 4 p. m. and the regular line up will be used.

May Be Future Czarina

The Grand Duchess Cyril, of Russia, whose husband is the cousin of the late Czar, may be the future Czarina of Russia. Her husband has proclaimed from London that he is "Emperor of all the Russias," and will work to rid Russia of the Communists.

EASTERN WOMEN GOLFERS IN CALIFORNIA TOURNEY

New York, Dec. 26.—The ranks of eastern women golfers promise to be well represented in the annual gold vase invitation tournament at Pebble Beach, Calif., Ferbuary 21 to 28.

Prominent among the invaders are expected to be Miss Marion Hollins, metropolitan titleholder and former National champion, and Miss Glenna Collett, National champion in 1922.

Mrs. G. M. Heckscher, of New York, and Miss Louis Foryce, Youngstown, O., star, also are likely entrants.

Miss Mary K. Browne, of Santa Monica, Calif., who reached the finals of last season, is expected to lead the defending California contigent.

HIGH JUMPER COMPLETES TOUR AROUND WORLD

New York, Dec. 26.—Emerson Norton, former Georgetown athlete who gave Harold Osborn a great fight for Olympic decathlon honors at Paris, will compete a trip around the world when he arrives here to compete in the Finnish-American A. C. games at Madison Square Garden January 6.

Norton, whose home is in Riverside, Calif., sailed with the Olympic team from New York last June 16, after competing at Paris, went to the far east, where he competed in Japan and other countries. He recently reached San Francisco on his return voyage.

Norton will compete against Osborn in the high jump at the Finnish-American meet.

Foreign Soccer Results

London, Dec. 26.—Results of soccer league football games, played here, were as follows:

HOPPE TO PLAY CANNEFAX IN EXHIBITION

New York, Dec. 26.—Willie Hoppe, world's 18.2 balkline billiard champion, and Robert Cannefax of Chicago, world's three cushion champion, met here today and perfected arrangements for a special three cushion match to start January 19. The terms call for an 11 block match of 60 points each.

The principals will sign Monday when each posts a forfeit of $2,500. The loser, according to the terms of the agreement, has the right to challenge immediately for a return match. Cannefax's title will not be at stake in the match.

SCHOELL FIGHTS DRAW WITH TIGER FLOWERS

Buffalo, Dec. 26.—Frankie Schoell, local middleweight, and Tiger Flowers, the Atlanta, Ga., negro, fought six rounds to a draw here tonight. The weights were Schoell 151 1-2; Flowers 161 3-4.

Flowers was on the aggressive at all times, constantly rushing Schoell to the ropes and corners but Schoell held him off well with a fast, stinging left. In the third round, Schoell was hurt by Flowers body punches but he came back in the fourth and slugged too to toe with his heavier opponent.

The negro tried hard for a knockout blow in the last two rounds but couldn't get by Schoell's left.

OHIO STATE SCHEDULES INTERSECTIONAL CONTESTS

Columbus, Ohio., Dec. 26.—Ohio State University athletic officials have scheduled intersectional competition in at least four lines of varsity sport during 1925 and several of the schedules still are incomplete.

First of these clashes occurs January 3, when the basketball squad meets Princeton, a representative of the eastern intercollegiate league. The Penn relays next will see Ohio State mix its colors with a different geographical foe in April and in May, Cornell of the same league as Princeton, will oppose Ohio State's baseball nine here.

EXPECTED CALIFORNIA WILL ADOPT 12-ROUND BOUTS

Sacramento, Cal., Dec. 26—Inauguration of 12-round boxing bouts in California was expected today when the newly appointed "state athletic commission," authorized by initiative at the last election, held its first meeting and issued blanket permits for boxing matches. The permits will enable established promoters and well known athletic clubs to stage any bouts they desire, until regular licenses can be granted.

The first of the boxing bouts under the order will, it is expected, be held in San Francisco, Oakland, Los Angeles, and Sacramento, January 1 or 2.

PENN STATE TO PUT TEAM IN MEDLEY RELAY

Urbana, Ills., Dec. 26.—Penn State has entered a team in the Medley relay, an event in the Western Indoor relay carnival which will be held March 7, it was announced today. Announcement was also made that attempts were being made to secure the services of Paavo Nurmi, world's champion over the longer distances, for the carnival. In case Nurmi appears a match race will be arranged with some of the western stars.

McTIGUE WINS TECHNICAL KNOCKOUT OVER KING

Atlanta, Ga. Dec. 26.—Mike McTigue, who holds the world's light heavyweight championship tonight won a technical knockout over Jimmy King, New Orleans in the fourth round of a ten round bout here.

Ice Speedsters In Action Today

Lake Placid, N. J., Dec. 26.—The first speed skating races of the winter will be held on Mirror Lake here tomorrow afternoon. Charles Jewtraw of Lake Placid, International outdoor amateur champion; Joe Moore of New York, International indoor champion; Leslie Boyd of New York, metropolitan champion Eddie Meyers of New York; Eddie Steidler of Englewood, N. J., and Harris Fine of New York are entered.

PLAINFIELD ARMY-NAVY FIVE WINS EASY GAME FROM BALTIC WANDERERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

Plainfield, Dec. 26.—In a fast and furious game at the Plainfield Community House Friday evening the Army and Navy team defeated the fast Baltic Wanderers by the score of 38 to 21. The ball was packed at 7.30 every available inch taken up. Normandie, the fast forward of Plainfield, was held to two baskets by "Rags" Swanson. Benjamin was a menace to the visitors, hooping the first basket of the game, after three minutes of play. Murphy, the little center, played a superb game, scoring five baskets. Nolan held Ridgeway of Baltic, a dangerous forward, to two baskets. Belair was the real star of the game and looped baskets at will. He was all over the floor and in every place. The first half ended with Plainfield in the lead, 19 to 16. The second half was fast and furious, every man playing everything that was in him, but the Plainfield was far superior to the visitors. Provost, the fast little guard, is on the sick list with a severe attack of tonsilitis. The fans saw the fastest game ever played in the Community house, and saw plenty of excitement and spectacular playing. The lineup follows:

YOST WILL OPPOSE CHANGING FORWARD PASS

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 26.—Fielding H. Yost, chairman of the rules committee of the American football coaches' association, will oppose any changes restricting the forward pass when the committee meets in New York next Monday.

In making this announcement today Yost said: "Generally speaking there is too little passing instead of too much. This is also true of the kicking game I am not in favor of any limitations."

Yost said he would favor the elimination of a run after recovery of a fumble.

PENN TEAM TO PRACTICE AT CHICAGO TODAY

Chicago, Dec. 26.—The University of Pennsylvania football eleven enroute to the coast for its New Year's day game with the University of California will make a 12-hour stay here tomorrow. Members of the party of eighty will be guests of the Pennsylvania alumni at a luncheon and testimonial dinner at night.

Because of the frozen condition of Stagg field at the University of Chicago, the squad will work out indoors at the Chicago Riding Academy, a massive new structure.

SPORTING NOTES

Baltimore now has three municipal golf courses.

Germany has 900 swimming clubs with a total membership of 170,000.

More than 30,000 hounds are maintained exclusively for hunting in the United Kingdom.

Montreal has 1500 schoolboy hockey players playing in organized leagues in that city this winter.

The first national tournament for the three-ball billiard championship was held at St. Louis in 1878 and was won by Leon Magnus.

Eddie (Cannonball) Martin, the new world's bantamweight champion, has engaged in 65 fights, and enjoys the distinction of never having been knocked out.

Pat Mills, the English lightweight boxer who has appeared before many of the Eastern clubs during the past year, is now displaying his wares before the Pacific Coast fans.

Many of the new "oil towns" in Texas are able to boast of golf and country clubs which in grounds and equipment will bear favorable comparison with those in many of the larger cities.

A new stadium to be erected in the German city of Breslau will have seating accomodations for 30,000 spectators and will be one of the largest and best-equipped athletic plants in the whole of Europe.

The University of Kansas basketball team, champions of the Missouri Valley Conference, have lost only two conference games during the past three seasons, one to the University of Oklahoma and the other to the University of Missouri.

The decision of Ed "Strangler" Lewis, world's heavyweight champion, to pack his grip and leave for Europe is but another indication that wrestling in the United States is now experiencing one of its periodical slumps. Whether because of the dearth of suitable contenders for the championship, or for some other rea-n, the fast remains that e mat game is a dead issue most sections of the country t the present time. Only in certain arts of the West does there appear to e more than a lukewarm interest in he sport.

The year now nearing its close will go on record as one of the most flourishing that bicycle racing has enjoyed in a long time. Attendance records were broken at nearly all of the tracks in the metropolitan and New England sections, while the six-day races conducted in Chicago and New York were the most successful ever held.

Eddie Collins, the new manager of the Chicago White Sox, first came into prominence at Columbia University, where he played baseball and football. He excelled in both branches of sport and finally was persuaded to play for the Philadelphia Athletics. He did so at first under the assumed name of Sullivan in 1906, but in 1907 he resumed his correct name.

AWARDS FOR HEROISM BY WAR DEPARTMENT

Washington, Dec. 26.—Award of four distinguished service crosses, one of them to Col. Claude H. Miller, now of the army war college, and three to retired negro enlisted men, for heroism during the Philippine campaign, a quarter of a century ago, was announced today by the war department.

Seven citations for gallantry in action during the Spanish-American war, Philippine compaign and for service in China also were announced, two of them naming Major General Leonard Wood. One of General Wood's citations was for gallantry in action against the Spanish forces at Las Guasimas, Cuba, June 24, 1898, and the other for gallantry at Cantiago, Cuba on July 1, 1898. These citations entitle the recipients to silver stars.

The three negroes who received distinguished service crosses are Gus J. Williams, retired; Edward J. Monroe sergeant, retired; and Samuel Copeland, private, retired. All were members of the 24th infantry.

Colonel Miller also received one of the citations for gallantry in action. The others were awarded to Colonel Charles W. Exton of the chemical warfare service for gallantry against the Spanish forces at El Caney, Cuba, July 1, 1898, and Col. Herbert E. Tutherly, then captain, First cavalry, for gallantry at Santiago July 1, 1898.

Two citations were awarded Col. Edward V. Bookmiller, retired, formerly of the Ninth cavalry, for gallantry at Santiago on July 1, 1898, and against the boxer forces at Tientsing, China, July 13, 1900.

MINISTERIAL CRISIS IN FRANCE HAS BEEN AVERTED

Paris, Dept. 26 (By the A. P.)—It appeared tonight that the government had been able to avert the ministerial crisis that was unexpectedly precipitated Wednesday when it was defeated by a vote in the senate on an amendment to th amnesty bill. It was said that the radical and socialist parties were likely to vote for the bill, as outlined by the senate, when it comes up before the chamber next Tuesday.

The disagreement between the chamber and the senate on the measure came about over a clause concerning the reinstatement of the railroad strikers who were dismissed by the companies after the 1920 strike.

Premier Herriot, who has been ill for some time, received the leaders of both majority parties in his rooms today. It was declared to be due to his personal efforts that a crisis probably will be avoided, although the socialist position is not yet definitely clear. The party will meet tomorrow and it is understood the leaders will attempt to bring the insurgents into line to form the left groups solidly behind the premier.

IMPROVEMENT IN CONDITION OF FRANK A. VANDERLIP

Scarborough, N. Y., Dec. 26.—Improvement was reported today in the condition of Frank A. Vanderlip, who is ill with typhoid fever at his country home here, by Mr. Vanderlip's family physician.

Although the well known banker is not expected to be out of danger until next Saturday, his turn for the better in the last two hours had made his doctors optimistic as to the outcome.

COLD WAVE ALONG THE ENTIRE PACIFIC COAST

San Francisco, Dec. 26.—The Pacific northwest continued today to experience near and sub-zero temperatures, and in California the weather bureau reported the thermometers ranged from 18 to 45 degrees above zero. Santa Rosa, Calif., reported 18 degrees above and Los Angeles 45. In San Francisco the temperature was 36.

In Washington the minimum was 4.5 degrees below zero at Yakima and in the western part of the state at Olympia the temperature was 24 degrees above. Residents along the Columbia river are experiencing the novelty of crossing the river on the ice that for the first time in many years has covered the water. The lowest temperature reported in Oregon was 10 below at Baker, and Portland residents went to work in a temperature of 18 above.

Smudge pots were worked overtime in the citrus groves of Southern California to ward off the frost. Damage in the citrus belt so far has not been serious, according to the California Fruit Growers' exchange announcement.

TWO FIREMEN INJURED AT BLAZE IN BOSTON

Boston, Dec. 26.—Two firemen are in a local hospital following injuries received and several others were slightly injured or overcome by smoke in two fires here tonight.

A four alarm blaze, starting in the basement of a six story building in the South Boston district, occupied by L. Mondell & Son cork producers and the National Cont and Apron Supply company, swept through the building, causing damage estimated at $50,000. While assisting in coupling a hose, Stephen L. King, a fireman, was caught between two fire trucks and crushed. Carl Johnson received rib fractures when he fell 10 feet into an elevator well. Other firemen were cut by flying glass.

Several firemen were partly overcome by smoke when fire in the Mechanic Iron Foundry in the Roxbury district caused damage estimated at $25,000.

TRUMBULL, WHEN GOVERNOR, WILL ADDRESS LEGISLATURE

Hartford, Dec. 26.—While Governor-elect Hiram Bingham will probably go through with his original plan to deliver an inaugural address to the incoming session of the general assembly on Jan. 7, there is a likelihood that Lieutenant Governor-elect John H. Trumbull, who is to succeed him as governor the following day, will give a supplemental address to the legislature at a later date.

The two executives were in conference today at the home of Colonel Bingham in New Haven. Colonel Trumbull said that he had in mind a plan to address the legislature following his succession to the governorship, outlining such policies, in addition to those recommended by Colonel Bingham, as he deemed it wise for the state to undertake in the two years of his administration.

Northwestern Connecticut experienced severe cold weather, thermometers registering from zero to 10 below.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

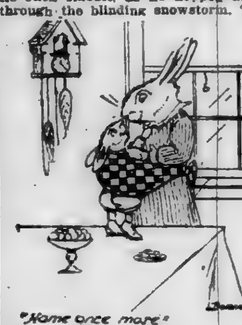
By DAVID CORY

Home at Last

If you ever lost your way
When the sky is cold and gray,
And the wind is blowing swift
'Round a chilly big snowdrift,

Be a brave and plucky lad,—
Pleases Mother, pleases Dad.
Find the way that leads to home
Though you happened far to roam.

"How did I come to remember that verse, all of a sudden?" thought Little Jack Rabbit, as he hopped along through the blinding snowstorm. "Oh, yes, now I know. Professor Jim Crow read it to us the other day in school."



"Home once more."

Well, your uncle Dave is mighty glad that his little rabbit recalled that beautiful poetry, and just when he most needed something to keep up his courage. For, you remember, we left our Bunny boy in the last story uncertain which way to turn. Yes, he had lost his way. Dreadful thing to happen to one on a stormy night in the forest.

"Well, there's no use crying. The tears will freeze into little ice marbles," said the brave little rabbit to himself, looking up into a treetop All of a sudden the old tree seemed familiar. It looked almost friendly through the blinding mist of whirling snowflakes.

"It's the Big Chestnut Tree,—Squirrel Nutcracker's home," the next minute shouted the bunny boy, although no one could have heard him above the howling voice of Mr. North Wind. "Yes, it's Squirrel Nutcracker's tree house as sure as I'm mother's darling boy. I'm most home," and he turned to the right and gave a hop-te-idy over a snowbank, landing kerplunk right in front of his little gate in the white picket fence. Only the tops of the two side posts reached above the piled-up snow, but that was enough to make the bunny happy.

Over he went, with another skip-hop, and up the little path through the winding bushes that led to the kitchen door. All out of breath and frosted with snow, he at last managed by many a jump and flopperty flop to reach his little house.

At that very minute, pretty, anxious Lady Love, his bunny mother, opened the door just a tiny crack. But it was wide enough for her to see her little son. Mothers can see their little ones with tight shut eyes, I imagine Mother love has far-seeing eyes, soft and tender as the skies, — skies of summer time. I mean, when the world is sweet and green.

"Bunny boy, Bunny boy," she cried folding him to her calico apron, "way up high under her soft chin. "I thought you would never come home."

"Home once more, home once more
Fire-light upon the floor,
Kettle singing on the stove,
Wonder why one needs must rove?"

chriped tiny Miss Cricket from the woodbox in the corner.

AT THE BREED, FOUR DAYS, STARTING SUNDAY

MICHAEL BUCKLEY, FISHERS ISLAND, DIES IN NEW LONDON AMBULANCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Dec. 26.—Michael Buckley, 70, employed several years as carpenter at Fisher's Island, where he made his home, died suddenly of heart disease this morning when he was being rushed to Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital in the police speed automobile. Mr. Buckley had not been feeling well of late and this morning he decided to come to New London and obtain medical treatment at the hospital. He arrived in New London on steamer Munnatawket about 8.30 o'clock and as he started to leave the steamer he suffered a heart attack and collapsed just after walking down the gang plank. An effort was made to secure the hospital ambulance, but without success because of inability to obtain a telephone connection with the institution. The police were then sought in an endeavor to obtain immediate treatment for the man and the police automobile with Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolman John Clifford, was sent to the Fishers Island Navigation companys dock to convey the stricken man to the hospital. Buckley was unconscious when placed in the automobile and as the car speeded through Bank street he expired.

The Title Guarantee & Trust company of New York, executors of the will of James D. Lynch, has sold a building lot on Glenwood avenue to Dr. Frank E. Wilson.

Henry M. Pendleton has transferred his interest in a house and lot on Montauk avenue to Louis M. Pendleton.

An automobile operated by Morris Dosky, 55 Connecticut avenue and a machine owned and operated by Louis Poletti, Broad street extension, were in collision this forenoon on Blinman street, near Bank street, when the former car skidded on the slippery service and crashed against Poletti's car before Dosky could get his car under control. Both cars were damaged.

The police put an end to children coasting at points of danger in the city, this morning. Complaints were made to the authorities that youngsters sliding at Hempstead, and Manwaring streets and Ocean avenue, near Bank street, were in danger of being struck by automobiles. Officers were sent to the danger points to forbid the coasting.

Goldie M., wife of William E. Holdredge, 53, died suddenly of apoplexy at her residence, 99 Howard street, Wednesday night. Mrs. Holdredge had been in failing health some time, but when she was stricken was apparently as well as she had been for a number of weeks. Mrs. Holdredge, besides her husband, is survived by a son, Fred I Holdredge, an employe of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, residing in Groton; two brothers, William Watson, Brockton, Mass., and George Watson, Lynn, Mass., and by a sister, Mrs. Frederick Kelley, of Brockton. Mrs. Holdredge was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The funeral of John F. Neary, was held this morning at 9 oclock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley, rector of the church. The bearers were William McMahon, Edward Finn, William Smith, Leo O'Donnell, Edward Corcoran and Austin Finn. The body was forwarded to Brooklyn for burial.

The funeral of Wilfred D. Wells, secretary and assistant treasurer of the Babcock Printing Press Manufacturing company for many years was held this afternoon at 3.30 o'clock at his residence, 256 Montauk avenue and was attended by a large gathering of mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. William S. Greene, pastor of All Souls church. The body was forwarded to Syracuse, N. Y. for burial.

John Hammer, about 48, died last evening at his home 12 Raymond street, after a brief illness. Mr. Hammer is survived by his wife and one child, an infant. He was employed as engineer by the Merritt-Chapman-Scott Wrecking company and was a member of Mohegan lodge of Odd Fellows, Union lodge of Masons and Konomoc Hose company.

Walter M. Ickrath, formerly of New London, now located in Pittsburgh, is visiting with his children, who are residing with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Jones, 8 Ocean avenue.

Judge Prince had two cases of intoxication to claim his attention when he returned from his Christmas feast this morning. He treated the accused men leniently because no record of arrest was held against either of them. One was a youth from Niantic who had looked upon the wine when it was red—he called it Guinea wine—and he became intoxicated. The youth is a railroad employe, so it does not take much imagination to discern where he will bring up if he continues in the course on which he started at the end of the year. He was shown by the advice of the judge that he was headed for trouble and was told that railroad companies have no use for men addicted to liquor. He accepted the advice as wisdom and went away with good resolutions in his mind.

George Gates celebrated the night before Christmas with a spree. Of course he became involved in trouble and when he quarrelled with a fellow residing on Walbach street he was arrested. Today he couldnt remember anything that occurred. He was honest in that for yesterday when a turkey dinner was served to him he could not be aroused to eat it. Today he did not have the stomach that would take the food. He said he drank "white mule" and his appearance was evidence that he told the truth. Both the accused were allowed to go unpunished by greater penalty than their arrest had brought to them.

Thomas Denehee of Brooklyn, is visiting at his old home here. He has been away from New London several years but has relatives and friends in this city.

Palestine Commandery, K. T. held its annual meeting this evening. There was balloting, and the election and installation of officers. A feast followed the installation.

Prof. Philip Douglass, of the department of romance languages at Penn Charter school, Philadelphia, is spending the holidays with his mother, Mrs. Annabel Douglass, Jay street.

Thomas Denehee, of Brooklyn, a former resident of New London, is spending several days with relatives in this city.

The hardware business of Lyon & Ewald is to be discontinued. It is said on reliable authority, the first of April next. This business was started by the late Samuel Dennis and dates back beyond the time to which the memory of no living resident in New London runs. Mr. Lyon died some years ago, but he had then retired from business. Since his death the business has been conducted by Simon Ewald. He proposes now to give up and retire to leisure. He is entitled to the years he may have in retirement for he has been a diligent worker and a successful business man.

The probe that was inserted some weeks ago to discover any deficiency in the police department of the city has not been in use for several days. A committee of the city council is using the probe which in this case is a series of questions as to the management and discipline under which the department is working. The code of rules governing the cops is such as was adopted some four or five years ago. Naturally the rules do not meet the times and they are likely to be changed. The attorney for the committee has been absent from town a week or more. Now he is back at his desk, but a member of the committee has taken a vacation that keeps him away from the city and pending his return no meetings will be held. It is quite certain the hearings will not be resumed till the new year registers a few days. Gossip has it that the probe is to be more searching when it is resumed than it has yet been and that it is possible some pus may be found in the sore that has been made. But that is only gossip. It is not to be relied upon.

An automobile owned by Judge Charles B. Waller, 42 Vauxhall street, and operated by Carl E. Hammond, was in collision with a machine, owned and driven by Louis I. Allen, 18 Alger street, this evening on Pequot avenue, each car losing a wheel and suffering other damages. None of the occupants of either car was injured.

Allen had operated his car from a standstill on Thames street to Pequot avenue. As the machine was being turned into Pequot avenue, headed northerly, it skidded on the icy highway and continued to skid a considerable distance. At the same time the machine operated by Hammond and headed in a southerly direction came along. In attempting to avoid a crash, Hammond operated his car to the westerly side of the highway, the car striking the front of Allen's car, ripping away a wheel and damaging a mudguard, and then continuing against the curb, causing the demolition of one wheel and the smashing of headlights. Each driver placed the responsibility for the accident upon the other.

Chief of Police James Brown, of Westerly, this afternoon requested the New London police to be on the lookout for Thomas Wells, of Westerly, who is slightly demented and who, it was believed, was en route to New York. Chief Brown requested that Wells be detained if the unfortunate man appeared in this city. A watch in the vicinity of the union station was maintained, but Wells was not discovered. He is described as being about 35 years of age, five feet eight or nine inches in height, bends forward when walking and was wearing a tight-fitting coat and light colored cap.

Mrs. Mary A. Miner, 92, widow of Daniel Miner, died yesterday at her residence in Waterford, death ending an illness of many months. The funeral was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of Dr. Frank Howard, the services being conducted by Rev. George H. Strouse of Waterford. The body was forwarded to Hartford for burial tomorrow.

Mrs. Mary A. White, 168 Huntington street, is ill at her home.

E. S. Taylor, athletic coach and history instructor at Chapman Technical High school, is spending the holiday vacation with relatives in Norwalk.

The residence of Dr. Robert F. Jones, 110 Parkway, was damaged by fire about 7.30 o'clock when a lively blaze was discovered in the cellar. It originated from an overheated furnace. The fire was discovered by members of the Jones family, who detected the odor of smoke. Investigation located the fire in the cellar and among the rafters, which were burning briskly. A still alarm was sent to fire headquarters and the Pequot and Ockford Hose companies were dispatched to the house. A couple of streams of chemicals were emptied upon the burning timbers, causing the blaze to be subdued within a short time, but not until damage estimated at $300 had been occasioned.

The freight steamer, Canadian Ex-

marine, is expected here daily from Halifax to be loaded with automobiles for shipment to New Zealand and Australian ports. Already awaiting the arrival at the state pier of the freighter are 31 carloads of machines shipped from Walkerville, Ont., and Detroit, Mich. It is the belief of the state pier officials that if the freighter does not reach port before next week that close to 100 carloads of machines will be stored there for shipment on the belated craft.

FISHERS ISLAND MAN DIES IN MILITARY HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Dec. 26.—James Young, 48, a well known resident of Fisher's Island, died this morning at the military hospital at Fort Wright, on the Island of chronic heart disease. He was married and was a member of New London lodge of Elks.

Mr. Young was operating his automobile on the island yesterday afternoon and in travelling over the slippery highway it skidded. The driver could not get the car under control with the result that it plunged into an excavation beside the road. The shock of the accident produced a recurrence of the heart attack and he was rushed to the hospital, where he lingered until early this forenoon.

Two record audiences, Christmas day saw Corinne Griffith and Conway Tearle in their leading screen drama, Lilies of the Field. Mr. Barnett promises one of the new Barthelmess plays at an early date; also a masterpiece featuring Miss Alice Jerry.

As far as holiday poultry is concerned the local markets did a record trade. The sale of turkeys checked up to 150 birds with but few left over; geese, chickens and ducks, were in demand with ready sales. Only a few bought ducks. Prime turkeys, were to be had for 55 cents per pound. Three years ago native local turkeys brought 90 cents which caused home buyers to stick to roast pork and beef. All through the local stores fruit moved much slower than last year, with a good demand for celery.

The dry goods trade, which may include the toy and novelty sales, exceeded that of last year. Local dealers offered fine lines, and with larger varieties than ever before. Many visited city markets only to find their best bargains on home counters.

The Methodist Christmas concert and tree were held Thursday evening. The program included chorus singing by the choir and was in charge of W. J. Robertson, Jr. Supt. Irving Thornton announced the program. During the time, telegrams arrived at frequent intervals from Santa Claus, who was coming by aeroplane. He was having some difficulty making the trip, ut finally there was a terrific whirring in the rear of the church, which signified that he had really landed. While his machine rattled and banged outdoors, he bounced in as jolly as ever, to the great delight of everybody, young and old. There were readings and recitations by Doris Arnold, Hazel Johnson, Harriet McCluggage, Arlene Burdick, Emma and Nevra Manchini, Grace Brown, Lucy Webster, Eliza Brown, Mrs. Merton Bartlett and Christine Burdick, and an exercise by Oliver Carter and Chester Arnold. Frank Mell was the Santa Clau.

CANTERBURY

Christmas exercises were held at Cayhead school Friday evening, Dec. 31, at 7.30 o'clock. In response to dainty hand-drawn and painted invitations, about fifty parents and friends attended. They were well pleased with the program, which included brief recitations, songs and dialogues and a play in which Mother Goose's children hung their stockings and planned to serenade old Santa. They and the audience were totally surprised when not only Santa Claus himself but Mrs. Santa Claus, who never before had visited this part of the world, or Canterbury, at least, appeared, bringing gifts for all the children. They also took from the tree and distributed gifts which the children had hung for each other. After the exercises a social hour was passed, while refreshments were served.

The children and teacher are now enjoying their vacation and will return Jan. 5, 1925. Miss Edith Olsen is planning to visit Hartford and their teacher, Miss Esther Kimball, will spend the vacation at her home in Pomfret and in Willimantic and Norwich.

WESTERLY

Miss Beatrice Saunders of the Lawrence hospital, New London was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest H. Saunders.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Krobar of Glastonbury and John Fraser of Meriden were Christmas day guests of Westerly relatives and friends.

The death of Mrs. Bridget Nestor, widow of Patrick Nestor occurred at 4 o'clock Friday morning at her home, 51 Summer street. Mrs. Nestor has been seriously ill for a number of weeks. She is survived by two sons, Dr. Michael H. Nestor of Providence and Edward Nestor of Springfield, Mass., also by six daughters, Mrs. Charles J. Butler and Misses Agnes, Annie, Mary, Catherine of Westerly, and Emma, of Providence.

But one case was tried Friday morning before Judge Michael J. Turano in the session of the Third District court. It was that of Vivian M. Barnard vs. Santo Sposato, alias, in which suit was brought to collect a balance due of fifty dollars for painting done on the house of the plaintiff on Pierce street a year ago.

Clerk M. Walter Flynn, Jr., called the following docket:

Civil—New Writs: Angelina G. Falcone vs. Charles Serra. If unanswered continued one week. Angelina G. Falcone vs. Mary Serra. If unanswered continued one week. Herto-Gelle-Creamer, Inc., vs. Westerly Motors. If unanswered continued one week. Anna H. Saddow vs. Catherine Belkasma. Defaulted. Santo Turano vs. Frank Lenette. Defaulted. Antonio Lorello vs. Victor Barnett. Continued two weeks. Electric Paint and Varnish Company vs. Frank DeGangi. On nisi docket. John F. Davis vs. Louis La Fountaine. On nisi docket. Elvin B. Byers vs. Clifton D. Hall. Continued one week. Vivian M. Barnard vs. Santo Sposato. Ready. Harry King vs. Nathaniel Tinkler. Defaulted. Vivian M. Barnard vs. Patsy Cafone. Judgment given for $37 and costs.

As the trial in the house painting case was heard Mr. Sposato acted as his own lawyer, conducting his case John F. Gallagher appeared for the plaintiff, Barnard. Judge Turano gave a decision for the plaintiff to collect in the sum of $30 and costs.

Barnard testified that he was to receive $165 for the painting job. He was advanced $50 to buy paint and again $50 to pay his workmen and before the job was finished he went to Norwich to work. While there he gave a Norwich man an order for $10 which was paid by Mrs. Sposato, and one quart of alcohol at $2.50 and another quart for the same amount was all that he had received on account and claimed the $50 balance due.

Mr. Sposato, on the stand, stated that two coats of good paint were to be applied and that the job had not been completed. He said that he had called in Keith C. Nelson to finish the work. Mr. Nelson was also placed on the witness stand, as well as Mrs. Sposato, to describe the work as it was done.

Forty-eight families comprising 219 persons received boxes containing supplies for a good Christmas dinner, and the children were made happy by gifts of gloves, stockings, toys and candy, Mrs. Alexander Smith of the city mission announced Friday. Net stockings filled with candy were the gift of the candidates for the Girls' Friendly society of Christ church. The Boy Scouts collected toys and repaired them before bringing them to the mission, and the Women's League for Christmas service met at the mission rooms and dressed the dolls and other toys were painted.

Several persons loaned automobiles and gave their time to aid in delivering the boxes and their help was much appreciated.

A number of persons receiving aid are only in temporary need, but a helping hand is much valued, when "we are in some particular difficulty and is not easily forgotten." Mrs. Smith stated.

The following churches and societies gave generously: Woman's Aid and S. D. B. societies of the Pawcatuck Seventh Day Baptist church, World Wide Guild of First Baptist church, Junior World Wide Guild, Calvary church, King's Daughters of the Congregational church, candidates for the Girls' Friendly of Christ church, Deborah chapter, No. 9, Eastern Star, Elks, Union service Methodist church, United Men's Bible classes, union meeting Wilcox Temple, Pythian Sisters, Travel club, Friday club, Crescent club, W. At the Calvary Baptist church vestry on Elm street, Friday evening, was held the annual Sunday School Christmas concert. Under the direction of the Superintendent of Sunday School William Howard two Christmas trees were arranged. One of the trees was used as a "Giving" tree and the other as a "Receiving" tree, the observance of the Christmas festival in this fashion being largely attended.

The third snow storm of this winter in Westerly occurred early Christmas morning, but during the day the snow melted some, so that the freezing weather of the afternoon caused the streets and sidewalks to be coated with ice. This condition continued through Friday, many residents sprinkling gravel on the slippery surface, as a safeguard to life and limb.

The tug Westerly on Tuesday noon succeeded in breaking a channel through the four inch ice and was able to get a barge of coal up to the docks of the Wilcox company. Another barge is expected for the Andrews company, which will be the last scheduled for river transportation this season.

The Christmas festival of the Broad Street Christian Sunday school was held in the vestry Friday evening. Under direction of Superintendent Isaac Smith a programme was carried out, which included gifts and eats for the Sunday school members.

THE SOCIAL CORNER

LITTLE THOUGHTS SOMETIMES DWELL LONGEST IN THE MEMORY

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
Jonathan Dill and Millicent May

Now, a prosperous farmer was Jonathan Dill;
He had a good farm and he worked with a will.
He had cash in the bank and much credit beside.
And kept blooded stock and a good car to ride.

But, alas, when it came to his home and his wife—
The misery leaned water each day of her life;
And whenever of furnace or lights she would hint,
Her hubby'd inquire if she thought him the Mint.

Mr. Dill is accustomed to having his way,
As witness his dealings with Millicent May.)

For the Dills had one daughter—a very bright lass—
At high school she stood at the head of her class.
But to all talk of college her father said, "No—"
He couldn't afford such a frightful outgo.

Till it came to his ears—was it purely by essence?
Jake Sweet had been dreaming of his daughter, Nance.
Now of neighborhood girls she alone had the wit
To seek college training to make herself fit.

To his home in hot haste did our Jonathan prance.
"I'll see if you knuckle to tow-headed Nance.
You get yourself ready to go off to school.
Jake Sweet shall be made to appear like a fool."

Mr. Dill is accustomed to having his way.
So straight off to college went Millicent May.

Well, she made a good record—far better than most—
And loudly and long did her proud daddy boast.
But his Millicent studied o'er other things too
Than her Latin and math, as some college girls do

When at Christmas she came to her home that first year,
She poured her complaint into Jonathan's ear:
It was really a shame, vowed Millicent May,
Her mother should slave in that out-of-date way.

When she ought to have water all piped for her use,
And lights that would shine when you turned on the juice.
And at Easter time too, all in vain did she plead.
Her father would give her petition no heed.

So when summer arrived, with its long holiday,
No word on the subject did Millicent say.
Till the time in late August a bomb she let fall:
"I'm done with my schooling for good and for all.

"Since no comforts can my mother enjoy,
My pleasure in college the thought would destroy.
I will get me a job over Farmersville way,
And earn my own living," quoth Millicent May.

Oh, her father did rave, he commanded and fumed—
He saw all his pride in his neighbors' sight doomed—
And the battle waxed hot both by night and by day.
While stubborn as Fate was his Millicent May.

'Till an evening when Jonathan came home from town;
As stern as a judge were his tone and his frown:
"I will have you to know, young woman, right now
I'm boss in this house, to my will you must bow.

"I can run my own business without aid from you—
The plumber is coming, the 'lectrician too.
So be done once for all with thus acting the mule.
Just pack up your duds and get right back to school."

Mr. Dill is accustomed to having his way,
So, "Yes, sir, I will," said Millicent May.

Those Within the Dreary Places

A prayer for those within the dreary places,—
The dull, the strange, the erring of all lands.
Who face the future with despairing faces,
And stretch forth pleading unavailing hands.

The slaves of poverty, the heirs of weakness,
The arrogant who will not heed commands.
The spiritless who wear a coward's meekness,
The desperate who spill life's creeping sands.

Pray for the wise and favored racers,
The revelers among the sunny ways,
The holders of the prized and vantage places,
The sharers of the bright and happy days.

But for a moment's pause with earnest faces,
Which common blood and fatherhood demands,
A prayer for those within the dreary places,
Who stretch forth pleading, unavailing hands.

THE OLD BARN CAT

He's minus half his normal tail,
One ear is chewed awry, the eyesight
Has begun to fail in his left yellow eye.
His coat is not the glossy kind
That old maids love to stroke, he does
Not look at all refined, and one front
Toe is broke. His purr sounds like a
Brooding hen or wind across the roof,
He's been the victim now and then of Useless horses's hoof. He sits upon a
Spruce peg with right eye gleaming
Light and nurses that decrepid leg he
Injured in a fight. He is no beauty,
Never was, like dainty, pampered cats;
He'd never dare to show his paws
Among aristocrats. But, earless, tailless, toeless, rough, whate'er his ills
May be, he still is made of proper
Stuff and is the cat for me! No other cat that treads the earth from Tennessee to Rhine can show the same
Rat-killing worth as this old cat of Mine! I fill my graneries with rye,
My bins with oats, and wheat, then Rats begin to living high on food they like to eat; where is the pretty pussy
Then with ribbon on his neck? Is he
A friend to needy men? No, he is not
On deck, but this old barn cat, bless
His heart, is on the trail at once; he Always makes an early start and sallies forth and hunts! A rat as large
As any pup he tackles with a vim,
And though himself half eaten up he Always conquers him; he slays his Victims by the score, he fights with Might and main beneath the bin and Granery floor to save his master's Grain! How much he earns I'll never Know, he keeps no show of books;
It is a large amount I owe, I figure
From his looks! He gave his toe and Tail for me, he gave his eye and ear;
No matter what his looks may be, he's Always welcome here!

ABOUT GOOD RESOLUTIONS

Dear Editor, Sisters and Friends of the Social Corner: Happy New Year to you all! It is near time to take down the old calendar, and to put up the new one in its place, tear off the cover and begin the New Year. I guess nearly every one performs that task on or about the first day of every year. Then there is the making of good resolutions, the turning over of a new leaf. How easy it is to make them and how hard it is to keep them. They slip our mind and we find ourselves doing what we would not do if we only kept them in mind. It makes me think of a man who made ten good resolutions the last day of December and intended to keep them but—

Ten good resolutions standing in a line,
Furnace fire went out and then there were nine.
Nine good resolutions trying hard to wait,
The man pounds his thumb and then there were eight.
Eight good resolutions on the way to Heaven,
Preacher's sermon hits the men and then there were seven.
Seven good resolutions in a sorry fix,
Wife makes some inquiry and then there were six.
Six good resolutions trying hard to thrive,
Key hole cant be found and then there were five.
Five good resolutions only five no more,
Along comes a poker game and then there were four.
Four good resolutions as happy as can be,
Along comes a horse race and then there were three.
Three good resolutions deciding what to do,
Pretty woman comes along and then there were two.
Two good resolutions having a little fun,
Wife spends too much money and then there is one.
One good resolution left a month before,
Never mind, next New Year's day he can make some more.

Best wishes to all,

SILVER LOCKS.

A KNITTED DOLL

Dear Sisters: I am sending directions for a knitted doll.

Use four No. 16 needles for shoes, stockings and head; four No. 14 for sweater and trousers; Germantown wool fourfold for all but the head and hands, which are of white Saxony. It is best to commence with these:

Golf Stockings: Cast on 36 st, plain 10 rows; reverse so that this cuff will turn over; plain 20 rows. On the twenty first of these rows narrow twice by knitting 2 st. together consecutively in center of one needle. Form calf by narrowing every other row in same way until reduced to 18 st; 2 rows plain, then put in black or tan for shoes; 4 rows purl, 2 plain; then divide the stitches, leaving 2 on calf needle. Knit these plain, widening between 3d and 4th and 5th and 6th rows by taking up and knitting the stitches of the previous row; purl back, plain and purl back 6 rows. 7th row plain, purl back 6 st. then narrow and turn around, knit 3 and narrow, then again and purl the three narrow. Continue this until 3 are left. Now pick up stitch on one side of heel. Knit across the instep, pick up on other side. The instep must be shaped by narrowing every other row each side of the heel until there are 18 st; knit plain, then narrowing occasionally until 6st are left; break thread long enough to run through stitch and draw up and fasten.

Trousers: 50 st. on one needle, plain and purl back 12 rows, widening at beginning and end on each side of the two middle stitches of 4th, 8th and 12th rows; divide the stitch, knit half with a third needle, narrowing every 4th row, for twelve rows; bind off. Other leg the same.

Sweater: 48 st; rib of 2 and 2 for 16 rows, 25 rows plain, divide the stitches, putting half on one needle; plain and purl back for 8 rows; break off thread. Knit the other side in same manner, then form the shoulder strap by knitting the 6 end stitches of one needle back and forth 8 times; knit them together with the 6 st on the needle opposite, binding off; break thread. Knit the last 6 st at the other end of needle in the same way. Now knit around and pick up strap stitches as you did the heel; narrow every other row, until the strap stitches are taken up; 2 rows plain; then rib 2 and 2 for 10 rows; bind off.

Arm: 8 st; 1st row, widen by throwing thread over before the first st; purl back, widening in the same way. Do this until there are 28 st on the needle, then divide stitches on the other needles; knit around; narrow twice consecutively every 5th row until you have 16 st; rib 2 and 2 for ten rows; bind off.

Hand: 16 st on three needles; plain 8 rows, knit 3 st on separate needle around 2 rows for thumb, break thread and run through them; knit the hand 4 more rows and gradually narrow until 6 are left; draw thread through and fasten.

Head: Cast ten st on one needle, 8 on each of the others; knit around ten rows on the needle with 10 stitches; knit one st, then widen as directed, between each st until the last; the other needles plain; 2 rows plain, next widen on each side of the 6 middle st, to form the chain, next plain, next narrow again at the chin, 2 rows plain, then widen each of the 6 center st for nose; next plain, next narrow the first and last st of nose, plain, and narrow nose every other round until nose stitches are narrowed away, then widen once each side nose; 3 rows plain, then break a long thread to run in stitch and draw up after the doll is stuffed. The head is shaped by widening occasionally on the other two needles, then narrowed after the nose is finished, until there are about 15 st.

The hair is made brown mercerized crochet thread; 25 st on one needle, one row plain, next throw the thread twice around the forefinger of the left hand and knit in each st, knit back plain, 2 rows back and forth plain. Next row throw the thread around the finger as before, plain 2 rows back and forth, then narrow like the heel—cap, leaving 8 st in the center and when all are narrowed away bind off.

The stuffing begins with the toes, then the legs. Sew them to trousers under the golf cuff. Stuff trousers and sew to the head of the sweater rib, so that the rib can turn up. Stuff sweater, then the hands; sew them to the sleeves under the rib. Stuff, then sew sleeves to the sweater. Sew head on under the sweater rib and stuff; draw up; sew hair on. Crochet a tam-o'-shanter cap and sew on securely.

RECIPES TO TRY.

Dear Members of the Social Corner: You may like to put these recipes in your cook book for future use:

Custard for Fruit Sponge: Beat the yolks of three eggs until light, and beat in gradually three-fourths cup of sugar, flavoring to taste. Scald two cups of sweet milk and stir into this, then put back over the fire in a double boiler and cook as for boiled custard. This I flavor with grated rind of orange or lemon.

Prune Sponge: Soften three tablespoons of granulated gelatine in one-half cup of cold water. Then dissolve it in two and one-half cups of boiling water. Add one cup of sugar to this and stir until it is dissolved. When done add one-half cup orange juice and three tablespoons of lemon juice. As soon as this is congealed begin beating it. Continue about ten minutes, add a little at a time the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. When the whole is white and fluffy, fold in one cup of cooked prunes and place on ice. Serve with a sauce of cold custard.

Casserole Eggs: Heat two cups of rich milk to a boiling point and stir in cracker crumbs. Add one tablespoon of butter and one-half teaspoon salt. Allow to cool until the crumbs have absorbed all the milk. Beat yolks of egg with three tablespoons of water. Mix with milk and crumbs and put in the stiffly beaten whites of six eggs. Turn into a buttered pan or casserole. Put the cover on and bake in a quick oven about 35 to 40 minutes. Remove cover about two minutes before taking from the oven so the mixture will brown. Serve at once.

Pork Cake: One pound fat salt pork, two cups boiling water turned on pork and let cool, one cup molasses, two cups brown sugar, one-fourth cup orange peel chopped fine, one pound raisins, one pound currants, one-half pound citron, one tablespoon allspice, one tablespoon cloves, one tablespoon cinnamon, two teaspoons soda and one of cream tartar stirred altogether and dissolved in a little water, five cups flour after sifting. If not enough put in a little more.

Where is Squire Phin, Hampton, who sent in recipes for marble cake? I have those recipes sent in by that name and they are very tasty.

Fruit Cake: Two cups molasses, one cup sugar, three-fourths cup butter, four eggs beaten together, one cup sour milk, two teaspoons soda, two teaspoons all kind of spices, one teaspoon nutmeg, six cups flour, one pound raisins, one pound currants, one-half pound citron, two tablespoons orange peel. Bake in a slow over two and one-half hours. Warranted to keep two years.

Coolidge Cake:—One pound of butter, put in a basin, then add 1 pint boiling coffee, 2 cups sugar, 1 cup molasses, mixed with 1 tablespoon soda, 7 cups sifted flour, 1 tablespoon of powdered ginger, 1-4 teaspoon cloves, 1 tablespoon grated nutmeg, 1 lb. stoned chopped dates, 2 lbs. seeded raisins, 2 tablespoons of sugared orange peel, 2 teaspoons baking powder. This is delicious and makes four loaves. I have just made it.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Social Corner Editor and Social Corner Sisters: To all, greetings, and a very Happy New Year. I was a bit afraid we would have a green Christmas but as I am writing this the snow is coming down and the scene is wintry indeed. But I hope you will all have a warm fireside, warm friends and family to make your New Year a happy one.

I want to thank the many sisters who sent me Christmas and birthday cards. I missed sending cards to some, as their pen names only were signed and no address. I would appreciate full name and address. Many many thanks, for the following: Foxglove, Huldy, Peggy Alden, Wisteria, Anne Mell, and Norma, also a health card from White Clover, whose address I don't know. The season's greetings and best wishes. Yours.

To The Corner Members

CHATTY LETTER FROM FOXGLOVE.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: It has been a long time since I have written the Corner, but I have not forgotten any of you, and mother and I talk of you and the good time we had meeting with you this summer. I am sorry "Whirlwind" and I could not meet with you for the December meetings, but I had company one Wednesday and the other Wednesday it was rather cold. Unless one drives a car they do not realize how cold it is driving even in a closed car. It makes a long day and a long drive for us in the cold. In summer we do not mind it as the days are long.

I know I owe "Dom Pedro, Soap, Balsam Fir and Effie" a letter and I will write you all after the holidays. Mother has decided to go to Chicago for the winter and as she did not decide to go until Thursday morning, December 18th, and left Tuesday, December 23, we had to hustle to get her ready. I know she will write the Corner a nice letter after she gets there.

I have sent about 50 cards to the sisters and those I have not sent to I wish just as much happiness the coming year. I hope Santa was good to you all and brought you lots of pretty and useful gifts. Most of all I hope he brought you health and happiness. To all who have sickness or sorrow of any kind I send the sympathy of my mother and myself.

Twice Twenty: Whirlwind and I did not get to see you this summer, but will try hard next summer and maybe make you twice glad. Glad when we come and glad when we go.

Dom Pedro: I think I have to go to London next spring to a convention. If so Whirlwind and I will surely make you a call if God spares us all till then.

Olga: I missed not going to the Social Corner in December and so I missed your bright and smiling face. I wish if you ever got up as far as Southington you would make Whirlwind and I a visit. Wish Florence would come up purposely to call.

Effie M.: I hope you will not be lonesome over the holidays and now that mother has left I will write you a nice long letter and tell you what the good Santa brought me.

Sunday I hope to have Whirlwind and her family with us for turkey dinner. It would not seem right if we did not have dinner together once during the holiday season.

I have a fuschia with little white lice on it. Can any sister tell me what to do for it? It has blossomed since Whirlwind gave it to me last May till about a week ago. Then we discovered these little white lice and think they are the cause of the leaves falling off.

Guess: Why haven't you been to Southington to make that promised visit? There are three of us waiting to see you. We did have such a good time at your place last summer. How do you like your new home? Whirlwind expected Elmer and the boys up for Christmas.

Suppose all the sisters that have small sons and daughters were busy getting their trees ready. My son is too big for that now—but we love to make presents just the same.

Well Sisters I think I have written enough for this time and will try and write oftener. How good it seem to have a page full and overflowing. I wish every sister and her family a happy, prosperous New Year. To the editor I wish the same and the best year ever in his business financially. He deserves credit for the interest he shows in our welfare.

Mother, known as Foxglove's Mother extends to you all the season's greetings and will write for herself after she gets to Chicago.

Yours for the interest of the Corner.

FOXGLOVE.

A SHORT STORY SCRAP BOOK

Dear Cornerites: I took a medium sized scrap book. In this I pasted short stories, and had it bound in a handsome silk cover, with the initials of the owner. This made a delightful gift for the semi-invalid. It is good looking enough to lie on the drawing room table of any lady.

There was another scrap book I filled with pictures, funny rhymes and fairy tales. These were good enough for the children in the hospitals, etc.

Then another scrap book for a friend who was a doctor. I took two scrap books. In those I arranged and pasted different heading. As telepathic, detective, love, problem, dialect. In that way his patients could easily find the kind of literature that they liked and he put them in the waiting room.

I had a rug that was so faded I could not use it. I dyed it green and am putting it down this time for the second year. Took a paint brush (rather stiff) dipped it in the dye and went all over the carpet. It dried in two weeks and looks fine, have dyed matting the same way.

TWO NEW MEMBERS

Dear Corner Editor: Being interested in the Corner and some of its members I should like to join, if I may.

I'll take as my penname

JOHNNY ON THE SPOT.

Dear Social Corner Editor: Have heard of the Corner for some time and know several of its members. Thought I would like to join too and would like to take as my pen name.

HOW TO MAKE A BAYBERRY BALL

Dear Editor and Corner Friends: Aroused by Hepatica's pleasant letter on two weeks page, I answer a tardy present to the roll call.

I must say to you, dear friend Hepatica, in apology for not having answered your most welcome and very pleasant letter, that I am one of those who have streaks of letter-writing, and for some months now unfortunately, or fortunately, perhaps, in the opinion of some of those to whom I write, I have not had a letter-writing streak. When another one arrives, you may hear from me directly. While I like the plan you proposed, I should be thinking all the time, "Now most likely my friend is thinking me very different to what I am and would be much disappointed if we should meet." That could be the only drawback to the idea. And let me say that I think you underestimate your own letters which I think very good in every way. I wish you and yours a merry Christmas and a new year filled with all the things you most desire.

While I have not sent in a letter for many months I at least had the Corner in mind for I wrote out with the idea including it in a letter to the Corner a little story which was told me by a d[illegible] I called on when on one of my hikes. But I shall have to leave it out this time as my letter will be too long without it.

Theodas: I thank you for your kind response to my request for a history of the Corner; also for the cordial invitation to be present at the meetings. If I do not attend I enjoy the pleasant anticipation of the others and the accounts of the good times as told in the letters of those who do attend.

Daisy Dean: Thank you for bringing The Barefoot Boy to the fore. Most everyone knows that Whittier wrote The Barefoot Boy. I did, but somehow the first two lines about the "little man with cheek of tan" didn't promise well," so I didn't read it. I like it so much that I think it worth memorizing if one loves out-door things.

Did anyone ever see a bayberry ball? This is a ball 12 or 14 inches in diameter made of bayberries and to be hung up as a Christmas decoration. I never saw one until I made one so the idea may be new and acceptable to others at this season, especially as the bayberry is called the northern mistletoe. The bayberry bushes are thick with berries this year so anyone who lives where bayberries grow can easily make one.

Choose if possible, stalks of bayberry where the little bunches of berries are evenly placed all the length of the small branches. These make a prettier ball,—more airy looking, than where the berries grow in heavy bunches at the ends of the branches. However, the latter kind can be used.

Choose stalks of a uniform size as far as possible. Perhaps 20 or 30 stalks will be necessary.

Break off the straight stem as close as possible to the point where the small branches begin to grow out and break off the bare ends of the branches where there are no berries.

Using a long piece of strong string, tie two pieces of bayberry together at the point where the five or six small branches begin to grow out of the stalk; or if there little branches are too short, tie the string a little way down the stalk. Then add one piece at a time, tying a knot that will not slip each time and making sure that the string is placed around each new piece added in such a way that it will not sag down after the ball has hung up awhile. This is what happened to the first one I made, leaving bare spaces as the branches slipped to the under side of the ball. However, if this happens, pieces of bayberry can be inserted to make a pretty good ball without taking it down.

Keep on tying in fresh pieces until a little more than half the ball is made. As each piece is added, have an eye to the roundness of the ball, as you cannot well clip the ends after the ball is completed without making the berries fall.

At this point if the string is used up, tie on a fresh piece, long enough to serve as a loop to hang it up by. Also if you wish to suspend anything at all heavy from the ball, it is best to tie a string around the middle now and let it hang down until wanted.

After the ball has got to this point the stalks necessary to finish it can be inserted among the stems without tying.

After the ball is finished and hung up, pieces of cedar can be pushed gently among the berries and will stay put. I tried this having the cedar stand out about two inches beyond the ball which looked well but it took away the roundness, and possibly to put in more stubby pieces here and there and have the green just reach the ends of the branches would look better; or the effect of the gray berries alone may be preferred.

If the ball is hung low enough so the center is seen, pieces of red paper could be pushed in to hide the string and ends of the stalks which, however, do not show to any extent.

If anyone is so fortunate as to know where to get the red berries of the black alder (called northern holly) slender branches thrust in with the cedar might be pretty. For me the red berries spoil the somewhat eerie effect of the little gray berries which are suggestive of pleasant things, because, as we all know, candles, and moreover, pleasantly fragrant candles are made of them. And as we are thinking about candles, let me put down a Christmas verse which for many years has made a pleasant twinkling where the pictures hang "on mem'ry's wall."

"Twinkle, twinkle, Christmas tapers,
Twinkle, twinkle, one by one.
Don't be sad because you're tapers,
Not the glorious shining sun.

I should think smaller bayberry balls could be made by using stalks where the small branches, which grow from one point, are only three or four inches long. Perhaps a number of these would be prettier as a decoration for a small room.

I never heard of finding pussy willows in December before, but I found some on the thirteenth. Does anyone know whether this is very unusual?

I hope our editor and all cornerites had a merry Christmas and may they all live long to write good letters for the Corner.

In sending out gifts and greetings to our friends, let us have a kind thought for those who are far from home and dear ones, perhaps in loneliness and trouble; whether through some fault of their own or unavoidable happenings, we are all good and bad, fortunate and unfortunate, the children of one father, and kind thoughts and loving prayers for such at the season of good will, and all through the year must help.

I close with the last verse of a poem which I have asked the editor to print in full in the poetry column if he can spare the space. It appealed to a number of friends so that they wanted a copy, some of them feeling perhaps that they were of those who walked life's sunny ways, others that they linkered in the shadows all no doubt recognizing the need of broad charity and comparison, each for all. "I beg a moment's pause, with earnest faces, which common blood and fatherhood demands, a prayer for those within the dreary places, who stretch forth pleading, unavailing hands."

PEDESTRIAN.

THE GREATEST GIFT

Dear Social Corner Friends: Each one has had some great gift for the benefit of the world. History is most interesting when studied by the epochs of discoveries and the changes they brought in the lives of the people. The discovery and use of machinery, the microscope, and all the improved methods of transportation from steamboat to airplane made a fuller and better life possible to all.

It is interesting to notice the difference in the list of the seven wonders of the ancient world and the wonders of the modern world. The ancient wonders were monuments, statues, buildings, something unusual in size for those times, and requiring great physical strength.

The wonders of the modern world such as the wireless telegraph and telephone and radio automobile, airplane, radium, anesthetics and antiseptics and antitoxins, spectrum analysis and x-rays are all the result of much study and experiment and requiring great mental effort much more than physical strength.

We no longer have the greatest need for physical work and strength, but far more important now is mental superiority.

The invention of machinery changed everything in the life of the world. These world gifts have usually been discovered by accident or the idea suggested in fun as impossible, but the idea grasped by the right mind caused the impossible to become a fact. One man discovers, many men manufacture the product, and soon everyone knows more or less about the successful use of the discovery.

We have been placing most of our public effort on the physical development of children, and we should have taken the mental, moral and physical together. The person is a failure if either one is undeveloped. What we need is to find out just what ideas have been developed in the child and in the person. In the child the work can still be done, in the adult it may be too late.

The adult criminal may have to be confined for the safety of others, not that he is to blame for his wrong doing. The blame belongs to those who neglected to teach and develop the ideas that he needed to use in life, in business, in his home, and which would have made him a safe and respected citizen instead of a criminal.

We would know just what to expect of an untrained horse, we should just as surely know what to expect from an untrained person. The human animal is superior because he is capable of reading and thinking and reasoning new ideas, and so is not confined to knowing only what he has already learned. Nothing he had memorized will help him in meeting new situations new aggravations and temptations. The animal helps himself to whatever he finds, uses what he can and trumples underfoot and wastes what he cannot immediately use. The untrained human has the same instincts and does the same and considers it smart to take more than his rightful share and superior to waste more than he needs to use.

If we understand we should know just what to do and say about the delinquent. And when we enforce force proper mental and moral as well as physical care for each child there will not be many delinquents. Many children are nervous and sensitive and need different care in the home and in school from the more ordinary robust calm child. It takes so little roughness to injure the tiny plant or the young child.

We would be very careful of the choice plant but not so understanding about the sensitive child. The great gift of the present age is the development of the science of mental and moral control in the care of children which everyone needs to understand.

The first six years of a person's life are so accumulating and developing right ideas. When older we cannot make them see. They are then too busy living according to the ideas they first accepted.

Think right, teach right and then right actions and conduct will be the result.

With the season's greetings to editor and members.

JEREMY.

GREETINGS FROM HINCKLEY

Dear Social Corner Members and Readers: It is too late to wish you a merry Christmas so I'm going to wish you a happy New Year. Hope it brings you all good luck and happiness.

Delish Deal: See you are trying to get the pin for our clubs. It is o. k. Put it through. Every club has a pin, why not us?

Daisy Dean: The poem you sent in about The Barefoot Boy I used to recite in school when I was a girl.

Now I want to tell you a story, as Blue Baby did. It isn't about wife No. 1 and No. 2, but it is a true one about how a family was insulted. This family had been having hard luck for the past two years, the husband was injured and unable to work and there was a new baby, making a family of ten in all. The husband had just gone to work and the wife was working two or three days a week and many had been good to them to give them credit.

One night after the husband had gone to bed and the wife was reading while waiting for the eldest daughter to return there came a knock on the door and officers were there with papers to search the house for liquor. They came in but as they had never made it nor sold it there was none to be found. It was nothing but an insult to a hardworking and unfortunate family. It would have been better had those who made such a charge turned to and helped this family, but there are times these days when it seems you can't trust your best friends. The family is poor but it is honest and law abiding.

On the twelfth of December Vira's husband was 91. His daughter and family were home to see him, besides others. He had a birthday cake and a number of presents. He is in good health and few can beat that age.

We all had a fine time at Christmas I love Christmas just the same as I did when a girl.

Raisin Cake—One yeast cake dissolved in two thirds of a cup of warm water, add about a cup of flour and put in a warm place until light. Then add two cups sugar, one cup lard, one cup sweet milk, four cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one cup raisins, one teaspoon nutmeg. It makes two loaves. Bake in a slow oven for about an hour.

Cabbage Roll: Take three pounds of hamburg steak, two cups rice, one pound onions, salt and pepper to taste. Mix them all together, make into balls and roll in cabbage leaves, after the cabbage has been scaled enough to make the leaves flexible. Put rolls into kettle, weigh them down, and cook till done in water.

Best wishes to all.

CARING FOR THE OIL CLOTH

Dear Corner Folks: Trust you all had a merry Christmas. I am sending you my way to keep oil cloth or linoleum bright. Never use soap in the water when cleaning either of them. It fades the colors and breaks up the paint. Ammonia, also must be avoided, because it gives the cloth a dull, dead look. If a brush must be used, it should be a soft one, but it is better not to use any except in cases when the oil cloth has been long neglected, or poorly washed for some time previously. Take a clean flannel cloth and apply clean, warm water, which is finally to be removed by soaking it up into the washing cloth again, after it has been wrung out. The oil cloth is then wiped dry with another piece of clean flannel. After the oil cloth has become thoroughly dry, apply to it some warm linseed oil. The housekeeper who tries this for the first time will probably use too much and make the cloth so sticky that every particle of dust will adhere to it. Only a very very little is to be used, and slightly rubbed into the cloth, giving it a handsome gloss. The linseed oil will do more harm than good unless it is used very sparingly as explained. In the country where there is plenty of sawmills in hand it can be used in place of the oil, and I myself much prefer it to the oil for then there is no fear of getting the cloth sticky as done when the oil is used and the skim milk gives the oil cloth a most beautiful gloss. Of course oil cloths that have to have too frequent washings, will look old in time and the housekeeper should be cautious about washing, when a dusting will answer just as well.

Balsam Fir: Your nice letter at hand and will try to answer all questions asked as soon as the holiday season is over.

Joan: Your card also at hand. Sorry to hear the news it contained.

CRIMSON RAMBLER.

CORSAGE SACHETS.

Dear Corner Members: Perhaps you keep at hand a box or bag where suitable pieces of silks, ribbons, laces and the like may be tucked away to be drawn from when the time arrives for making such little gifts as sachets, etc. You will doubtless find it much that is available. It is wise, also, to provide some extra ribbons, sachets, and odd notions as these will often save the day when you wish to make some little fancy requisite and have not the time to shop. When you have the opportunity take advantage of a sale of ribbon remnants. Choose such colors as to keep your little sticks sufficiently varied. It will also be helpful if you make clippings, as you notice them of designs.

I think most of our lady friends like to have dainty attractive personal belongings, and are more pleased if the gifts are woven by our own hands, even of the pretty article in cheaper grade.

I made six tiny corsage sachets—they require three-quarters of a yard of two inch. I made the pads, filled the pads with wadding and sachet powder, whipped the top edges together, sewed a tiny brass safety pin to each one, ready to wear. I tied the six squares together with a piece of narrow ribbon, making a bow at the top. If wider ribbon is chosen more will be needed for square pads.

I wish to thank all who sent cards. You will hear from me later. I was somewhat disappointed that some did not include their address.

BUSY NOW IN FLORIDA

The Season's Greetings to Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner, one and all. May the New Year bring health, joy and prosperity to all. To all the kind sisters, thanks for the lovely cards and letters received and will try to answer one and all as soon as possible.

Here in Florida for my second Christmas and I'll have to admit that I wish I was in Connecticut again just to be among my own folks for the holidays.

I love Florida as much as ever but, as the children say "It don't seem like Christmas not to see the snow during that time."

Here the men are carting oranges by the truck load to be shipped. The garden stuff is in the market right from the garden. Everywhere folks are plowing for the spring gardens. Potatoes are being put into the ground now. Right in my own garden I have just pulled the last of my bed of radishes and lettuce. My neighbor is pulling up his sweet potatoes for market. In another month there will be our big Volusia county fair. Twice as large as last years. Last winter our county took a good many prizes at the Madison Square Garden.

Our own demonstrator was there with the woman's exhibits from all clubs in the county. It was a beautiful sight to see. Tourists are coming in by the thousand. I read in a journal from California, that the real estate men are hard put by their fellow workers in Florida. No wonder! Everyone becomes a live wire when he starts in the game here. Last month, November, there were over 16,000 cars come in over the toll bridge at Jacksonville, not mentioning those coming by train and others on the west coast of Florida.

In August we had a hard spell of rainy weather and a good many of the roads were cut up, but every county is rushing the work with extra trucks and men.

I will close now, so many more sisters will find a place for their holiday letters.

Best wishes again to all from

E. M. R. C. P.

RHYME WINNER

Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I am not a Corner member, but I shall call myself a Christmas Corner guest. I am writing to let you know how I earned $5 in a rhyme contest in a Boston paper. My husband and I sat down one rainy Sunday afternoon writing poetry.

We wrote quite a few verses until I saw an Add Christmas Club plan in their paper with rules we had to follow.

It was real fun comparing them after we wrote quite a number. I suppose most of you are acquainted with the Christmas Club in our town.

I have belonged to the Chelsea Christmas Club and that gave me the inspiration which has been a pleasure as well as a financial help this year. At least when my family is only working two or three days a week. So I expect to join again. This is the verse I wrote:

Christmas Club Plan
Is for the wisest man
Join and don't forget
In December they deliver your check.

So I received my check which I appreciated very much. As the Social Corner page is so interesting to me I had to let you know of my first winnings. I am sending a recipe for Economy Cake: Boil together for 5 minutes 2 cups granulated sugar, 2 cups cold water, 2 tablespoons shortening, 1 pound raisins, 1-4 pound citron. When cool add, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 3 1-2 cups flour. Bake one hour.

Trusting you all had a merry Christmas. I remain,

RHYME WINNER.

HAD DELIGHTFUL TIME.

Dear Social Corner Editor: A short time ago I spent the day with the Social Corner sisters as East Killingly and had a delightful time. Several of the members invited me to join them. So if I may, I will sign.

TRIXY.

(Your name will be added to the Corner membership list just as soon as you send your correct name, which is necessary for the Corner records, but not for publication. S. C. Editor.)

ATTENDED AND NOW JOINS.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: I have heard much praise for the friendship and good will manifested at the meetings of the Social Corner from time to time by some of its members.

I attended one of your meetings at East Killingly, in November, I think. Like the Queen of Sheba, the half had not been told me. I, too, ask for membership with the Social Corner members, wishing to take as my pen name.

BUFFALO.

THOSE WE MEET

Dear Social Corner: I was so glad to see the poem, The Barefoot Boy, sent in by Daisy Dean.

What a lovely poem it is. How I wish this world had a large quota of barefoot boys and barefoot girls, with cheek of tan; with their turned up pantalettes, and their merry whistled tunes, with their red lips redder still kissed by strawberries on the hill.

What a lovely world this would be if we were closer to nature, to our mother nature, and not so far from natural into the unnatural.

I now see why I could not find that poem in my collection. It is because I have not Whittier's poems. I guess I will have them and if I do not find another poem so much to my liking, the pleasure of this one, The Barefoot Boy—and in my own mind barefoot girl also, for we no longer sacrifice a girl's health, freedom, and happiness, to the sins of a small part will pay for the whole book.

I am glad no one is worried about the illness of the Social Corner sons. We all know a good thing when we see it. I guess we need not worry about a Social Corner baby that has held its own for 14 years and has given us so much pleasure and profit and has a list up about 1500 members who have penned letters for it. It is prosperous O. K.

I agree with the member who writes that she is often disappointed with the people whom she meets. We meet lots of people in our daily walks, oh good, so unselfish, indeed so good to her friends, that you watch for her lovely wings to pop out and you are stung beyond words to find so many pairs of wings are black. You lift the cover and put them into the kitchen stove.

My mother says they are not all black but have a white lining, as every one has some good in them even if we are disappointed in them. I am glad to hear it even if so many of us do not see the white lining, and so now I never raise the cover of my kitchen stove for fear the flames will eat up the white lining.

ALOISE JANET.

PLEASED WITH GREETINGS.

Social Corner Sisters: I want to send just a letter to express to you all how much I appreciate your thoughtfulness and how much it means to one shut in as I am, with so many remembering me at this time. I could read between the lines the sympathy and interest intended by the senders and I do surely thank each one of the senders and will not try to mention the names of each as that would make my letter too long and take up too much space on the page as there will be more than enough to fill it this time I expect.

I have not been able to get out to see any of the pretty things in the stores this year or to even buy cards and there are upward of 60 names on my list I wanted to send to, but had made up my mind I'd have to let them all slip by, when a little while ago a cousin in Waterbury sent me a package to help the disappointment and a friend in my village also brought in a package so I had over 40 I could send and by sending to relatives and the longest standing friends (oldest ones) and in some instances making one card do for a family, was able to send greetings to quite a few, but not all I wanted to. So please all who did not receive a Christmas greeting from me remember there was one in my heart for you and accept it now.

I received about 50 cards and about half were from the Social Corner sisters. Thanks once more from Social Corner sister

PROTECT THE LAUREL.

Dear Editors and Corner Friends: Our mountain laurel is one of our most beautiful native shrubs both when covered with its wonderful masses of pink and white flowers in early summer and during the rest of the year on account of its rich lustrous foliage as evergreen, which is one of our native shrubs are. It makes a striking feature in a winter landscape. Laurel is distributed from Canada to Florida, and is a typical feature of our New England woods and pastures. Not found in other countries, it is an essentially American plant, and it should be our pleasure and duty to protect it from destruction. It is gathered extensively twice a year. In summer the flowers are taken for home decoration, in winter the inroads are much more extensive and dangerous, enormous quantities are then used for festoons, wreaths and in the Christmas dressing for the decoration of ballrooms, stores and houses as well as for outdoor decorations of our streets. The foliage keeps well and bears transportation to a distance. It is to be noted that this cutting is all from plants which are grown for this purpose, although it is a shrub easily cultivated. The flowers are borne only upon the shoots of the previous year's growth, so

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

STOCK PRICES ADVANCED.

New York, Dec. 26.—Stock prices surged forward today under the leadership of coppers, shattering the Wall street tradition of a dull and featureless post-holiday market. Forty-seven individual issues, 18 of them coppers, smashed their previous 1924 highs, carrying the general industrial average to the highest level in five years.

Spirited buying of the coppers took place following the announcement that sales of the red metal in the east were being made at 15 cents a pound for the first time this year. American Smelting was the leader in that group, jumping more than five points to 100 3-8, the highest quotation recorded since 1917.

Other coppers to break through their previous maximum prices were Anaconda, Kennecott, Utah, Chile, Cerro De Pasco, Magma and Butte and Superior. Some recessions took place when the directors of the Inspiration Copper company met and took no dividend action, the recent resumption of payments by the Anaconda leading to the expectation in some quarters that the inspiration directors would take similar action this time. The advance, which comprised practically all issues with the exception of the oils, took place despite the maintenance of the 4 1-2 per cent rate for call money.

United States Steel common touched 119 3-4, the highest price in seven years, on buying influenced by reports of a further expansion in steel operations. Several of the minor steels also developed marked strength, Ludlum, which registered a four point gain on Wednesday, adding two more today by touching a new top at 35 1-4. Other issues to sell at the year's best prices included Hudson and General Motors, Dupont, American Locomotive, American Car and Foundry, Philadelphia Company, Radio Corporation, Texas Gulf Sulphur and Beechnut Packing.

Market Street Railway first preferred was the sensational individual performer, jumping from 29 to 42. Other outstanding strong spots were American Ice, United States Realty, American Brake Shoe, Nash Motor, Sears-Roebuck and Westhington Pump, all of which closed from 3 to 7 1-2 points higher.

Trading in the rails was restricted by the mixed nature of the November earnings report now being published. New York Central sold at 119 3-4, the best price since 1912; Norfolk & Western crossed 133 to a new high for a gain of more than 3 points and Southern Railway preferred and "Soo" preferred also registered new high records. Several others including Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake and Ohio, Reading, Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville and Nashville, "Nickel Plate," Western Pacific, Delaware and Hudson and Pittsburgh and West Virginia advanced a point or two.

Call money ruled unchanged at 4 1-2 per cent. The time money and commercial paper markets were unchanged with business quiet.

Trading in the foreign exchanges was restricted by the observance of a holiday in London but the rates held firm. Demand sterling ruled around 4.39 cents.

BOND MARKET.

New York, Dec. 26.—Resumption of trading in the bond market after the Christmas holiday was marked by a fresh advance in prices under the leadership of the copper liens. Net gains, ranging from 1 to 4 1-2 points in the active issues, carried a number of convertible bonds to new high prices for the year. Holiday influences, however, were reflected in the smaller volume of business.

Maxima Copper 7s led the upward movement in the copper shares, spurting 4 1-2 points to a 1924 top price at 130. Smaller gains by Chile 6s and Anaconda 7s were in line with the general buoyancy of copper stocks, based upon the rise in the price of the red metal to the highest figure of the year and the optimism engendered by Anaconda's resumption of dividend payments earlier in the week.

Rail bonds displayed a firm tone, with trading featured by a rise of 3 1-4 points in Norfolk and Western convertible 6s to a new high level at 123 1-2. Among the other issues which gained a point or so were "Katy" adjustment 5s, Erie convertible 4s "D," Chesapeake & Ohio convertible 5s and New York Central 6s.

Sugar company liens also gave a good demonstration of group strength, Warner refunding 7s, Punta Alegre 8s and Eastern Cuba 7 1-2s moved up 1 to 1 3-8 points and were the leaders.

The holiday interruption forced an interruption in new financing although bankers were at work on a number of new offerings scheduled for next week. Negotiations for a $3,000,000 ten-year 7 per cent loan to the Saar district of Germany by a syndicate of New York and Frankfort bankers were said to be nearing completion.

CURB MARKET.

New York, Dec. 26.—The upward movement of stock prices was resumed on a broad and active scale in today's curb market with the public utility shares giving the best demonstration of group strength. National Power and Light advanced 8 points to 218, Commonwealth moved up 7 3-4 to 132 1-2 and net gains of 1 to 4 1-2 points were recorded by American Gas & Electric, American Power and Light, Lehigh Power securities, middle west utilities and several others.

Oil shares failed to participate as extensively in the advance as the other groups although net gains of one to five points were recorded by Magnolia Petroleum, Prairie Oil and Gas and Standard Oils of Indiana and Nebraska.

Speculative interest in the industrial group was divided between Goodyear Tire & Rubber, which advanced 1 1-2 points to 26 3-5 and Ward Baking, which climbed more than two points to 43. Strength and activity of the copper shares, which sold around the year's best prices, was the feature of the mining list.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—Besides crossing to above $1.80 for the first time, the wheat market today shattered all high price records this year. New buying was based largely on an estimate that the exportable wheat surplus looked for in Argentina would amount to only 112,000,000 bushels. Rye as well as wheat went beyond previous top levels. Wheat closed strong 3 1-2 to 4 7-8c net higher, May 1.80 7-8 to 1.81 1-4 and July 1.51 3-8 to 1.54 1-2. Corn finished 1 1-2 to 2 7-8c up, oats showing 1 3-8c to 2c gain, and provisions at a rise varying from 12 to 40 cents.

At first, the wheat market displayed a downward tendency as the result of a little selling to realize profits, but a decided upward swing took place as soon as the news from Argentina became current. Fears expressed that domestic winter wheat would be damaged by ice which covers many fields were also of considerable effect as an incentive to purchase.

For the most part, corn and oats derived their strength chiefly from wheat. The government report on prospective hog supplies had only a transient weakening effect on corn.

Provisions, although weak early, were later responsive to the upturn in grain.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Citizens in general were interested in the map of Norwich being prepared by General Stanton in 1874. Business men were recommending that a complete map be made of the property and boundaries of the city as none had ever been made to their knowledge.

Norwich in 1874 was up against a water storage similar to the one we are having in the city this year and the Laurel hill reservoir was opened to give a supply.

Items taken in part from the Bulletin of a half century ago are as follows:

Monday, December 21, 1874—A New Haven exchange has the justice to remark, that, "it is strange that the river Thames, near New London, has never attracted the attention of the boat clubs for their regattas. A straight three mile stretch in deep water is about as well as they make such pieces of water." The paper also states that the high banks at either side of the river will accommodate thousands of spectators and the conditions for handling the crowd are admirable.

Three entertainments are promised on Christmas day by Buffalo Bill and Kit Carson, Jr. They will play the drama Scout of the Plains. Buffalo Bill has just returned from the Black Hills whither he accompanied the late Black Horn expedition.

Three inches of snow yesterday made things look natural for Christmas week. The cars uptown ran with four horse teams. No cars to Greeneville during the day.

Tuesday, December 22, 1874—The Harvard and Yale boating clubs were represented on the Thames Saturday. President Ferry of Yale accompanied by the representatives of Harvard arrived by the afternoon Boston express and were met by Mayor Waller of London and others. They went to Winthrop's neck and examined its facilities as the grand stand point for the regatta. The proposed course was also run over in a steam tug and the committee was exceedingly well pleased with the locality.

The big locomitives William P. Greene ran away from the round house of the Norwich & Worcester road yesterday. Engineer Spalding had left it there when he went to dinner and suddenly the iron monster started away and ran up the side track along the river as far as the car shops. It stopped there when it struck some freight cars, tossing one off the track and smashing couplings on the others. What started the engine is a mystery.

The engineers of the proposed Poneganselt railroad have been surveying lately beyond Danielsonville and that have selected a route as far as Stafford Springs, there connecting with the New London Northern railroad. Subscriptions for the new road are very encouraging and books will be opened in about six weeks.

Wednesday, December 23, 1874—A lot of New London capital is invested in the seal trade and from all indications the investment has not been a poor one for several years past. In 1871 four vessels were sent to the Shetland islands and returned with 9000 seals. In 1872 six vessels brought back 16,000 seals and in 1873 over 4000 seals were brought back. The fur is fine and has been selling in London, England, for three times the usual price.

President Smith of the Norwich and Worcester railroad will meet his associates of the construction committee today, in Worcester, namely, George W. Gale and Charles W. Smith. Bids for constructing the new tunnel under Laurel hill are to be opened, seven in number.

Senator Buckingham is to make a report concerning the navy yard at New London following the holidays and it is expected that following his report the proposal to do away with this yard will be dropped.

Lebanon has shipped over 2500 barrels of apples and the report is that this is only a part of the lot ready for shipment, as one farm has over 1000 barrels stored, holding back for better prices.

Thursday, December 24, 1874—There has been an increase in the number of houses in the city since last year, from 2,675 and 2,642, a gain of 67 houses. This does not include the lately annexed portion of the city. The stores have decreased from 315 to 298.

A copy of the large and complicated map of the Mohegan reservation, the original of which was made by order of Gov. Buckingham in 1860, has just been made by Charles E. Chandler of this city. There is only one other copy in town, namely, the one owned by Theodore Raymond.

Norwich Town has now come to the front by putting up a few lights of the same types as those recently put up in Greeneville.

Gen. Stanton's recent work in running out and defining the boundaries of the city will enable him to make what we hoped to see begun before long, a new official city map, a thing very much needed here. It is not known that a complete survey of the city has ever been made though the results of a partial one were in 1868 embodied in the map of Norwich, contained in Beer's atlas of the country.

The city bounds have been changed four times. The original act of incorporation in 1784 included within the city a very large tract of land. It extended from the mouths of the Poquetanuck and Trading coves on the river, and northward to Bean Hill. We were a city in those days. In 1827 a slice was taken off the south and east. In 1871 the lines were defined again but without material change. As far as we can learn at none of these different dates was there any thoroughgoing survey.

Friday December 25, 1874—Christmas eve services were held at Christ church and St. Mary's church last evening and today there will be services in most of the churches, special Christmas sermons having been prepared by the pastors of the respective churches.

The bridge at the Falls is being lifted three or four feet and substantially rebuilt. Mr. Sherman does the mason work and Mr. Carrier is building the superstructure. After this work is finished the new main to the West Side will be connected with the uptown water main. It is thought that the bridge will be finished in two weeks.

The new reservoir at Laurel hill is doing good service and has just saved the people of the hill from another period of drought. The old reservoirs have run dry again, and yesterday the new one was turned on furnishing a copious supply.

The Heywood Brothers, Combination, all the pleasing elements of the circus, theater and music hall, together with the panorama of A Trip Around the World, is to be given at Breed hall Saturday evening. Tickets have been selling fast and a capacity house is anticipated.

Saturday, December 26, 1874—There was no Bulletin Saturday as Christmas fell on Friday.

Under the auspices of the Village Improvement association a community Christmas tree and a little play by the children, The Toys' Rebellion, was given in the Country club house Monday evening. The children impersonating the toys were: Noah, Robert Allyn; Tin Soldier, Earl Coman; Wax Doll, Helen DeRusha; French Dolls, Carol Norman, Margaret Parker; Walking Doll, Grace Maynard; Jumping Jack, Joseph DeRusha; Sailor Doll, Richard Latimer; Scrap Book Fairy, Enid Latimer; Rag Doll, Eleanor Smith; Dinah, Rose Norcross; Kris Kringle, Stanley Fafold; Children, Myrtice Coman, Em-Beth Bennett, Dorothy Birch and Christine Maynard. The play was given under the direction of Mrs. Walter M. Buckingham, who had coached the children, with Mrs. Rufus W. Hurlbutt at the piano. Following the play, Mrs. Hurlbutt's primary class of the day school gave individual recitations on Santa Claus and Christmas time. Then followed a reading, The Living Christmas Tree and the Conserving of Forests, Miss Adelina S. Povey; carols, with D. R. Povey, leader, were sung by the assembly, with Miss Jennie G. Perkins at the piano. The community tree was a cedar, brilliantly lighted with colored electric bulbs, centrally placed, in the clubhouse, and lighted during the entertainment, while the clubhouse was gay with red decorations. There was a large attendance.

The pupils perfect in attendance at the grammar school, Miss Evelyn E. Whipple, teacher, for December were: Rose Norcross, Robert Allyn, Eleanor Smith, Joseph DeRusha, Christine Maynard, Ruth Allyn, Barbara Burdick, Grace Maynard, Helen DeRusha, Carol Norman, Louis Jennings, Earl Coman, Robert Duffy. The first five named were perfect in attendance the entire term.

Pupils in the primary grades 1 and 2, Mrs. Rufus W. Hurlbutt, teacher, perfect in attendance for December were William Davidson, Elvin Harding, Carl Norcross, Bernice Coman, Doris Coman, Edith Hartung, Ruth Hurlbutt, Enid Latimer, Elizabeth Main, Madeline Rogers. Perfect for the entire fall term: Elizabeth Main, Ruth Hurlbutt, William Davidson.

A Christmas entertainment was given by the pupils of the Long Cove school Friday evening under the direction of their teacher, Miss Bella Rifkind, of New London. The school room was beautifully decorated with a laurel chain made by Mrs. Newbury of New London. There was a Christmas tree, and Santa Claus was there also. The children gave a fine program of Christmas songs and recitations to a capacity house. The surprise of the evening came after the presents had been distributed. A large package was handed to the teacher, Miss Rifkind, from Mrs. Newbury of New London, for her grandson, William Newbury, a pupil of the school, and when opened disclosed a beautiful ebony mantel clock, to be used in the school room, something the school very much desired. The gift was greatly appreciated. Miss Rifkind accepted the gift gracefully for the school. The children received candy, popcorn, apples and oranges. Refreshments were passed by Miss Rifkind, assisted by Mrs. Everett Bruce, Mrs. F. C. Newbury, Mrs. Emil A. Gunnakey and Miss Doris J. Rifkind, sister of Miss Rifkind.

Miss Mabel Peckham, who has been a guest for some time at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Justin H. Peckham, at the Breakwater, left Wednesday to spend the holidays with her brother, Preston Peckham, and family at Jamestown, R. I.

Miss Helen R. Buckingham of New York arrived here Tuesday to spend Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Buckingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Albertus Dean were recent guests at the home of the latter's sister, Mrs. Thomas Croft Vayre, in Newport, R. I., where Mrs. Dean formerly resided.

A cantata, The Star of Bethlehem, is to be given by the choir of the Methodist church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

THE WEATHER Conditions

The disturbance that was over the Canadian northwest Thursday night has moved rapidly east-southeastward to Ontario, attended by warmer weather over the eastern half of the country except in the Atlantic States and its being closely followed by an area of abnormally high pressure and a severe cold wave. These conditions have already overspread the Canadian northwest. The barometer was high Friday night over the Atlantic states. Generally fair weather has prevailed during the last 24 hours.

The disturbance over Ontario will move rapidly eastward. The temperature will begin to fall in northern New England and northern New York Saturday night and in southern New England, by Sunday.

Winds

North of Sandy Hook: Strong southwest and weather generally fair Saturday.

Sandy Hook to Hatteras: Fresh to strong southwest and weather fair Saturday.

Forecast

Northern New England—Cloudy and warmer probably local snows Saturday; Sunday generally fair and decidedly colder.

Southern New England: Increasing cloudiness and warmer Saturday, Sunday generally fair and colder.

Eastern New York: Cloudy Saturday, probably local snows in interior, warmer in southeast and colder in northwest portion Saturday; much colder Saturday night. Cold wave in north portion; Sunday generally fair and much colder.

SEDGWICK POST, NO. 1, G. A. R, GIVEN PURSE AT CAMPFIRE GATHERING

Members of Sedgwick Post No. 1, G. A. R., were entertained at a campfire supper and musical program Friday evening at Buckingham Memorial by Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps. The G. A. R. was presented a gift of $50 during the supper, President Clara P. Burke making the presentation and Commander Orrin M. Price receiving it on behalf of the post.

The meeting of the Relief corps opened as usual at 8 o'clock with the president, Mrs. Clara P. Burke, in the chair. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and accepted and following the transaction of other routine business one candidate was balloted upon and received into the corps.

At 6.30 o'clock the members of the relief corps and of the G. A. R., numbering about 100 sat down to the campfire supper, the menu served by the supper committee being as follows:

Cold Roast Pork
Mashed Potatoes Mashed Turnips
Cranberry Sauce
Celery
Buttered Rolls
Pies Coffee

The entertainment during the evening was in charge of President Clara P. Burke, members and guests enjoying the singing of many old time songs. Mrs. Grace H. Manning favored with the story of Landor's Auction and there were solos by Wilfred Newbury and the Misses Lois Manning and Henrietta Sterry, the latter singing by request, Silver Threads Among the Gold.

The meeting closed in the usual form, with the salute to the flag and the singing of America.

NO EXTENSION OF TIME FOR CONN. MARKERS

The state motor vehicle department has conveyed to police throughout the state a request of the Michigan motor vehicle commissioner and the Virginia motor vehicle commissioner that 1924 markers of those states be recognized as legal in Connecticut during the month of January, owing to circumstances making it impossible to issue 1925 Michigan and Virginia markers to all motor vehicle owners who desire them by the first of the new year.

The District of Columbia, on the other hand, has requested Connecticut authorities, in common with those of other states, to recognize 1925 markers on cars registered in that jurisdiction during the remainder of this year. The requests have been acceded to so far as the Connecticut motor vehicle department is concerned, and local authorities advised to extend the courtesy.

Difficulties in the issuance of registrations for the new year are responsible for the requests received from these three jurisdictions. The only difficulty encountered in Connecticut, according to officials of the state motor vehicle department, has been to get owners of Connecticut cars to go to the department or any of its branch offices, in Bridgeport, New Haven, Waterbury and New London, or apply by mail to the central office, to get their 1925 registration certificates and markers. In anticipation of the troubles now being experienced in other states, the Connecticut department made its preparations for issuing 1925 markers early and extra facilities have been provided for several weeks to handle any rush of applications. The department has been receiving applications since October 30, and has sent repeated warnings to car owners to expedite registrations, but to little avail, with the result that the closing days of this year are bringing abnormally large crowds of applicants who are impatient to be served before January 1.

In view of this fact owners who fail to secure registration before the end of this year, for use on January 1, 1925, will have only themselves to blame. The motor vehicle department cannot grant any extension of time for use of 1924 markers, beyond midnight of next Wednesday.

HOME FOR CHRISTMAS FROM SOUTH AMERICA

A. Prentice Chase of Buenos Aires, South America is spending the Christmas holidays at his home on Sachem terrace. Mr. Chase arrived in New York Tuesday on the Munson Line steamer, Southern Cross.

Chauffeurs evidently have a poor opinion of pedestrians, as they are continually running them down.

GOVERNOR'S SECRETARY IS BOTH ACTIVE AND ABLE

Edward L. Kelly of Bridgeport who has been selected to serve as executive secretary to Governor Hiram Bingham, is a state representative, former state commander of the American Legion and a practicing lawyer of Bridgeport, his present residence. He is a native of Cambridge, Mass., born June 24, 1894, a son of Jeremiah F. and Mary Welsh Kelly. His father was a native of Colchester, but had moved to Boston, where he married. His mother died when the son was three years old, and he was brought to Colchester, where he has since made his home with an aunt, Miss Nora A. Kelly. His father located in Hartford, but died some years later.

Young Mr. Kelly attended the public schools of Colchester, and was graduated from Bacon Academy in 1911. After a year in Holy Cross Preparatory school he entered Holy Cross college, Worcester, from which he was graduated in 1916, with the A. B. degree. He entered Yale Law school in the fall of that year, but in December, 1917, after the United States had entered the war, he enlisted and served throughout the war as a lieutenant in charge of the training of foreign-born recruits in several large camps in the east and south. After the war he re-entered Yale Law school receiving his LL. B. in 1921 and passed the state bar examination in 1922. Since then Mr. Kelly has taken an active interest in politics and in the American Legion activities of the state.

THREE MORE NIGHTS TO EXAMINE HEADLIGHTS

Three more evenings remain for automobile owners about this section to have their headlights tested at the Groton state police barracks.

The police have examined more than 500 pairs of headlights since the practice was started a few weeks ago, in co-operation with a statewide movement to rectify poorly focused or tilted lights.

While there are few cases where the lenses are illegal, many cars are traveling with headlights tilted and focussed so that operators of cars coming from the opposite direction are blinded by the glare, according to the police.

Between 6 and 6.30 p. m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, next week, the police will continue their headlight inspection, and it is hoped by the police that all those who have not had their lights examined will do so before next Friday night.

THIRTY-ONE CARLOADS OF AUTOS AT STATE PIER

Thirty-one carloads of automobiles have arrived at the state pier in New London, waiting shipment to New Zealand and Australian ports on the Canadian Explorer, freighter of the Canadian merchant marine.

The Explorer is at present bound from Halifax, although the date of her arrival has not yet been made known.

The automobiles are arriving daily from Detroit and Walkerville, Ont., and a total of more than 100 carloads is expected before the Explorer clears.

The substitution of New London in the itinerary of the consignments is the result of the freezing of the St. Lawrence river, through which the cargoes are taken in summer. Several other shiploads of automobiles will pass through during the winter, as they did in the previous winter.

WATERFORD HERD GIVEN EXCLUSIVE PREFIX NAME

Camp View is the herd prefix name reserved by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America for the exclusive use of Thomas W. Wood, of Waterford, in the naming of animals in his Holstein herd.

More than 5,000 American Holstein breeders have adopted prefix names and are using them to advantage in naming their cattle. They give the breeders the use of all names in new combinations, make the selection of names less difficult and once they become well known serve as distinguishing and valuable trademarks for the owners.

NORWICH COUPLE LEAVE FOR MIAMI, FLORIDA

After spending Christmas day in Canaan, this state, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Hill of 87 Washington street, left there Friday by automobile for Miami, Fla., where they are to locate. They were to cross the Hudson river at Poughkeepsie and from their go south through Trenton, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Augusta and Jacksonville on the way to Miami. They expect to cover about 3,000 miles on the trip and anticipate the residence in the south with much pleasure.

FOUR MORE DAYS TO SECURE MARKERS

Only four more days remain for automobile owners to secure their 1925 markers, if they wish to operate their machines New Year's day. The motor vehicle department, Turello building, Bank street, New London, will be open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. week days and from 8 a. m. to 4.30 p. m. on Saturdays until further notice. The office will be open on New Year's day.

COMPLETES TEN YEARS AS PRESS CORRESPONDENT

After serving for 10 years as press correspondent for Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps, Mrs. Ida E. Greene has given up that office and has been succeeded by Mrs. Grace N. Manning. Mrs. Greene received a vote of thanks for her efforts on behalf of the corps during her long term in office.

KRIS KRINGLE VISITS FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Santa Claus paid his annual visit to the children of the church school of the First Baptist church Friday evening, distributing gifts and boxes of candy among them. The older people were not forgotten for there was the usual exchange of gifts and the teachers were remembered by the members of their respective classes.

The programme of the evening opened with the play, Why Santa Claus Comes in December, the 12 months being represented by children in costume, while the story of the play was told by four characters also in costume. The story tellers were Arvilla Kenfield, Doris Pulsifer, Emily Sandberg and Florence Swain and the months were represented by the following children, named in order of appearance, January to December: Doris Sandberg, Mildred Bjork, Robert Pecan, Edward Grover, Beatrice Hazard, Pauline Robinson, William Hazard, Donald Lillibridge, Ruth Miller, Edith Billings, Charles Simpson and Thelma Marsh.

The large Christmas tree was brilliantly lighted during the evening and after the children were given their gifts Santa called out numbers for the presents for older people. These were opened on the stage in view of the assembly, causing no little mirth as men received powder puffs and women received articles made useful to men.

The success of the Christmas entertainment was due to the efforts of the committee headed by Miss Bernice E. Willey, as chairman, Mrs. Louis Wheeler and Mrs. Frank Davis, in charge of candy and presents; Miss Edna Jones in charge of the tree and Mrs Fannie Pineault in charge of the exchange of gifts.

Unclaimed Letters.

Unclaimed letters in the Norwich Conn., post office for the week ending December 27, 1924, are as follows: Arthur Baubeault, Henry Beaulieu, Lewis Davidson, R. F. D., W. C. Hall, Miss Erie Hendershot, Ernest Perron, (2).

If women were as fond of appearing in print as they are in silk there would be more women writers.

TOYS AND GIFTS FOR 300 CHILDREN

Santa Claus had quite a bit of assistance again this year from Mercier Assembly, Catholic Ladies of Columbus. Boxes of toys and candy were filled and marked for the various worthy children and on Christmas morning were delivered in automobiles donated by members of White Cross council, Knights of Columbus, with members of Mercier Assembly assisting in the different cars.

Many happy smiles greeted the arrival of Santa's assistants and when all was done, about 300 children had been remembered with a toy or book and a box of Christmas candy. This, in addition to the Sunday Christmas party at the Knights of Columbus Home, has helped to bring happiness to about 1,300 children, for Christmas, 1924.

Much credit is due the general committee, for the wonderful interest displayed and the tireless efforts.

FORTIETH ANNUAL DANCE OF RHO ALPHA MU

Over fifty couples attended the fortieth annual dance of Rho Alpha Mu fraternity of the Norwich Academy, held Friday evening at the Wauregan ball room. Dancing was enjoyed from 9 until 1 o'clock and the programme was rendered by the Dixieland Serenaders. The affair as usual proved very successful and members of the fraternity, home for the holidays, met once again to talk over old times. Prof. and Mrs. Henry A. Tirrell and Dr. and Mrs. F. S. Bunnell chaperoned.

In proportion to population London has only half as many telephones as New York.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

Norwich Grange, No. 172, Patrons of Husbandry, held an interesting meeting Wednesday evening in Steiner's hall with Worthy Master Arthur W. Avery in the chair. After a short business session the lecturers program was given. Two Christmas solos by William H. Rush were much enjoyed; also a piano solo by Master Dwight Richardson. There was a piano duet, the arrival of Santa Claus, played by Miss Howie and Mrs. Richardson with accompaniment of bells by Mrs. Jahm. Several Christmas carols were sung by all. The worthy lecturer, Mrs. Ida E. Richardson gave her report of the New England lecturers' conference at Durham, N. H., and also spoke very interestingly of the auto trip to and from Durham. She told of many places visited by the Connecticut lecturers' tour such as Brown college, Bridgewater Normal school, Plymouth, Mass., Hampton Beach, the magnificent municipal auditorium at Lowell, Whittier's birthplace at Haverhill, Mass., and many other places of interest. The report of the conference is as follows:

The first evening's program was given by the Eastern New Hampshire Pomona Grange, consisting of solos, readings and selections by an orchestra of eight pieces. The latter was a feature of the evening as the eight young people were nearly all Pomona members and gave readings and vocal solos also.

The conference formally opened next morning with the salute to the flag and singing of the Star Spangled Banner. Professor Taylor, dean of agriculture gave the welcome in place of President Hetzel of the New Hampshire university who had a recent throat operation. The keys of the university were jokingly presented in the form of two huge keys on a giant iron ring, Professor Taylor mentioned some historical events, the old village of Durham had witnessed, one was on Dec. 14, 1774, when Sullivan went down the Oyster river and captured the William and Mary garrison, took their powder and hid it under the church at Durham. Later it supplied the Bunker Hill soldiers. Then in 1891 Benjamin Thompson left 175 acres and $100,000 in stocks and bonds for establishing an agricultural college if they would move it from Dartmouth to Durham. The remarkable thing about this was that Thompson's will was made before there were any separate state agricultural colleges, 40 years before his death.

State Lecturer Harriman had charge of the main session. The topic was Juvenile Grangers. A juvenile director was recommended for every state. Several spoke on the value of this work and gave the number of juvenile grangers in their states. The main hour closed with two musical readings by a Maine sister.

At the 10.30 session Vermont was in charge. Her topic was Americanization. O. S. Martin, national lecturer, also Vermont state master, in a splendid short address mentioned that 567 radical papers were read in the United States sowing seed of discontent and discord. Radicalism in newspapers was discussed. State Lecturer Cogswell of Kansas stated that in 1890 people from northern Europe came over to build homes. Now they come from southern Europe with one idea, to make money. A Vermont sister gave a paper on Foundation Stones of Americans. She mentioned faith, loyalty and fair dealing. She said be careful that the mingling of so many modern ideas doesn't give us bobbed morals. Then followed a series of questions given out to be answered from among the audience. Then a vocal solo by Sister Ludlow of Vermont.

The afternoon program began at 2 o'clock with Massachusetts State Lecturer Mowry in charge. The topic was Grange Citizenship and a discussion was open to all. Among the several speakers, the lecturer of Haverhill grange spoke on what a city grange can do towards good citizenship. He said the love of the soil can be in the heart of every one. Many were born and brought up on a farm that are now in the city. We can have gardens and exhibit at the county fair. We can bring up the young to grange ideals of good citizenship. We can receive the farmer's viewpoint. There was a talk by Mrs. Palmer Chapman of Rhode Island our Nation Pomona on Women's Double Duty Nov. 4. In the late afternoon we took a trip to Hampton beach for supper by way of Portsmouth. Just to say we went to Maine we crossed over the bridge to Kittery. On the New Hampshire side stood the first house to carry one of Benjamin Franklin's lighting rods. On the way along the shore to Rye beach the view was wonderful and will linger long in our memory, as one of the most beautiful drives we have ever taken.

Thursday morning the opening session was in charge of Burton Harris, state lecturer of Rhode Island, whose subject was High Morality in Grange Work. I must give you Rhode Island's yell. As each state took charge their state song was sung and their delegates gave a yell. Rhode Island's was "Cut, cut, cut, cut cut, cudarcut, we're Rhode Island Reds and thoroughbreds, Rhode Island, Rhode Island" and at the end their state overseer gave a mighty rooster crow. The topic brought out that modern accessibility to rural communities by autos caused an influx of bootleggers and petting parties which must be counteracted by grange influence.

Pennsylvanit State Lecturer Dewey who recollected the directions for the four minute speakers during the war period gave them. Stand up so that they can see you, speak up so that they can hear you, then shut up so that they can appreciate you. From his several interesting short talks during the conference it was plain that he had profited by the advice. He told us what Pennsylvania had done toward cleaning up her fairs. Kansas state lecturer said that Kansas county fairs are now free fairs with premiums raised by subscription and under the cooperation of the chamber of commerce, grange and farm bureau. The final word was don't forget our personal opportunities and obligations to our communities.

At 10.30 Connecticut State Lecturer Wheeler took charge and exemplified his topic which was Planning, the Program. Mr. Seckerson of Storrs spoke on Dramatics and the Little Theatre Movement. Then came a solo by Sister Holton of Ellington grange. Our pomona lecturer, Mrs. L. B. Whitham of Groton grange, read a paper on Our College Boys and Girls written by President Hetzel of the New Hampshire University. Our Connecticut yell was specially composed for the occasion, "North, south, east and west, Connecticut patrons stand the test, we come from miles, we come through rain, but Connecticut gets there just the same." Before going to dinner we assembled on the campus in front of Demerit hall and had our pictures taken.

New Hampshire had charge of the afternoon program and State Master Sawyer's address on the topic a Granger's Responsibility to the Community was one of the finest heard during the conference. After New Hampshire's programme we made a tour of the college building and grounds with some of the faculty as guards. Two of the interesting curiosities of the the university are the original plow used by Daniel Webster and the other, the Tom Thumb carriage which stands in the gym where our meetings were held. It was presented to Tom Thumb by Queen Victoria and would conveniently hold a boy or girl of ten or twelve years.

The final session was held Thursday evening with Past National Master Chairman Lowell, New Hampshire State Master Sawyer and Andrew Felker, New Hampshire commissioner of agriculture, as speakers. Commissioner Felker called the lecturers, the "school ma'am nad masters of the school of life." We are facing great problems today and fail to grasp the significance of some of them, he said. Some think the grange has completed its work. It has never faced more work than today. Every state has their agricultural college full, more young men are turning toward high institutions of learning than ever before. Brains should be given the preference over gold for selecting entrance. Out of 350 students in New Hampshire university in 1924 only 26 registered in the agricultural course. The tinkle of the cow bell is sweeter music than any jazz band can make. Some service we render must be measured by sacrifice. Faith and work wins, in the home, on the farm, in the grange, anywhere. We want young people to have good times but try to lead them to better things. The grange needs to stand as the bulwark against laxity of law. Build your programs to inspire love of law and obedience to it. Study the Constitution, study the history of your state and the grange in your state. Let us inspire the young men and women coming to us taking the degrees with fine ideals.

On the return trip part of the delegation went by way of the White Mountains, the remainder returning by way of Camp Devens. The trip was completed on Saturday. It was a great pleasure to me to take the Durham trip and I wish to thank Norwich Grange for their part in it. Next year the New England lecturers' conference will meet at Storrs, the latter part of August and I trust many of our grangers will grasp the opportunity to attend.

LADIES' AUXILIARY, A. O. H.

A very successful bean and salad supper was given by the ladies of Division 18, A. O. H., at the Buckingham Memorial Tuesday evening. A large sum was realized. Miss Mary Hartie, president, and Chairman Mrs. Grace Mumford, assisted by Miss May Kilday, Miss Mary Maloney, Miss Nellie Gleason, Mrs. John Niles, Mrs. William Sharkey, Mrs. Nellie Callahan, Mrs. James Fox, Mrs. James Delaney, Mrs. James Donovan and Mrs. Mary Hourigan, had charge of the gathering.

SONS OF VETERANS.

A. C. Latham camp, Sons of Veterans of Mystic entertained all the patriotic societies in Mystic and also the members of Jared Avery camp, S. of V., of New London at an open meeting held recently. The programme opened by singing America, after which an address of welcome was made by Commander W. G. Mooney of A. C. Latham camp.

WOMEN OF MOOSEHEART.

The regular meeting of Women of Mooseheart Legion, Norwich chapter, No. 124, was held Tuesday evening at Moose home with Senior Regent Anna Crowe presiding. Routine business was transacted and two candidates were initiated. Following the meeting, refreshments were served and a social time was enjoyed.

REBEKAHS

WINNER OF PEACE AWARD PAYS TRIBUTE TO WILSON

Viscount Cecil Says Wilson Was "A Great American and Citizen of the World—Praises United States For Standing Consistently For Peace—Disarmament is Goal For Which Peace Lovers Must Strive.

New York, Dec. 28.—Before a distinguished gathering which included Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Viscount Cecil of Chelwood was presented with the $25,000 peace award and medal given under the Woodrow Wilson Foundation for meritorious service in the cause of international co-operation and peace at a dinner tonight at the Hotel Astor.

In accepting the award, Viscount Cecil asserted that the advance in the past five years in the direction of international co-operation had been "little short of marvelous."

Praising the United States for having consistently stood for peace, Viscount Cecil said that he would not utter a word of criticism of the attitude of America toward the League of Nations. He stressed, however, the accomplishments of the league since its inception under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson, whom he characterized as "a great American and a great citizen of the world" adding: "There is no title to fame higher than that."

Mr. Wilson's contribution, he said, was the idea that peace was based on unity and the solidarity of mankind, an idea contrary to that moviating the pre-war system which Viscount Cecil called "international anarchy diversified by war."

In explaining the actions and attitude of the league throughout its existence, Viscount Cecil dwelt on the problems faced by the Egyptian and Corfu controversies. He championed the stand of the league in both cases, affirming that the outcome had been a victory for peace.

"The league is there to deal with international questions not with relations affecting the internal administration of any country," Viscount Cecil explained, and he pointed out that the "relations between England and Egypt are of a very special character."

He asserted that "no objection can be justly raised to the British action" regarding Egypt, which he said was not an international matter. England's offer after the controversy to lay before the council of the league a full statement of her action Egypt, he declared to be "one of the most solemn recognitions to the progress of the idea of international unity."

Viscount Cecil defended the league's record during the Corfu incident as "one of the most distinguished successes of the new international conception." He said that the league is no a superstate and that if two nations are in conflict "the league's function has been discharged when it has brought them together and put them on the road to agreement, and that function was most successful."

The speaker listed the activities of the league calling attention to the fact that in the first eight months of 1924 26 international conferences had met in Geneva. He praised especially the league's action in taking up health questions and in warring against epidemics and the drug question. It must yet attack the traffic in women and children and the publication of obscene literature, he said.

After dwelling on the political disputes arbitrated before the league, Viscount Cecil spoke of its work in the rehabilitation of Austria and Hungary and its success in backing the Greek loan.

Disarmament is the goal to which all intelligent lovers of peace must desire to tend" he said, "but the difficulties in the way are prodigious and it will need all the new spirit of which I have spoken to secure success. To me the fact that the problem is taken seriously and is now being grappled with is in itself an immense encouragement and I look confidently forward to substantial advances being actually secured in the course of the next months."

Viscount Cecil was presented with the award and medal by Norman H. Davis, who presided at the dinner.

"To Woodrow Wilson must be given the chief credit for the organized system of international co-operation" Mr. Davis said "and to Lord Cecil that of elaborating the details with him in creation and of developing it and making it work. Lord Cecil stands out as one of the few who has worked in the fields of international life for other standards of right and better understandings between nations."

Mr. Davis hailed the guest of honor as Woodrow Wilson's spiritual successor when he presented him with the medal which had been designed by Ivan Mestrovic, a Jugoslav sculptor.

Among those at the speaker's table were United States Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Henry Morgenthau, David F. Houston, General Tasker H. Bliss, Senator Howard, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Thomas W Lamont and William Allen White.

SEN. HITCHCOCK PRAISES WILSON'S WAR RECORD

Washington, Dec. 28.—That Woodrow Wilson will occupy a prominent place in history has already been determined by the large and growing Wilson literature, and by the Wilson meetings held tonight throughout the nation, former Senator Hitchcock, Nebraska, declared tonight in an address before a gathering of government officials and other prominent persons in celebration of the birthday of the late war president.

The dinner, presided over by Chairman Hurst of Thompson of the federal trade commission, listened-in by radio to the Wilson memorial service in New York.

Hitchcock in his address reviewed the career of Mr. Wilson and that of his association with the war [illegible] the fight over the league of nations. The United States to enter the League of Nations is probably inevitable, he said. "It will be [illegible] years old on Jan. 10. It has done a great work during its short existence.

"As an uncompromising fighter for what he believed in I have never seen Woodrow Wilson's equal," Mr. Hitchcock declared. "He was, however, distinctly lacking when it became necessary to deal with individuals by discussion and persuasion."

Mr. Hitchcock declared that he finally persuaded Mr. Wilson to confer with senators to win support, but that the plan was abandoned almost as soonas it had been placed in operation.

"But when the idea come to him to go out on a crusade to arouse the country and force senatorial consent," Mr. Hitchcock asserted, "he went joyfully to an impossible task although his health was even then somewhat broken."

WILL INVESTIGATE FURTHER INTO M'CLINTOCK DEATH

Chicago, Dec. 28.—(By The A. P.)—Investigation of all factors entering into the death of William Nelson McClintock will be continued no matter what the coroner's autopsy reveals, Assistant State's Attorney George E. Gorman declared tonight.

Gorman while refusing to comment on the results of the inquiry to date, declared, however, his office would take no further steps nor question any other witnesses until the coroner's report was at rand.

Dr. William N. McNally, corner's chemist, worked throughout the day in examining vital organs of the "millionaire orphan's" body. He stated tonight that his findings would not be made public until the examination was complete.

William Shepherd, whose wife was one of the co-guardians of Billy McClintock, was permitted yesterday, upon his return from Albuquerque, N. M., to tell assistant state's attorneys what he knew of the circumstances attending the death of young McClintock. Today he declared that "so far as I am concerned the state's attorney's case against me is dead."

Mr. Shepherd showed a sheaf of clippings from Chicago newspapers containing all that has been printed here on the ase. Shepherd would offer no comment nor mention names, but said that he believed the statements quoting several persons in the news articles were libelous.

"This investigation was started by a business enemy of Mr. Shepherd," Robert F. Stoll, Shepherds attorney, said tonight.

"We are not prepared to disclose his name now, but he knew he would benefit if the McClintock will should be invalid. It is not one of the seven cousins who plan to contest the will.

"Chief Justice Harry A. Olson, and Miss Pope, (McClintock's fiancee), are merely being used as dupes by the person who wishes to gain through this investigation."

Shepherd plans to create a trust fund sufficient to provide an $8,000 annuity for Miss Pope, he said today. He had previously intended to give her the principal outright, he explained.

CONGREGATION MARCHES TO SAFETY AS CHURCH BURNS

Woonsocket, R. I., Dec. 28.—More than 500 persons, three-quarters of them children, marched in safety from Sacred Heart Roman Catholic church here today after fire had broken out in the basement. The flames broke through the floor after the majority of the congregation had left the church under the direction of the pastor and his assistant but there was no panic.

Rev. Edward O'Donnell, pastor of the church, was in the main aisle while Rev. Berton J. Daggett was delivering a sermon at the 8 o'clock children's mass today when the sexton informed the pastor that there was a fire in the basement. Father O'Donnell immediately halted the service, told the children that there was arouble in the basement and directed them to leave the building. At first they failed to understand but after being told a second time, the hundreds of youngsters marched quietly out. Their elders were also told to leave. As the older people walked out the flames and smoke broke through the flooring behind the main altar.

The fire was extinguished after damage of about $3,000 had been caused to the church, a one-story wooden structure, firemen being called from a two-alarm blaze in another part of the city to assist in extinguishing the flames.

GURTHIE REFUSES TO LET LEDOUS USE CHURCH

New York, Dec. 28.—Dr. William Norman Guthrie, rector of St. Markson-the-Bouwerie, refused today to permit Urban Ledoux and his army of unemployed to invade his church for the purpose of performing the "gang dance" preparatory to sleeping in the building over night. Ledoux had lined up 27 men with shovels before "The Tub" when he was informed by the police that he could not parade them without a permit. He made no effort to take his men singly or in small groups to the church.

Dr Gurthie refused to see Ledoux and declared that the church was set apart for sacramental use and that there was no excuse for any other use except that of direct human emergency, which he asserted did not exist in the present case.

NEW YORK HIT BY COLD WAVE FROM WEST

New York, Dec. 28.—The cold wave sweeping across the country from the west reached New York this morning and sent the temperature down to 12 above zero at 7 o'clock. This was the coldest December 28 in 30 years with two exceptions, the last being in 1917 when 8 degrees above zero was registered. Most of the day the temperature was around 15 degrees, with another drop forecast for tonight.

Lodging houses throughout the city reported that they were filled to capacity by the homeless last night. The Bowery Y. M. C. A. reported that every one of their 300 beds were occupied. At the Salvation Army hotel in the Bowery 610 men were accommodated last night.

Warmer weather tomorrow predicted by the weather bureau will tend to relieve the situation, welfare organizations say, although they are preparing to handle capacity crowds.

Enormous Saving is Shown by Railroads

Report Shows that Public Has Been Saved $600,000,000 During the Past Year.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Unprecedented efficiency and economy characterized the operation of the country's railroads during 1924 with a consequent vast saving to the shipping public, the American Railway Association declared tonight in an annual summary of its activities.

Based on incomplete returns, the association said "a conservative estimate" of the total amount of saving due to the efficient handling of the roads" has amounted to hundreds of millions." Compared to 1921, it was declared, the public saved $600,000,000 this year in reduced freight rates alone.

"As in the case of 1923," the statement added, "the railroads during the past year failed to realize the moderate return contemplated under the existing level of transportation charges."

In 1924 the net operating income of Class I carriers, as shown by complete reports for the first two months and incomplete returns for the remaining two months, was $970,000,000 or 4.30 per cent. of their property investment, the summary said, while in 1923, the Class 1 carriers earned $977,657,000 or 4.47 per cent.

An increase of about $5,486,000 over the preceding year in cash dividends paid on railroad stock was noted in 1924, the total being $303,000,000.

Federal and state taxes aggregating nearly $1,000,000 a day were paid by Class I roads during the year, the total reaching $350,000,000 an increase of about $13,613,000 over 1923.

The bulk of saving from economic operation was attributed by the association to improve methods of operation due to large expenditures for equipment and other improvements, together with intelligent co-operation of federal and state regulatory bodies, shippers, railway employes and managements. Lower expenditures for materials and the moderation of wages contributed to the same end.

A beneficial factor to both shippers and operators, the association said, was the active co-operation on the part of shippers through their regional advisory boards.

MORE HOSPITALS TO BE BUILT BY VETERANS' BUREAU

Washington, Dec. 28.—Construction of five hospitals for World war veterans, completion of one, and purchase of another will be undertaken shortly by the veterans' bureau with funds recently made available by congress. A national training school for the blind also will be built.

A 280-bed neuro-psychiatric hospital is to be erected at Great Lakes, Ill., and a 232-bed tuberculosis hospital, for which contracts totaling nearly $1,000,000 recently were awarded, is to be built at San Fernando, Cal.

At a city not yet selected in District 2, comprising Connecticut, New York and New Jersey, a 1,000-bed neuro-psychiatric hospital will be erected, and a hospital to accommodate 300 tubercular patients is planned for District 10, which includes Minnesota, Montana, North and South Dakota.

Two hundred additional general beds and 100 tubercular beds will be provided at Walter Reed hospital, Washington, D. C.

The bureau's hospital at Aspinwall, Pa., now about half constructed, will be completed with additional quarters and the 300-bed hospital at Muskogee, Okla., built by the soldiers' relief commission of that state and now leased by the government, will be purchased.

The training school for the blind will be built near Baltimore, under present plans, and will have capacity for 100 students. Living quarters for the students are expected to be provided by the Association of Blind Veterans of the World War.

GUNMEN BEATEN BY MOB AFTER SHOOTING AFFRAY

Hoboken, N. J., Dec. 28.—Two alleged gunmen wounded one person and were in turn badly beaten, despite the efforts of a patrolman to protect them from a mob here tonight.

Charles Sica, 22, was shot by a bullet which penetrated his left wrist and entered his left hip. The shooting occurred when he was called from a Fifth street poolroom by Salvatore Lombardo, 24, and John Ghisome, 23, of New York, who accused Sica of being implicated in the alleged theft of an automobile, police said?

Lombardo and Ghisome, whom police accuse of being hired gunmen, were caught by Patrolman Romano, but before he could remove them, Sica and a gang of his friends attacked the two men and beat them badly, the officer reported.

Hoboken police are holding Lombardo and Ghisome on a charge of assault with the attempt to kill, and also arrested Sica and a companion on a charge of attempted assault and battery.

GERMAN PRESS SCORES PREMIER HERRIOT FOR STAND

Berlin, Dec. 27.—(By The A. P.)—The decision of the council of ambassadors to postpone indefinitely the evacuation of the Colone bridgehead unlorsed bitter editorial comment in the Berlin newspapers, most of which was obviously inspired by considerations of internal partisan policies.

The most severe criticism of the alleged surrender of M. Herriot, the French premier, to external influences oddly enough appears in the German liberal organs, which, since the London conference, had been inclined to view the French prime minister as the harbinger of a new era in Franco-German relations.

"M. Herriot, using Marshal Foch's sabre, is not a very inspiring sight," remarks Theodor Wolff in the Tageblatt in which he referred to "Lame Herriot" in connection with the premier's recent indisposition. Wolff charges M. Herriot with having handed the German nationalists a "bracing tonic."

JURY IN M'COY CASE IS STILL DELIBERATING

Los Angeles, Dec. 28.—Kid McCoy, former pugilist, charged with the murder of Mrs. Theresa Mors here last August, was still waiting in the county jail early tonight for word that the jury of nine women and three men deliberating his fate since last Friday, had reached a decision as to his guilt or innocense.

Congress Gets Back Into Action Today

Muscle Shoals Problem Has Right of Way in Senate and Appropriation Bills in House

Washington, Dec. 28.—The Christmas week recess at an end, congress gets back to the grind tomorrow with house and senate facing legislative tasks that are expected to keep them working at top speed until the close of the present session next March.

The Muscle Shoals problem, vexing as ever, still has right of way in the senate, which also faces a showdown early next week on the question of sustaining the presidential veto of the postal salaries bill and is pledged before the windup of the session to take action on the Isle of Pines treaty.

On the house side, appropriation bills will continue to have priority, with leaders planning also to dispose of the McFadden bank bill and perhaps the rivers and harbors authorization measure during January.

The house already has sent three of the dozen annual supply bills to the senate. A fourth—the treasury-post office measure carrying more than three-quarters of a billion dollars and incidentally the largest peace-time appropriation bill in congressional history—will be disposed of this week, clearing the way for the army supply bill which next will have right of way.

Thus far, the senate has failed to take up any of the appropriation bills, although their consideration in committee has begun. Leaders recognize the necessity of speeding action on these proposals and it is expected that the next few weeks will see several of the mon their way to the president.

With the senate scheduled to vote Tuesday, January 6, on the postal salaries bill veto, the joint committee hearings on the rate increases proposed by the postoffice department will continue this week, while in the house the committee investigating the shipping board will decide whether additional witnesses should be examined, and the committee conducting an inquiry into all branches of aircraft expects to press forward with its examination of witnesses.

TO TRY TO LOCATE LOST SHIP BY RADIO

Pittsburgh, Dec. 28.—An effort will be made tomorrow night by three American radio stations to get in touch with members of the Nutting expedition, lost in the arctic wastes for four months.

Stations KDKA, East Pittsburgh, WBZ, Springfield, Mass., and KYW Chicago, will radiocast special messages addressed to inhabitants of the arctic region, asking for news of the ill-fated expedition.

The Nutting expedition, organized by William Nutting to follow the course taken by the vikings in their daring ventures to the North American continent, left Denmark on September 8, last, bound for Battle Harbor, Labrador. Nutting was accompanied by Arthur Hildebrand, John Todahl and Mr. Leischer. Their ship, Lief Eriesson, has not been heard of since it passed the southern Greenland coast. Government cruisers and airplanes have conducted a fruitless search for the expedition.

The effort to obtain news of Nutting and his party by radio was deferred until this time, when trappers from the remote arctic regions make their pilgrimages to the trading stations. It is hoped that these posts, equipped with wireless receiving sets, will communicate the message to the trappers who may have some word of the lost men.

POLICE TEST SHOTGUN THAT KILLED MRS. SCHMIDT

Middletown, Dec. 28.—The police investigating the death of Mrs. Casper Schmidt who was shot last Wednesday when a gun exploded in the Schmidt home, turned their attention today to the shotgun, the pellets from which entered Mrs. Schmidt's breast, killing her almost instantly.

When arrested after the shooting, charged with manslaughter, Schmidt told the police that the gun had been discharged when he had thrown it on the table in an effort to save himself from a fall after slipping on a banana peel.

The police today tested the triggers on the gun, dropped it and threw it around the room. They reported after their investigation that they were unable to discharge it by any of these methods.

The police have examined all of the witnesses in the case with the exception of Mrs. Lester Sanborn, spiritualistic medium, who is reported that Mrs. Schmidt had paid several visits to her home. Mrs. Sanborn is reported to be in Plainfield.

The coroner will hold his inquest some time this week.

PRISONERS AT WETHERSFIELD ENJOY CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

Hartford, Dec. 28.—The cross-word puzzle has broken into the state prison at Wethersfield and is leading a gay life, sanctioned by Warden H. K. W. Scott.

"I think they are a splendid method of exercising the mental capabilities of our prisoners," the warden said. "We would welcome gifts of cross-word puzzles for prisoners. At present they are especially the vogue among our women inmates and I understand the men are also interested." It was intimated that prisoners are allowed to buy puzzle books and they also take keen interest in those in the newspapers. Prison employes as well as prisoners have taken to solving the puzzles.

FIRE DESTROYS SEVERAL BUILDINGS AT NO. SMITHFIELD

North Smithfield, R. I., Dec. 28.—Fire today destroyed the main two-story building and refrigerating plant, two large ice houses, a garage and some smaller buildings on the Oak Knoll creamery here, causing a loss of $60,000. The fire department of Woonsocket was called to aid in extinguishing the flames.

The origin of the fire was not determined. No one was working in the plant when the fire broke out. Firemen prevented the spread of the flames to a barn and a dwelling by pulling down a wagon shed. An office building was also saved.

NEW HAVEN MERCHANT DIES AFTER BEING SHOT BY BANDIT

Barney Muzan Victim of Unknown Hold-up Man Who Uses Silencer on Gun—Three Bullets Entered Muzan's Body As He Grapples With Bandit—Police Believe He is Same One That Shot Officer Manchester..

New Haven, Dec. 28.—Shot in his store by an unidentified bandit late Saturday night, Barney Muzan, storekeeper of 163 Washington street, died in the New Haven hospital tonight. The bandit, who answered the description of the "gas bandit" who has many holdups and robberies in this vicinity to his credit, fired five shots at Muzan, three of which entered the latter's body. After taking all of the money in the cash register and in the pockets of Muzan and his clerk, the bandit made his escape in the direction of the railroad. It is said that the bandit's gun was equipped with a silencer.

The hold-up and murder was one of the most daring that the police have had to cope with in many years. A few minutes after 12 o'clock Saturday night, Barney Muzan left his fruit store to visit another st[illegible] on the opposite side of the street, leaving Louis Brown, a clerk, in charge of the place.

A few minutes later the bandit walked into the store and with gun in hand bound the young man's hands behind his back with a cord he was carrying and then ordered the clerk to lie down on the floor. The bandit then took what money there was in the cash drawer and removed $10 from Brown's pockets.

After inquiring where the owner was, the bandit left the store after telling Brown not to move until the owner came back.

Muzan returned to the store a few seconds later and found the clerk on the floor. As the owner of the store was removing the cord from Brown's wrist, the bandit reappeared and ordered Muzan to throw up his hands. Muzan grappled with the bandit and in the fight that followed the bandit fired five shots, three of them entering Muzan's body.

The bandit then took what money Muzan had in his pockets and left the store, going down Cedar street and disappearing through the yards in the direction of the railroad cut.

The police soon learned of the murder and a cordon of officers was thrown around the district. An all day search, however, failed to disclose the hiding place of the bandit.

The police are of the opinion that the man who shot Muzan is the same bandit who shot Officer Manchester at Stratford a short time ago, declaring that the description of the two men tally in many particulars.

The bandit who killed the storekeeper here Saturday was apparently an Italian, 25 to 27 years old, clean shaven, wore a dark black cap a dark cap, a dark overcoat and dark shoes. He was of fair complexion and wore a pair of tortoise shell glasses.

Hospital officials reported that one of the shots entered Muzan's right elbow and two in the abdomen. Several operations were performed but the physicians were unable to save the storekeeper's life.

Shortly after the murder two suspicious looking men were reported walking along the Milford turnpike. Detectives were rushed to that vicinity but when they arrived were unable to find the strangers.

From what could be learned by the police, it appeared that the man obtained about $200 from the cash register and from Muzan's and Brown's pockets.

Medical Examiner Marvin M. Scarbrough will perform an autopsey tomorrow morning. Coroner Elf Mix began his investigation today, and it will be continued tomorrow morning.

Muzan is survived by his wife and three children, the oldest being five years old.

Muzan is the second storekeeper to be shot by a bandit in this city in the past five months. Martin Anderson, 22 year old, manager of the Atlantic and Pacific store at Putnam and Cedar streets, was shot three times by a bandit on the night of August 30 when he refused to throw up his hands. Anderson is at present at the New Haven hospital but expects to leave that institution soon. The man who shot Muzan does not tally with the bandit who wounded Anderson.

MERCURY DROPS TO 13 BELOW ZERO IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Dec. 28.—The zero weather which has held the middle west in its grip had moderated tonight with the approach of a slight fall of snow over the entire area.

The lowest temperatures of the season were recorded today in the territory about Chicago, the mercury dropping to 13 degrees below zero. The temperature was measured in minus quantities as far south as northwestern Tennessee, northern Arkansas, southern Oklahoma and the Texas panhandle. Thermometer readings in the northern tier of states averaged twenty to thirty degrees below. In the east the temperature ranged from 26 degrees below zero in northern New York to 12 degrees above in the area contiguous to New York city.

Numerous fire were reported during the day from many points in the central section of the country, four persons losing their lives in one at Cuddo, Okla., three in an Alton, Ill., blaze and one in Cleveland. Damage to the amount of $2,000,000 was wrought in Corinth, Miss., and a $200,000 loss was suffered in Canton, O.

In Chicago two cold and irate tenants, Leonard Oslander and L. Jacobson, sought to remonstrate with their janitor in person. They are said to have backed up their demands with a revolver, but the janitor, James Alexander, negro, seized the weapon and shot the men. Neither was seriously wounded.

THREE CORNERED STABBING AFFRAY AT WATERBURY

Waterbury, Dec. 28.—As the result of a three cornered stabbing match tonight, Donato De Milo and Carmine Anzilini are in the Waterbury hospital, the former suffering from arm and shoulder lacerations and a punctured lung and the latter from shoulder lacerations. Michael Jacaruso of 194 Fairfield avenue was treated at the hospital for face lacerations and later taken to police headquarters where he is charged with assault with intent to kill.

The fight occurred in Jacaruso's house and notification came to the police, when Anzilini staggered into a store at 643 Highland avenue. De Milo was found in the gutter on Fairfield avenue and Jacaruso was located at his home. The cause of the quarrel is unknown. Deputy Coroner T. E. Conway is investigating.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF NORWELL MAN

Hanover, Mass., Dec. 28.—Mystery tonight surrounded the finding here today of the body of William H. Ilsley, of Norwell, hanging over the door of his automobile which was found parked on a deserted, unfrequented street near today. Mr. Ilsley's pocketbook was missing and his body was frozen. Medical Examiner Gilman O. Osgood pronounced death due to cerebral hemorrhage but declined to comment further pending the delivery of his report to the assistant district attorney.

Mr. Ilsley, it was learned, left his home last night at six o'clock to make some purchases in the town of Rockland nearby. He did not return and it was not until 10.30 this morning that his car was discovered here. There are no houses nearby and the street is little frequented as a thoroughfare.

WARFIELD RESIGNS AS PRESIDENT OF N. A. O. R. R. S.

New York, Dec. 28.—Dayies Warfield, president of the National Association of owners of Railroad Securities, in a letter sent to members today, announced his intention of resigning as head of the organization. He will continue his active interest in its work, however, through membership on important committees. Mr. Warfield, who is president of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, has been head of the association for seven years.

HERRIOT AND FRENCH PRESS IN CONTROVERSY

Paris, Dec. 28 (By the A. P.).—Premier Herriot has crossed swords with the Paris newspapers over the question of the freedom of the press. His initiation of the prosecution of L'Eclair for the publication of "secret documents concerning national defense and the external safety of the state" has brought a strong protest from Count Etienne de Nalache, president of the syndicate of the Parisian press, and a volley of vigorous retorts from all the opposition and many of the neutral newspapers, led by the Matin, the Temps, the Journal Des Debats, the Figaro and the Intransigent.

A number of the newspapers construe the government's act in ordering the prosecution of L'Eclair as a desperate effort to muzzle the press to save the sinking ship. Count De Nalechae, in protesting "with the greatest firmness," without awaiting action by the syndicate's executive committee, says:

"I see, and the whole of the press will see, in it, with legitimate emotion a flagrant infringement of its liberty in this country, where this liberty was won by long efforts, it does not seem to me possible that a government based on universal suffrage can seek to revive ancient errors and disavow one of the most liberal victories which is the foundation and pride of truly republican regime."

The premier, in replying to Count De Nalechae, promptly denied that freedom of the press was at issue.

"But since we have been in power," M. Herriot added, "we have seen on several occasions unfortunate consequences of certain indiscretions which more than once embarrassed diplomatic negotiations and threatened to cause complications."

HELD FOR WHOLESALE THEFT OF RADIO SETS

New York, Dec. 28.—Max Fischler proprietor of a radio store, was held in $1,000 bail, James De Luco in $5,000 and Martin Chate in $7,500 bail in magistrate's court here today in connection with the theft of thousands of dollars worth of radio sets. More than 50 complaints from New York city and three from Lee, N. J., appeared against the defendants, of whom De Luco and Chate are charged with obtaining the sets by representing themselves as inspectors from radio stores.

The manager is also held in $500 bail. John G. Shwartz, a clerk, on a charge of attempting to tamper with the witnesses.

OBITUARY.

As a result of bronchial pneumonia, which developed following an automobile accident, Edward F. Navin of South Coventry is a patient at St. Joseph's hospital, having been there since Christmas day. Monday night, last week, Mr. Navin sustained a broken breast bone, a broken wrist and fractured ribs when the car which he was driving skidded and struck head-on into a tree near the house occupied by John Daly, in South Coventry. The crush threw him against the steering post of the machine causing the breast injuries. He was taken to his home, but complications made it necessary to remove him to the hospital. Authorities at the institution early Sunday afternoon stated that the patient was resting quite comfortably and feeling much better.

A badly wrecked seven passenger Hudson touring car, believed to have been used for booze-running, is in the possession of the authorities of the town of Andover and an effort is being made to locate the driver or owner of the machine. The car was wrecked late Wednesday afternoon, when it collided with the stone abutment at the treacherous railroad underpass in Andover. The entire left side of the machine was demolished. The two men occupants of the vehicle crawled out from the wreckage and taking off the registry plates were seen to throw them into the bushes. They were recovered by Deputy Sheriff Frink and bore New York state No. 1,181,461. In looking over the car a series of false bottoms were found with space enough to carry fifty gallons of liquor although none was found on board.

Funeral services for Daniel Holbrook were held at 62 North street Saturday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock by Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock. Burial was in the Willimantic cemetery. The bearers were Henry Blanchard, James P. Mustard, Eugene J. Randall and Charles W. Tryon. Avery and VanZandt had charge of the funeral arrangements.

The wedding of Miss Phoebe Emma Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornell Green, Sr., of South Willington and George Nelson Bowers of Hartford, son of John N. Bowers, of Tolland, took place Christmas afternoon at Chas. Hall Elliott Memorial church South Willington, Rev. Edwin E. Sundt, pastor of the Federated churches of Willington, officiated. The maid of honor was Miss Ruth S. Green, sister of the bride and the best man was Cornell Green, Jr., of Bradstreet, Mass., the bride's brother.

The funeral of Charles Robinson was held Saturday morning in Hartford with a requiem high mass at St. Peter's church. The automobile cortege arrived in this city at eleven and the body was placed in the receiving vault at St. Joseph's cemetery. Arrangements here were in charge of Killourey Brothers.

The engagement of Miss Jean Howie to Elmer Smith of Waterbury, son of Mrs. Lena Smith of Naugatuck, was formally announced by Miss Howie's mother, Mrs. Adele V. Howie at a party given Saturday evening at the Howie home on Prospect street. The guests were Misses Grace Connor and Martha Worth of Waterbury, Bertha Swanson of Meriden, and John Thoms of Waterbury. Miss Howie is a graduate of Windham High school and New Britain State Normal school. At present she is a member of the faculty at the Natchaug Grammar school.

The marriage of Miss Sybil Wilson of Boston, formerly of Scotland and Frederic Starr Bailey of Worcester, Mass., was made known through cards received in Mansfield, Scotland and this city.

Coasting has been excellent here since Christmas morning but Sunday morning practically all the snow on the hills had disappeared and one little fellow who was seen to run out of his house and throw his sled down for a fast slide down one hill stuck out and slipped head foremost over the sled for he struck nothing but bare ground. While the coasting was good, Mayor George W. Hickey, the state's busiest executive, lost no time in making it safe for the children to get the benefits of the best hills in the city protecting these with red flags.

The January assignment notice for the patrolmen has been posted by Chief of Police Allan McArthur. Officer Roderick Lariviere is designated to Scout; Officer William Hurley to Jackson street; Officer Arthur Hurley, Center beat; Officer Edward P. Leahy, West Main street and Officer Grant Bombria, day beat.

With the ice nearly one foot thick in some locations skating, called the king of winter sports, in this section, came into its own and hundreds of boys and girls have enjoyed themselves on various ponds and coves, many of them making the trip to the Pigeon Hill pond, South Windham.

That Willimantic residents are blessed with good health is attested to by the fact that for the week ending December 20, Willimantic reports but one communicable disease, one case of scarlet fever, whereas for the same period of time Bristol reports 44 and New Britain 29.

At the home of Ernest L. Stover of North Coventry, Thursday afternoon his daughter, Bessie M. Stover, became the bride of Charles H. Caskin of Boston, Mass. The double ring service was used. Rev. Charles G. Johnson officiated.

Rev. Harry S. McCready, formerly of the First Congregational church in this city writes that he recently purchased a new home of the Colonial type in Oakland, Cal.

William Foran, of New York, is spending some time visiting with friends here.

At a reunion of former schoolmates held in honor of Mrs. Frederick L. Vaughn of Worcester, Mass., Mrs. George E. Hinman and Mrs. Arthur W. Rice entertained at supper and at a theater and social Mrs. Bessie Bowen Vaughn, Mrs. Lena Chappell White, Mrs. Ethe Hathaway Taylor, Miss Gertrude Turner, Mrs. May Avery Gates and Mrs. Nettie Williams Hinman.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lowe and Charles F. Lowe of Barre, Vt., and Miss Catherine Lowe of Pittsfield, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruel M. Hyde have as guest the former's mother, Mrs. Henry N. Hyde of Greenwich.

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Avery of Canton are guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Peckham.

Dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jenkins on the holiday were Mr. and Mrs. William L. Jenkins, Miss Veronica Jenkins and Miss Mabel Jenkins of Brooke, Mass., Dr. and Mrs. James McKenna and son, James, Jr., of Providence, Mrs. Priscilla Ady of Silver Hills, Md., and William E. Jenkins of Putnam.

The Sunday school and community Christmas tree was held at the Baptist church in Spring Hill Sunday evening. Every person present received a gift from the tree.

Guests of Rev. and Mrs. T. Hawthorne Janes at the parsonage, Mansfield Center, Christmas were A. B. Buchanan, Archie Buchanan, also Miss Annie Buchanan of Willimantic.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Barrows and family of Hartford were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Knight.

A Christmas tree and entertainment were given at an open meeting of the Mansfield Center grange. The program included an address by Rev. Frederick C. Williams, rector of St. Paul's church, Willimantic, who spoke on the value of the grange in the community, and The Nativity; two vocal solos by Mrs. R. L. Hahn; selections by an instrumental quartet composed of Jesse Inman, James Eaton, Frances Crane and Rex Crane. Rev. Florence Jones gave two recitations, Canning Eggs and He Tried to Tell His Wife. Everything on the Christmas tree had a ridiculous significance. Red apples and popcorn were the refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. George Oliver had as holiday guests Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Oliver and family of Hartford, Mr. and Mrs. John Oliver of Branford, Mr. and Mrs. George Oliver, Jr., of Hartford and Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Matthieu and son, Clarence, Jr.

Christmas exercises and a tree were held in the Mansfield Center church under the auspices of the community and the Sunday school. The choir sang a number of carols and the Young Women's Bible class sang also. Mrs. R. L. Hahn was soloist. Action songs and recitations were given by the children. Among the gifts on the tree was a large bulky sack, presented the janitor by Rev. T. Hawthorne Jones. As the man put in his hand to see what was inside, a commotion occurred within and a startled and defiant crow of a rooster, and, to the delight of the spectators, he produced from the bag a large, live and very indignant cock.

Personal Mention.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Peckham entertained Christmas Mr. and Mrs. Albert Peckham of Lebanon, Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Ladd and son Elmer, Mr. and Mrs. William Peckham and Mr. and Mrs. William Avery of Vernon.

Elmer S. Atkins of New York city was a holiday and week end guest of friends and relatives in this city.

Hurley Keon of Boston spent last week at the home of his father, Francis J. Keon, here.

Arnold Bowen of Manchester, N. H., is visiting his parents, Supt. and Mrs. Willard N. Bowen, of the pumping station, Mansfield.

ARRESTED FOR VIOLATION OF IMMIGRATION LAW

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, Dec. 28.—F. G. McGovern, an immigration officer from Providence, R. I., came here Sunday to take into custody James R. Stanton, 19, the young man being held at police headquarters here for violation of the immigration law. Stanton was brought here from Mansfield Depot, where he tried to make himself at home in a boiler room, and he confessed to having jumped the border line from Canada. He was taken to Boston by Officer McGovern and turned over to the immigration authorities there. Stanton will be 20 years old on Jan. 1.

TAFTVILLE CAR FIGURES IN COLLISION SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, Dec. 28.—A prosecuting attorney is not always a welcome eyewitness, especially when it comes to staging an accident, is the conclusion of Thomas A. Butler of Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs, and George N. Beardow of Taftville. The front part of a Ford coupe operated and owned by Butler was damaged and damage inclusive of a broken rear wheel was caused to the Hupmobile sedan driven by Mr. Beardow and owned by his sistre, Anna M. Beardow, when the machines collided at the intersection of Valley and Walnut streets about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The Butler car was headed west on Valley street and the Beardow machine was going in a southerly direction down Walnut street when they met. When the brakes were applied the Taftville machine skidded completely around in the snow and the right rear wheel was crushed when it struck the curbing. Riding in the car with Mr. Beardow was Principal James L. Harroun of the Natchaug grammar school. Prosecuting Attorney Samuel B. Harvey stood on the sidewalk and saw the accident. He arrived at a conclusion which he will make known at the session of police court Monday morning, when Messrs. Butler and Beardow will be presented before the judge.

PERKINS' CORNER STORE YIELDS BEER AND MOONSHINE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, Dec. 28.—State Policemen Walter Hardisty and Henry Heinold of the Stafford Springs barracks raided a small store and the home of Dominic DiSota, 100 feet west of Perkins' Corner, on the Stafford-Willimantic highway, Saturday afternoon and placed the owner under arrest after quantities of beer and moonshine had been found. Over three dozen bottles of beer were confiscated. DiSota was taken before Justice of the Peace George H. Andrews of the Mansfield town court and pleaded guilty to violation of the liquor law. A fine of $100 and costs, amounting to $116.80, was imposed and paid. Grand Juror Frank Millard prosecuted the case.

PLAINFIELD

The cradle roll department held their annual Christmas tree exercises in the vestry of the Congregational church Tuesday afternoon. There was a large delegation of mothers and their little children present. A small tree was beautifully decorated and hung full of presents for the little people. Mrs. Carl Mathewson read a Christmas story and Evelyn Butler and Carlos Prentiss gave Christmas recitations. Cocoa and cookies were served. The superintendent, Mrs. Henry Starkweather, was assisted by Mrs. Annie Tillinghast.

Rev. Walter B. Williams of the Congregational church in Danielson occupied the pulpit in the Congregational church, Sunday morning. A special musical service was given on Sunday evening at 7 o'clock by the choir, assisted by the Leach orchestra. The choir was assisted by several new voices. Miss Florence L. Leach gave a violin solo.

One of the best Christmas entertainments in the history of the Congregational church was held Wednesday evening, in the vestry. A large Christmas tree of the pine family had been erected and very prettily decorated. At 8 o'clock a program of songs and recitations was ably carried out, every class taking part. Near the close of the program it was announced that Santa Claus had fastened his airplane to the church tower. He immediately came down to the room to the astonishment and pleasure of the children and assisted in distributing gifts to all members of the school. Following was the program, which won compliments for the different committees who did their part to make the whole affair such a success: Recitations, A Little Wish, by Mrs. George Babcock's class; Christmas wishes, Dorothy Prentiss' class; motion song, Christmas Stockings, Dorothy Pike's class; violin solo, Herbret Phillips, accompanied by Curtis Phillips; recitation, Two Little Stockings, by Bessie Congdon; pantomime, Silent Night, Mrs. Charles Barber's class; recitation, Christmas Dilemma, Bernice Jeffers; dialogue, What Means Christmas, Margaret Hetherstop and Dorothy Babcock; piano duet, Helen Krauss and Helen Greene; recitations, Father's Present, Lena Butler; Merry Christmas, Carlos Prentiss; monologue, Elizabeth's Christmas Present, Ida Butler; recitation by four boys; Chips From the Yule Log, David Plancheon's class; piano solo, Arnold Smith; recitation, Christmas Star, Francis Mathewson; Christmas story, Mrs. Carl Gallup; recitation by eight children, Christmas, by Mrs. Carl Mathewson's class.

At 11 o'clock Saturday the state police raided a little candy store where gambling was going on. Thirteen men were caught in the raid. One of the local automobile dealers went bonds for the men. The men will be tried in Central Village Tuesday morning.

Jacob Wocheler received a little gift cigar from John Eglin who has just returned from a trip through Germany. The cigar is about three inches in length and is on display in the store window on the hill. The cigar was purchased in Germany.

Basketball fans are still talking of the fast game which the A. and N. club played Friday night. It was a game filled with thrills and the same next Friday with the South Manchester team will have to go some to have anything on the last game.

After the big holiday rush at the local post office, the place looks deserted with just a few callers for the daily mail. A great relief to Uncle Sam's help!

The steady chingle of the automobile tire chains reminds old-timers of the sleigh bells of years ago. They smile and wonder what will take the place of the horseless carts a few years from now.

The Women's Bowling league will hold their regular match games at the Community House Tuesday night. The women will be in fine trim for the games, having had a two weeks' rest.

The Army and Navy club is still boasting of its cue-stick champs without any challengers here—a good opportunity for some fast boy to cop a few prizes.

The stretch of road between Hopkins Hill and the village of Plainfield is in a terrible condition. Motorists all complain about the condition of the road.

Six brand new cars were unloaded at the freight house in Moosup Saturday afternoon, perhaps a late delivery of Christmas presents!

A goodly crowd attended the dance at the town hall in Central Village on Saturday night.

Many of the village young people were in Pachaug Saturday night at the dance.

Cases of scarlet fever are reported in Oneco.

Donald Burke and Lawrence Burby spent Friday night with friends at Brown university.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Members of the Killingly High school alumni were crowing Sunday over the defeat administered by their representatives, Saturday night at the state armory, 38 to 33, to the Service battery team, which has been going great guns throughout the season. The largest crowd of the season was on hand to see the game, which was played in the interest of the high school gymnasium fund.

It was not until the fourth period of the game that the Alumni men got in the licks that brought victory, for they had been trailers in the scoring up to that time. At the end of the second period—half of the game—the battery was leading 18 to 16. The battery men had it on the alumni 27 to 25 at the end of the third period, but then, for the soldiers, came the end of a perfect day. In the final period, Poirier and Eaton, Service battery guards, were both expelled from the game after in each case having four fouls called upon them. They were replaced by Godreau and Stockton. Loss of their star guards weakened the battery team, though Godreau played exceptionally well and Stockton made his presence in the game strongly felt. But the alumni players were not to be denied. Their onslaught overwhelmed the army men and a quick succession of scores brought former Killingly High men out in front by a considerable margin before the final whistle blew.

Pop Williams, Paul Bitgood, Teddy Reeves, all Connecticut Aggies and former sterling players for Killingly high, were in the Alumni lineup, respectively at center and guards. Dana Blakely and Vadas, recent undergraduates of the school, were the fleet pair of forwards, playing with the Alumni team, though Vadas, for fouls, was lost to the team in its last stages and Franklin Crosby substituted in his place. Armington was at center for the battery, Captain Stanley Keech and Gordon Gale, the forwards and Poirier and Eaton, the guards for the battery in the initial stages of the game, exciting and closely contested from start to finish. It was a great game, the crowd enjoyed it and the gymnasium funds gets a boost. All of which leaves nothing lacking to record it as a great event in a modest going community.

The funeral of John Weaver, many years a resident of Brooklyn and one of its most esteemed citizens, was held from his home in the eastern section of the town Saturday morning with funeral services at St. James' church at 9.30 o'clock. Relatives and friends representative of various communities in eastern Connecticut attended the service. Rev. Joseph Dechaux, M. S., pastor of St. James' was celebrant of the solemn requiem mass, with Rev. Simeon Rousseau, M. S., the provincial of the Eastern Province of the Assumptionist Fathers, deacon and Rev. J. N. Provencher, sub-deacon. Rev. Father Dechaux also officiated at the committal service in all its solemnity and beauty. The bearers were John Weaver, James Weaver, Thomas Weaver, Joseph Weaver, Henry Weaver, nephews of the deceased, and Francis Quinn, L. E. Kenneppy in charge of the funeral arrangements.

William R. Whaley, 91, father-in-law of Frank O. Plummer, one of Danielson's business men, died Saturday in Foster, a neighboring town just over the Rhode Island border from the town of Killingly. Practically all of Mr. Whaley's life, reaching into the tenth decade of a century, has been spent in his native township, however, for a number of years he conducted a barbering business at Central Village. Mr. Whaley is survived by his wife, who is 84, and by two daughters, Mrs. Plummer, resident of North Sterling, another daughter who lives at Leicester, Mass., and a son, resident in Oxford.

This is the week when the many hundreds of people resident in Danielson and vicinity will give attention, if they already have not done so, to the matter of arranging for a Christmas club account, paying its returns in December of 1925. This may be regarded by some readers as boosting the business of the banks. On the other hand, it might get consideration as a system which numbers at wise and prudent people have learned that it is better to spread the cost of Christmas buying over 50 weeks of the year than to try and crowd it in, with all the attendant misgiving and financial burdens imposed to a fortnight crowded with an amplitude of other worries. Several hundred other people already have started their Christmas club account for 1925. They are the advance guard of more than 1,000 people who are set upon the objective of making the Christmas club releases here larger than the more than $100,000 released here early in December of this year, that figure a record that will not likely stand more than eleven more months.

Wednesday night will bring the end of another year for Killingly, as thought of from an industrial standpoint. The closing year has not been too good, though better here than in other textile communities in New England. In looking forward to 1925 one might be pardoned for enthusing over the prospect of a happy new year. The Quinebaug mill was closed during about 25 per cent. of the working days of 1924, and the Quinebaug plant is one that is a mainstay in this community's prosperity. Other plants were closed for months and some ran and did not run as business dictated. In all, 1924, has been the most unsatisfactory year industrially hereabouts in a decade. This was not the fault of the manufacturers. They had more at stake than the employes and were willing to operate if there was any business in sight. There were exceptions to this rule, of course, and the plant of the Aaswaras company at Dayville was one of them. Things look better just now. It would appear that there is prosperity and happy days ahead. The coming year ought to be an era of prosperity. At least one may hope for that.

Mrs. Robert Millea of Providence was a visitor on Sunday with relatives in Danielson.

John Burns of Webster has been a visitor with relatives here recently.

Masses at St. James' church on New Year's morning are to be at 5.30, 7.30, 9 and 10.30. The 10.30 mass will be a high mass.

This is another vacation week for the children who are pupils in the schools of the town, but they all will be back at their studies a week from today.

Henry C. Belmore of Fall River is spending the New Year's season with friends in Danielson.

Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Bessette and members of their family were visitors Sunday with relatives in Baltic.

Numbers of New Year's eve parties are planned for Danielson—house parties, dances and the like. The public has not been informed yet whether weather conditions will permit of burning a cross on the hills hereabouts.

Extremely cold Sundays are fashionable just now. At any rate, the weather man handed out another one yesterday. But it's old stuff. Tired people, after a big holiday, beat the game all hollow by staying at home, where it was cozy and warm.

December, with all its blustering, has produced less than three inches of snow in this territory—thanks be! And it has only today and tomorrow to make a real blizzard month of itself. That's another thing to be thankful about.

Miss Mildred Burton, who has been employed for a number of years in the office of the Goodyear mills, has gone to Charlotte, N. C., where she is to be employed in the office of a manufacturing concern.

A year is dying this week. There were reminder of this in all the church services Sunday, but also the glorious prospect of a new year, possibly the best of all life.

December cannot be accused this year of not rating as a winter month. It turned in another bitter cold Sunday as the last one of the year, and by night the temperature was flirting with the zero mark.

There was fishing through the ice in this territory on Sunday, not that the ice was too safe or the temperature too comfortable, but because it is the time in response to tradition to do that sort of thing.

From Miami, where coal bills are not much of a consideration these Arctic days in New England, come cards from Peter Young, telling of the joys of life at the New Year's season in a land where Ponce de Leon hoped to discover the waters of perpetual youth—and came near doing it—it seems—than most other people have been possessed of such Utopian ideas.

Well, anyway, New England isn't so bad at any time of year. Some of the Pilgrims lived through the first winter they experienced on its shores. And those who survived might learn if they were living today that they have at least 15,000,000 descendants. Lots of others would like to make a claim to the distinction, but it can't be done if one would be moderate.

It may be said that an honest-to-goodness, born-to-the-manor New Englander is subjected, by the nation at large, to a lot of good natured joshing for being provincial in these later days, but one can accept that and laugh the joshers into oblivion, backed by the knowledge that New England gets a lot of their money during the smiling seasons of the year, and that their intelligentia writes poems and plays about this area and its traditions and make the money out of them that allows them to be frivolous and foolish at one and the same time.

Two suits for divorce have been filed with Edgar M. Warner, clerk of the courts, returnable on the first Tuesday of January. All of the parties are or were residents of Putnam.

Adelard Bolduc asks for a divorce from Mary Anderson Bolduc, alleging that at the time of their marriage—September 25, 1921?—the woman had been married before, that her husband was living and that they had never been legally separated.

Joseph Benoit states in his petition that his wife, Ida Plante Benoit, deserted him a year after their marriage, without just cause. She is now making her home, the plaintiff avers, in Worcester.

At the Methodist church Sunday evening the following program was given by the choir and members of the Sunday school: Anthem, The Coming of the King, E. S. Lorens; quartet, Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne; Misses Nichols and Wilcox and Messrs. Wilcox and Marsh; play and tableau, Led by the Light.

A radio Christmas greeting was received at The Patriot office Thursday from G. Lawrence Perkins, president of the company, who is on his shipboard on his way home from a trip to China.

After the evening services at St. Philip's Episcopal church Sunday evening a Christmas festival was held in the guild room, for the children of the Sunday school.

Miss Constance Holt and Miss Sylvia Holt, of Woodstock, sisters of Hamilton Holt, have gone to New York for the holidays. They were the guests Sunday evening at a dinner given to Viscount Cecil, who has just arrived from England, at the Hotel Astor. A feature was the awarding to Viscount Cecil of the $25,000 annual prize from the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, as having given the most meritorious service in the cause of international peace and justice.

John J. Whitehead, Jr., editor of The Patriot, left Christmas night for San Francisco, to meet G. Lawrence Perkins, president of the Patriot company, when his ship docks there on its homeward journey from China. They expect to arrive in Putnam about Jan. 10, 1925. Mr. Perkins left here three months ago with the intention of spending the winter in China. His changed plans are due, it is believed, to the internal disorders that have been prevailing there for several months.

Miss Caroline B. Parker, of the department of religious music and church drama, came to Pomfret to witness the annual presentation of the Nativity Play.

Robert Hillyer of Boston and Pomfret, is spending the Christmas holidays with his mother, his brother, Stanley Hillyer, and his sisters, Mrs. McCurdy Marsh and Mrs. Harold Modena, in New York.

Hamilton Holt, democratic candidate for United States senator against Col. Hiram Bingham, has filed a statement of his expenses during the campaign. They amounted to $950, and according to the statement, the amount was contributed by Frederick P. Holt, treasurer of the democratic state committee.

Many of the attorneys of the county were in Putnam Saturday to consult and arrange with Charles E. Searls, state's attorney, in regard to the trials of criminal cases which are on the docket for the criminal term of superior court which will be held in Putnam next week. Mr. Searls is to be at the office of Samuel B. Harvey today (Monday) Dec. 29th, from 11.30 until 1.30 the same purpose.

Miss Louise M. Slayton of Worcester is the executrix of the estate of the late Jennie Simmons of Putnam.

Clovis LaPine, 64, of Wilsonville, who died Dec. 25, for many years had been a loom fixer in the employ of the Grosvenordale mills. His wife and three children survive him. The funeral took place at North Grosvenordale Saturday.

William A. Newell of Pawtucket, R. I., has been appointed by Probate Judge Flagg, executor of the estate of the late Horatio A. Brown. For many years before he came to Putnam Mr. Brown made his home in Pawtucket.

At Webster, Christmas day, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Whittemore entertained Sidney Madison of Newport, Mr. and Mrs. George Murray and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Whittemore, all of Putnam. William B. Whittemore is a Civil war veteran and until a few years ago made his home in Putnam. For the past five weeks he has been confined to his bed. He lacks but a month of being 79.

Miss Sara Renshaw of Pascoag is visiting her sister, Mrs. Stet McDonald of Church street.

A book was recently received by Mrs. M. G. Leopard of South Main street, for the late Horatio Brown from Mr. and Mrs. George T. Challoner, of Shanghai, China. Mr. Challoner was formerly head of the electrical department of the Putnam Trade school, but is now in the employ of the Edison company at Shangai.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hall and daughters were in Providence Christmas with Mrs. Hall's brother, Frank R. Botham and family.

The December issue of the Journal of American Statistical Association contains a contribution "Sex Cleavage in the Election of 1924" by Profs. S. A. Rice and Malcolm M. Willey of Dartmouth College. The article uses statistical methods to show that women in the election of 1924 failed to vote as did the men, although adhering more strongly to the conservative side of political issues.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Scott of Gastonia, N. C., have been in the city visiting Mrs. Scott's grandmother, Mrs. White of Grove street. Mr. Scott expects to be transferred north soon.

FOURTEEN MEN AND WOMEN SOLD LIQUOR ILLEGALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

Putnam, Dec. 28.—Fourteen Putnam citizens were arrested Saturday afternoon, charged with selling liquor illegally, or having it in their possession illegally. Among the number were three men and their wives. They were presented in the city court and all gave bonds in sums ranging from $500 to $1500 for their appearance in the same court at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Federal Enforcement Officers Congdon and Briggs, of Willimantic, William E. Jackson, county detective of Willimantic, Captain of Police Jervis of Putnam and the members of his force and Deputy Sheriffs Ayer, Latham and Tillinghast, constituted the raiding force. All were in plain clothes, divided in four squads and travelled in automobiles. From City Judge Geissler they had obtained warrants for arrests on proof of prior sales and they were also armed with search warrants.

At the conclusion of their raids, fourteen alleged violators of the 18th amendment, or the Volstead law, had been taken into custody. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bersuch, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kolak, and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Lasuard were the three married couples. Fred L'Heureux and John Rucke, both of whom have faced similar charges, and six more men, Polish or Russian, made up the party. Before the day was over all of them had secured bonds and were released until Monday morning.

EARLY MORNING FIRE LOSS $8,000 IN SISK BUILDING, NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Dec. 28.—Fire early this morning threatened to destroy the three story wooden structure, corner of Meridian and Church streets, owned by Robert J. Sisk, and occupied on the ground floor by Gates & Beckwith, paints and wall paper, and the upper two floors by Frank Naka and family and Charles M. Tinker and family. The Gates & Beckwith store was gutted and the Naka and Tinker families were forced to flee from the building in scanty attire, when awakened from their slumbers by clouds of smoke entering the apartments.

The blaze was discovered about 1 o'clock by pedestrians and an alarm was sent in from Box 21, corner of Huntington and Church streets. With the arrival of the department the fire was burning briskly in the rear of the store and among a quantity of wall paper. The blaze was attacked with chemicals and several streams of water. Firemen entered the living apartments and assisted men, women and children to the street, some being carried for by relatives residing in the neighborhood and others being given shelter at the Y. M. C. A.

After battling with the flames for an hour the fire was believed to be subdued, but about 2.15 o'clock the blaze broke out anew and a still alarm caused Konomoc Hose company to respond. Chemicals were directed upon the flames and they were finally extinguished.

The damage has not been estimated, but it is believed that loss to the building and stock will reach close to $8,000.

The fire, it is thought, originated from defective electric light wires, for when the firemen reached the building the flames were located in the large quantity of wall paper and close to the electric light wires.

Automobile thieves operated in New Haven Saturday night, for during the night the police of that city requested the New London authorities to be on the lookout for five cars that were stolen from New Haven streets during the late afternoon and early evening. The cars were a Chrysler sedan, registration, SX-12; Willys-St. Clair roadster, registration, E-6912; Hupmobile coupe, registration, 17441; Chervolet sedan, registration, 9190; and a Ford sedan, registration, A-304.

December 17th Samuel J. Illick, chief burgess of Humeville, Pa., requested the New London police to take into custody Harry Schoenfield, a sailor aboard the United States destroyer Cassin, of the navy's dry fleet, stationed at this port. Schoenfield at the time was being given a general court martial. His case has now been disposed of and he was to have been taken into custody within a few days, but he will continue to enjoy his liberty for Illick today notified the police that Schoenfield was no longer wanted by the authorities of Humeville, as the charge pending against him had been satisfactorily adjusted, the charge having been one of non-support.

Mrs. Davis, 171 Garfield avenue, this forenoon notified the New London police station that an auto bearing registration 6491, had been parked some time at the corner of Garfield and Jefferson avenues and with the keys of the auto in the motor lock. The police investigated and determined that the car had become stalled and was the property of George R. Bruhns, an employe of the Connecticut Motor transportation company.

Mary Favio, 16, of 4 High street, Groton, is being sought by the authorities of that place and New London, as a runaway for she disappeared from her home Friday afternoon and her whereabouts are unknown. The girl, who has been employed by the Tracey Chemical company, this city, is described as being tall and of dark complexion. She left her Friday afternoon supposedly to come to New London and attend a performance at one of the local playhouses. She did not return home Friday and Saturday forenoon, when she did not put in an appearance at her home or at her place of employment, the police in Groton borough and this city were requested to institute a search for the girl.

Freight steamer Canadian Explorer, of the Canadian Merchants Line, arrived in port Saturday afternoon and immediately proceeded to the state pier where she will take on about 50 carloads of automobiles, consigned to New Zealand and Australian ports. The loading of the craft will occupy a number of days, as already about 40 carloads of automobiles await transfer from freight cars to the freighter.

Edward Little, 26 Franklin street, reported to the police early Saturday morning that his bicycle, which he had left alongside the curb on Golden street, near [illegible] en street, Friday night, had been stolen.

Cathrupo O'Brien, familiarly known as "Charlie O'Brien," who has been arrested many times for intoxication, was taken into custody Saturday night for the same offense, by Sergeant Frank Howard, when the officer found O'Brien drunk on North Bank street. O'Brien was the only prisoner locked up at the police station over Sunday.

Funeral services for Mrs. Goldie M. Holdredge, wife of William E. Holdredge, were held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at her home, 99 Howard street, and were attended by many mourners. Rev. Myron E. Genter, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church officiated. Relatives of Mrs. Holdredge acted as bearers. Burial was in Fishtown cemetery, Mystic.

The funeral of John Hammer was held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his home, 12 Raymond street and was largely attended. Among the mourners were delegations of members of Union lodge of Mason, Mohegan lodge of Odd Fellows and Konomoc Hose company, of which organizations Mr. Hammer was a member. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. Members of Union lodge of Masons acted as bearers. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Mrs. Morris Wilson and infant daughter, of Niantic, and Mrs. Russell Beckwith and infant daughter, Quaker Hill, patients at Lawrence hospital, were dismissed Saturday.

Caroline M. Sherman has sold two building lots at the corner of Montauk avenue and Thames street, to Joseph A. St. Germain. It is understood that Mr. St. Germain will have two dwellings erected on the site in the spring.

The Whitton Machine company will start operations on full time Monday after a curtailment of hours there for a week. All departments were shut down the entire week and another department was shut down three days, because of lack of orders.

There have been eight days of snug winter. Today the temperature has hung close to 10 above zero. There is ice 6 inches in thickness on the ponds generally, and skating is the sport of the moment. Rogers pond has been well patronized by skaters today, but they must take the opportunity to skate while it is to be had for when an inch or two is added to the thickness of the ice the skaters will be prohibited from using the ice there as the owners desire to harvest the ice for use next summer.

The entire seating capacity of the Lyceum theatre will be occupied when Lieut. Leslie Arnold appears there Tuesday evening and tell of his trip around the world with the army fliers. Lieut. Arnold was in the plane that made the trip and was its mechanician. His story will no doubt be thrilling, a recital that will present facts that no person would believe coming from any one except a participant in that marvelous and seemingly impossible journey. Lieut. Arnold is understood to have kept the only complete diary of the trip from start to finish. He was a New London boy during his youth and was educated in the schools of this city and finished his studies at Bulkeley school where he prepared for college, but did not go so far in completing his education. He had the spirit of adventure and yielded to that when the opportunity came to enlist in the air service of the army. He seems to have made no mistake for he has the material in information which he can make use of to his profit, especially should he decide to and goes forward with publication of the most thrilling story that can be written. Mr. Arnold is to have a leave of absence for ninety days and that will bring him to this city—his old home—for an extended visit. The city council has appointed a committee of its membership to arrange for presenting a testimonial to Lieutenant Arnold and the gift will be bestowed on the occasion of Tuesday next when it appears to relate his wonderful story to the Lyceum theatre. The orchestra of Bulkeley school, from which Lieut. Arnold graduated, will furnish music for the occasion, and many of his former school chums and acquaintances will be in the large audience that listens to him. The entire lot of tickets has been disposed of and still the demand is great.

New London investors have had a most happy ending of the year 1924, for they have shared or can share in a profit from their investments. One party who has not had a chance to dispose of holdings that were bought some 15 years ago is said now to have a handsome profit, exclusive of the interest drawn during all the years the investment has been held.

The police almost daily receive complaints of the conduct of young men or youths who misbehave in various sections of the city. They were called today to the corner of Elink and Howard street were young fellows were inoffensive. The youths by that time had departed.

Mrs. Marjory Cheney of South Manchester, the only woman who will be a member of the legislature elected at the November election, will be in this city at the invitation of the New London League of Women Voters, next Saturday and at 8 o'clock she will address an audience of women and men in the ball room of the Mohican hotel, explaining the purpose of the child labor bill which she hopes will be enacted by the assembly that convenes the first week in the new year. She is a member of a committee that has been selected to codify the child labor laws of this state, and is so familiar with her subject that she is prepared to deal with the question in all its phases.

The First Baptist church contained one of the largest congregations that has assembled in that edifice in many a day, when this evening a pageant, "The Birth of Christ" was presented. Rev. Chester H. Howe gave the Christmas message and the choir sang four numbers of the cantata of "The Holy Nativity." There were three scenes in the pageant, and the characters were assumed by the following: Scene I showed Pilgrims on the way to Bethlehem; Scene II disclosed the plains of Bethlehem; in Scene III were the shepherds, the wise men and the pilgrims seeking the new born King. The characters in the third scene were, Mother, Wilhelmina Daniels; child, Renna Ballard; Miriam, Ruth Sellew; Titus, Ruth Shipman; Dan, Luther Creswell; the Pharisees were represented by Grace Kelly as Simoen; Frances Facker as Mushi; Roberta Williapson as Benoi. The shepherds were represented by George Mather as Elder; Mabel Downs as Levi; Mabel Beebe as Jakim; Dorothy Ray as Kish; Richard Keeney as Miguel. The wise men were F. W. Tinson, Warland Mansfield and Elmer Griswold. Ruth Howe assumed the character of Mary, Harris Howe that of Joseph and Dorothy Seagraves and Ida Pollard were the angels. The service pleased all who attended.

The owners of the property on Howard street in which the Miller store was located when fire occurred there a fortnight or more ago, give no sign that the place will be repaired and business reestablished there.

The New London police tonight were maintaining a watch for an Italian, who assaulted and robbed a store keeper in New Haven today. The Italian entered the store and felled the proprietor with a blow upon the head rendering him unconscious. A youth who was in the store was then tied and foot, while the thief then stole whatever money could be found. The storekeeper who was removed to a hospital, is not expected to recover. The Italian is described as being about 25, five feet nine inches in height and weighs about 65 pounds. He is of fair Completion and wore tortoise shell glasses and wore a black overcoat, black shoes and cap.

Herbert Fengar, of New York, formerly organist at Groton Congregational church, played at the organ of the church today in the absence of Organist Howard Pierce, who, with his family, is visiting relatives in Portland, Me.

Abraham Gordon has sold the dwelling, 31 Montauk avenue, to Charles Satti, Mr. Satti's son, Dr. John Satti will establish a residence in the house his father has acquired.

Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy found a canvass bag partially filled with laundry that is supposed to have fallen from an automobile on State street. The bag was turned over to Patrolman David Nagle and taken to the police station.

MRS. HENRY F. STRICKLAND DIES ON SUNDAY, AGED 94

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Dec. 28.—Mrs. Martha Washington Strickland, 94, died early this morning at her residence, 101 Ellman street, death ending an illness of many months due to the infirmities attending her advanced years. Mrs. Strickland, who was the widow of Henry F. Strickland, is survived by a son, Frank P. Strickland, of Oklahoma, a niece residing in Boston, a nephew, Henry Rogers of Brooklyn, N. Y., and by three grandchildren, residing in Kansas City, Kan.

C. J. KELLY, FAKE CHECK PASSER INQUIRED ABOUT FROM FLORIDA

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Dec. 28. — Mrs. J. Klemer, Warrensburgh, N. Y., has communicated with the New London police requesting information as to the whereabouts of Charles J. Kelley, who passed a worthless check upon Mrs. Klemer some time ago. Mrs. Klemer stated that she is now residing in Marco, Florida, and the passing of the check took place some time before she moved to the south for the winter.

Kelley is a much wanted individual by the authorities of New London and Groton. The latter part of last summer he had a woman pass on his wife purchased a Star touring car by passing a worthless check on the Sullivan Motor company. After they went to Groton where they obtained lodgings and then proceeded to rifle the rooms of other lodgers. The couple succeeded in making a getaway and went to Burlington, Vt., where they were taken into custody, following the woman robbing a guest at a Burlington hotel of a fur coat.

Mrs. Shorter and Mrs. Walsh are spending the holidays with the former's daughter, Mrs. Edna Rice, of Willimantic.

Mrs. C. C. John is visiting for a few days with her son and family in New Jersey.

Mrs. David Hicks is ill with grip.

PENDLETON HILL

Altogether the Hill had a very Merry Christmas. The festivities began with a Christmas tree for the Sunday school children at the church on Tuesday evening. The entertainment consisted of a very affective pageant-like story of the Nativity. While the decorations were much less elaborate than in former years, the results from every standpoint were much more satisfactory.

Miss Currie A. Ryder entertained a family party of twenty-five with an old fashioned Christmas dinner, the menu for which included turkey and chicken pie, pumpkin pie, mince pie, English plum pudding and real honest-to-goodness ante-bellum fruit cake in line with the annual dinner which had been served at Ferndale for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Cottrell and sons and the Misses Kittie and Celie Palmer dined with a family party of seventeen at the home of Mrs. Cottrell's mother, Mrs. George Cottrell, at Oak Lawn, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson and family entertained Mrs. Simeon White, Miss Hattie White, Eli King and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Frink of Jewett City.

THE TRUMBULL PLAN.

From Hartford there comes the information that Governor Trumbull, when he inherits that office through the natural course of events, will eliminate the frills from state government and get down to a real business administration.

That is a confirmation of a belief that has long since prevailed concerning the man who was some months ago nominated for lieutenant governor and who, through the death of Senator Brandegee and the expressed will of the people of Connecticut that Governor-elect Bingham should step into his place in the upper house at Washington, will advance to the governorship two years earlier than had been thought possible.

It was well known at the time he was nominated for lieutenant governor what kind of a man Senator Trumbull was. He had shown during his service in the legislature what his aims and objects were. He had shown himself to be a thoroughgoing advocate of sound business policies, with a keen understanding of state conditions and needs, and therefore just the man to be called upon in case circumstances required him to serve as governor.

Without any doubt the governor-to-be echoes the sentiment of the people of Connecticut in the announcement he has made. It is not a new declaration for he actually put it into operation during his service in the state senate. Both his career as a business man and a legislator have impressed that fact upon those who have seen him in action and who have noted his close attention to the high points and the effectiveness of his work.

Thus the preliminary statement in behalf of the man who will guide the affairs of the state for the next two years is only what was to be expected, but there is a high degree of satisfaction in noting that it is to the [illegible] and that it is in keeping with the demands The Trumbull plan suits Connecticut.

THE VOTE IN NOVEMBER.

It is an old saying that "figures don't lie," but it has been demonstrated that they can be employed in mystifying ways.

In connection with the compilation of the completed figures for the November election interest is attached to the disclosure that there were 15,718,789 votes for President Coolidge, 3,378,963 for Davis and 4,822,319 for La Follette for it shows, as has been set forth, a smaller total vote than had been expected in view of the effort to get out the vote, and while the president received the greatest plurality of any one chosen for that office attention has been directed to the relative positions of the leader of the third party in the recent contest and that of Roosevelt twelve years ago.

It is impossible to overlook the statement that 636,299 more votes were cast for La Follette than were given to Roosevelt. That of course is the bold fact without attention being directed to the difference in the conditions. It might be inferred that La FoHette is a greater leader than was Roosevelt, but when we stop to consider the large increase in the number of voters and the fact that Roosevelt secured almost 30 per cent of the vote in 1912 and La Follette just under 17 per cent of the vote in 1924 the real difference in their votes is obtained.

It is also to be remembered that when Theodore Roosevelt was a third party candidate he was not given the party support by socialists. There was a socialist presidential candidate in the field at that time whose vote came close to a million and a good part of which was thrown to La Follette. But even with that and with the increased vote La Follette was able to get but little over half the percentage of the total votes that Roosevelt got.

That of course is true in those states where the claim is made that La Follette got more votes than Roosevelt. What appears to be the situation, or is the situation on the surface, changes to an entirely different color when a look beneath the surface is taken. Had La Follette obtained 30 per cent of the 1924 vote, as Roosevelt did of the 1912, his total would have been well over eight million, and more than was obtained by Candidate Davis last November.

THE SHIPPING BOARD.

The shipping board was a development of the war. It was necessary to have some government organization to take hold of the merchant marine which had been constructed with government money, and which up to the present time it has neither been possible to dispose of nor to operate at a profit.

Year after year we are told of the many millions which the shipping board costs the government and we are also told with what lack of success efforts have been made to cut down that large loss. President Harding wanted a ship subsidy that would result in the utilization of American vessels but it was denied. Since then it has been shown that the shipping board is unnecessary for the operation of the government vessels and that greater efficiency and better results can be obtained by placing such duties in the hands of the emergency fleet corporation.

That is the aim of President Coolidge in the interest of economy. There is a chance to stop up one of the big leaks in government money and it has been hoped that the shipping board would recognize the chance which it faced to put through such a saving, but as is too often the case the fact that it has a grip on the situation and doesn't wish to voluntarily give up the fat salaries which go with the job causes it to balk.

There are two courses that can be followed. The board can turn over the authority which it has to the emergency fleet corporation, or legislation can be enacted which will accomplish the same thing. Naturally it is desired that the board meet the situation without forcing legislation, but just now that doesn't appear to be likely. In spite of the advice given the president and the willingness which had been shown by the board to meet the desires of the president there is now a reluctance on the part of the board to go the whole way. It will do part but it still desires to keep a grip on the situation, possibly for the salaries and such patronage as may be involved. In behalf of better government, the elimination of needless expenditures and the cutting of losses by this branch of the government there ought to be no question as to the outcome.

PREVENT SCHOOL TRAGEDIES.

In connection with the tragedy Christmas eve in the Babb's Switch school house in Oklahoma, attention is properly being called to the heroic service rendered by the schoolteacher and others who were intent upon saving as many lives as possible even though they sacrificed their own. It was one of those instances where the chance to aid others permitted one to forget personal danger, but now that it is all over and it is possible to take account of the conditions that existed and the lives that were needlessly lost one cannot fail to understand how much greater service might have been rendered by the introduction of a few of the needed preventive measures in that little school house.

There was a combination of hazards which is terrible to contemplate. It now seems almost impossible that they should not have been recognized in advance and eliminated in view of what has happened elsewhere. That veritable firetrap was conducive to the panic which added to the terror of the occasion and which made the exit of the crowd impossible.

Right now there should be a survey in every locality, small as well as large, to ascertain whether there are any more such public buildings as that which held the children, women and men of Babb's Switch. If there are more of them, and it is not improbable, they have been tolerated too long and immediate action is called for that will remove the hazards and provide protection against any such frightful affair as that in Oklahoma. Let there be such drastic remedies applied now that there will be no occasion for heroic acts at some future time.

A SPECIAL SESSION.

Before this present session of congress convened there were those who were demanding the calling of a special session of the new congress next March for the purpose of taking up certain problems about which the country in the vote of last November expressed its attitude.

Even though this plan has failed to meet the approval of the president, who believes that the country is entitled to a rest from legislative action and considers that it should be relieved of the uncertainty which prevails while congress is in session, there are those who are still demanding it.

It has never been contended that the present session could, or would even if favorably disposed, solve all these problems. There is time for adopting the appropriation measures and certain others that can be worked in with them but the idea of bringing up controversial bills that will serve to block even the appropriation measures cannot be regarded as wise, or even necessary.

If those who are fighting for a special session plan to get it by obstructing action at this short session, and therefore force the hand of the president into calling a special session to do what the short session should dispose of, it cannot make a favorable impression upon the country.

If the merits of a special session cannot bring it about, it is certainly against public interest to undertake to force it through the wasting of the next two months in doing nothing. Congress itself should be sufficiently mindful of its duty to prevent any such development.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Are you making the most of these longer days?

The man on the corner says: A cold snap is no cinch.

It can never be said that Muscle Shoals is being held back for lack of free advertising.

The arrival of the cold snap simultaneously with official winter may indicate an unpopular alliance.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Buy unpolished rice when possible and avoid that which has many broken kernels.

Choose fruit that is not bruised as a break in the skin means quick decay.

Choose thin skinned lemons in preference to thick, since they contain more juice.

Rub laundry soap on gas pipes to stop a leak until the plumber comes.

Add a pinch of soda to cranberries when they are nearly done and considerably less sugar will be required when sweetening.

Try adding a little common salt when mixing bluing. This helps to distribute the color evenly and prevents the clothes from looking streaked or patchy.

If you will wrap several rubber bands about the ends of your dress hangers, your dresses and coats will not slide off so easily.

Sliced green peppers make a pleasant change from onions or mushrooms for cooking with beefsteak.

Water leaves a dark spot on a waxed floor and oil makes it sticky. The best way to keep it clean is with a heavy polishing brush heavily weighted.

Wash each piece of cut glass separately in warm water and ammonia and rinse and dry at once.

If you are to give a party have your silver, china, glassware and linen all counted and ready the day before so that you have only to arrange it the day of your party.

When making fudge remember that dried fruits, marshmallows, peanut butter or cocoanut and raisins are most delicious as well as making a change from nuts.

When a candle is to large to fit the candlestick, don't cut it down to the required size, but hold the end in hot water. This will soften the wax and the candle may be easily pressed down into the candlestick without trouble.

PROPER CARE OF SALAD GREENS

All materials for salds must be perfectly fresh. On this particular point rests the success or failure of the concoction and while there is nothing more delicious or appetizing than the perfect salad, it is easily the worst kind of mixture when the ingredients are stale, wilted or sloppy.

Salad greens should be washed and put in a cool place immediately when they arrive. Separate the lettuce leaves, wash, shake to dry, and place in a clean towel or salad bag to drain. Lay on ice or in cool place until needed.

Do not leave any salad green in water for any length of time.

The cress which grows in the streams is an addition to any salad. Added to cottage cheese, beans, or fruits, it gives just the spicy flavor needed to complete the dish. Cress is easily obtained, has many uses, and will keep for a long time if put in a cool place. It should be washed, shaken and placed in a glass jar. Screw the top down just so it will hold, but not tightly. Moisture will gather on the sides of the jar, and, so long as it does this the greens will keep fresh. If it dries out, add a few more drops of water. Parsely can be kept indefinitely in the same way.

Canned spinach, cabbage, or any canned vegetable to be served as salad should be opened, turned into a dish and chilled for several hours before serving.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Most people are content to use their eyes to the utmost capacity without thought of strain or future.

Steep two ounces of flaxseed in a pint of boiling water for three hours. Strain and add the juice of two lemons, sugar to sweeten and let cool. Take one ounce every two or three hours. This is a home remedy that has been tried with very good results.

The four fundamental troubles which generally affect eyesight are eye defects, eye strain, eye accidents or eye diseases. Of these, eye defects are quite common and are, frequently due to nearsightedness, farsightedness or astigmatism—words that may sound familiar to those who have gone to the eye specialists. These are generally corrected through the prescription of glasses.

The custom of wearing old gloves at night has been observed for generations by women who care to preserve the beauty of their hands. The purpose of the gloves is, of course, to keep the cream from rubbing off on the bedding. The finger-tips and palms should be cut out to allow ventilation. The following cream may be used at night and also for the daytime massage: White vaseline, three ounces; beef suet purified, two ounces; spermaceti, two ounces; coconut oil, one-half ounce; glycerine, one ounce; milk of almonds, one ounce; oil of rose, ten drops.

HANDY SHOE BAG

Of much value is a shoe bag of stout cloth, and divided into pockets, or compartments, to hold the tiny shoes. The small child's shoes should never be allowed to mingle with the shoes of adults which are inevitably subjected to coarse contacts. One of the favorite stunts of the small child is to see how much of its shoe it can chew. So it's up to the parents to keep that shoe as clean as possible, guarding against the moment when Tommy has a craving for shoe leather.

ROSES OF SILK MUSLIN

A most unusual evening gown has a deep gathered flounce bordered with roses and silk muslin. A single rose is placed in the right shoulder and another on the left hip. This model is clearly inspired by the prevailing Spanish influence.

IN BLACK AND WHITE

Black and white printed silk is utilized to line the upturned narrow brim of the newest little black canne bell-crowned sport hat. The sole other trimming is a narrow bow of ribbon at the back.

SEWING HINTS

When a hole appears in a rag carpet caused by the breaking of the warp you can mend it by stitching back and forth on the sewing machine.

Pin cushions are one thing of which the sewer never has enough. A small whetstone to be kept in the machine drawer and that will enable one to repoint blunt needles immediately the damage is done, is a gift that will save many a penny and much annoyance.

A large piece of denim with brass rings sewed at intervals and a stout cord run through them enables one simply to pull the cord when she wants to clean up after her work, and all the rippings and snippings are in a scrap heap in the middle of the cloth, ready to be transferred to the waste basket.

THE SLIP COVERS

When you select the slip covers for your furniture, consider the surroundings. If you have Oriental rugs or Chinese mattings the exotic cretonnes, which are largely represented in present displays, will be just the thing. For the Colonial room, those exquisite floral patterns that are now so prominent should be chosen. Striped fabrics are returning to favor and in the heavy linens make durable slip covers.

Durability is a quality many housewives have to consider, especially she who makes her own slip covers. These women should not linger at those counters piled so high with the alluring glazed chintz. This fabric makes very attractive slip covers, but it wrinkles easily and, unless the imported glazed chintz is selected does not make satisfactory slips. The same may be applied to the printed linens that are now so popular. In purchasing material for slip covers, both these fabrics should be selected only for rooms not frequently used and where pretty effects are more to be considered than durability.

Women have been alert in recognising the possibility of these fabrics for decorative purposes, so they are making charming summer hangings, coverings, scarfs and pillows of the figured linens and the pretty glazed chintz.

TRY SOMETHING NEW

Don't be afraid to try new recipes and dishes. It is the only way to have an interesting table and really good meals. Guests will always enjoy something new, unless they are of the generation who proudly stated that they did not care for a certain eatable, even though they had never tasted it.

SCARF OF LIGHT WOOL

A new scarf of wool, closely woven but extremely light, employs all the delicate blending of soft colors for which the Scotch weavers are famous. It is short and unadorned at the ends, since it is worn tightly wound about the throat with the ends tucked within the topcoat.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Mrs. Poonen Lokose, a Syrian Christian doctor, is India's first woman legislator.

London's force of policemen has recently been reduced to 20 for reasons of economy.

A notch in the wedding ring to indicate a divorce is the latest fad among English divorcees.

Toronto, Canada, has more than 8,000 women employed in the needle trades at an average weekly wage of $14.80.

Seventeen denominations were represented at the recent convention in Chicago of the Association of Women Preachers.

Lady Richmond Brown, English woman explorer, crack shot and expert fisherwoman, will lead an expedition into British Honduras to seek Maya treasure. In order that she may have the opportunity to hunt at her leisure she has taken a 25-year lease on 70,000 acres.

Miss Ruth Brendley of Dwight, Ill., is probably the youngest city clerk in the country, having been elected when she was 18 years of age.

THE WANDERING STRING

When the drawstring or ribbon slips back into the casing and is just too far away to reach with the fingers use a crochet hook, then pull. You will have the string in a minute.

AVOIDS FAT

Your roast will never become fat soaked if you put it on a rack in the roasting pan instead of directly on the pan. But keep the surface of the pan covered with grease to prevent burning.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Attractive mules are of black satin, lined with gold leather, with tiny bows of the leather.

Yellow and the amber shadings are extremely popular in chiffons and very thin fabrics.

A tendency toward pastel shades is noticed in linings, tunics and wraps for spring.

Dancing frocks of bright red velvet, very short and very full skirted, are worn effectively by the young and slim.

One of the smartest ensemble suits is of black velvet and has a beautiful embroidered tunic of white velvet.

New vanity cases have long silk tassels in which is cleverly concealed a lipstick in a tortoise shell case.

Leopard-printed velvet makes attractive trimming for gowns as well as scarfs and close fitting little turbans.

Blond pumps, either of kid or satin, are very popular now, worn with hand bag and stockings matching exactly in shade.

Hand-loomed fabrics and loose weaves are very much liked for coats and three piece outfits for Palm Beach.

An evening coat for a young girl is a vision of loveliness in white panne velvet with a collar of fluffy white fox fur.

The very newest blouses have high close collars and button down the back with a row of buttons set very close to each other.

Leopard fur is used on evening gowns extensively, but on nothing is it more effective than on kasha cloth in the natural color or in black.

A long velvet tunic slashed in the front to show the underskirt of printed silk is a favorite of fashion at the present time.

As an exponent of the vogue for simple lines there is a new stepin pump of patent leather absolutely untrimmed and fastening at the side with buttons.

Sleeves are exceptionally interesting especially those with wide fur cuffs simulating a muff—melon or balloon sleeves they are called. Often there is a narrow band of the fabric brought through the center of the cuff to tie in a smart little bow.

THE TIPS INTACT

It is wise to open the can of asparagus from the bottom. Then the stalks can be removed easily without breaking the tips.

RECIPES

Molded Fruit Cream: One-half cup seedless raisins, one orange, four bananas, one tablespoon granulated gelatin, one-half cup cold water, one cup whipped cream. Soak the gelatin in cold water 10 minutes. Peel bananas and rub through a coarse sieve; add orange juice and a little of the grated rind, the raisins and two tablespoons powdered sugar. Melt the gelatin over hot water. Strain into fruit mixture. Stir until mixture begins to thicken, then fold in whipped cream and pour into large individual molds. To serve, unmold and garnish with whipped cream.

Charlotte Russe: Soak seedless raisins in orange juice for several hours, then drain off all juice. Allow one cup of raisins to one pint of cream. Whip cream and flavor with one teaspoon vanilla extract; add four tablespoons powdered sugar and the raisins. Line sherbet glasses with split lady fingers or thin slices of sponge cake and put the charlotte russe in the center. Garnish the top with raisins.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Edward C. Franklin, who has been awarded the 1924 Nichols Medal for original research in chemistry, is professor of organic chemistry in Leland Stanford University and a former president of the American Chemical Society. Dr. Franklin was born at Geary City, Kas., and was graduated from the State university at Lawrence in 1888. He was a student at the University of Berlin 1890-91 and received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at Johns Hopkins University in 1894. Before joining the faculty at Stanford university he had been a member of the advisory board of the United States Bureau of Mines and chemist of the United States Bureau of Standards. During the war he served as consulting chemist of the ordnance bureau of the army. Dr. Franklin's work on liquid ammonia as an electrolitic solvent is familiar to chemists the world over.

Browning Called "The Putterer."

John M. Browning was called a "putterer." It often was said that he just liked "just to fuss around his shop." His father was a gunsmith and when very young, the boy liked to play about the shop in the then frontier town of Ogden, Utah. He was 14 when he decided he wanted a gun and obtained permission of his father to "putter" about the scrap heap. He made a muzzle-loader that his father admitted was good, and copies of it were demanded by hunters and trappers nearby.

He loved to roam the woods and hunt, and he supplied the family with game on trips outside of school hours. He continued to work about the shop and in his early twenties invented his first sigle-shot rifle. His father and brother made many of these and disposed of them. The Winchester Arms company offered him a big sum for the patent, and he sold it.

He then learned to play the banjo. He continued to work in the shop and invented many types of firearms, the Winchester rifles, Remington guns and automatic rifles, and many others. Foreign concerns took up his inventions, and his ideas revolutionized the firearms of many nations.

As the result of further inventing he turned out the automatic revolver, then the automatic gun that was known as the Colt's machine gun, the only machine gun used in the Spanish-American war.

When the World war broke out Browning was working on an automatic rifle that could be carried by soldiers. Germany seized his arms factory in Belgium, cutting off an immense revenue. Four years later the United States government adopted the Browning light and heavy machine gun, proclaimed to be the best ever invented. Browning's income jumped to $1,000,000 a year. He was knighted by England and decorated

"FINGER PRINTING" ERRANT BORDER

"If airplanes and efficient cameras had been in use for map making three-quarters of a century ago when American boundary treaties with neighboring countries were adopted and certain state lines were agreed upon, Uncle Sam could rest easier about the title to his old homestead," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "Incidentally three generations or surveyors and map draftsmen would have been spared much futile tribulation, and thousands of dollars in litigation would have been saved."

The bulletin points out that a suit of many years' standing is before the United States Supreme court to determine the correct river boundary between New Mexico and Texas near El Paso, and that a similar problem concerning the international boundary between Texas and Mexico along the Rio Grande river is to be attacked by U. S. Army photographers who will snap aerial views of the disputed territory.

"Rivers are popularly believed to constitute ideal buondaries," continues the bulletin. "since they make bold lines with one jurisdiction on one bank and another on the other. Rivers that 'stay put' do make unsurpassed boundaries; but unfortunately there are streams or parts of them that wander, so to speak, all over the geographic lot; and more exasperating and unsatisfactory boundaries hardly could be devised. Such are streams flowing in semi-arid regions where there is little vegetation to assist in holding unruly waters to their channels.

"Much controversy has arisen since the creation of the United States over the water boundaries separating our territory from that of Canada, from the St. Croix river at the northeastern corner of Maine to the Rainy river of northern Minnesota, the westernmost stream boundary along the northern line. But the disagreements have been over the selections of these streams; once agreed upon they have remained fixed lines, running in their accustomed wooded and rock-bound courses.

Not so with the Rio Grande, which forms the most extensive river boundary of the United States, and, save for some 20 miles along the lower Colorado, constitutes the only international river boundary in the south. This river, crossing numerous patches of alluvial valley lands, keeps Uncle Sam on pins and needles. He can never be entirely sure during certain seasons whether he will wake any day to find his supposed boundary marker where it was the night before. Especially is this true where the river approaches the Gulf of Mexico and where the accumulation of waters from its long drainage basin makes spring floods cut irresistibly across bends. Farms and ranches have thus been shifted over night from American to Mexican jurisdiction and vice versa.

In the rich alluvial valleys extending for miles above and below El Paso the river has had equally marked vagaries in the past, but changes are few now because of the control of flood waters only a short distance above the city by the huge Elephant Butte dam of the U. S. Reclamation service. From the city of El Paso northward for approximately twenty miles the Rio Grande forms the boundary theoretically, between Texas and New Mexico. This boundary is not the Rio Grande of today, however, but that of 1850 when the dividing line was supposedly settled for all time. It is the disagreement over the location of this 'Rio Grande of 1850' that has brought about the pending suit between the two states in the United States Supreme court. Texas contends that the old river bed lay near the western side of the five-mile-wide valley while [illegible] dary between the United States and Mexico. Cultivated fields reach this line at many points. Recently U. S. customs officials brought charges against a cotton farmer on the ground for importing cotton without a license. The charges raised in the minds of most readers a picture of a lawless farmer-smuggler bringing loads of "bootleg" cotton across the line under cover of darkness. As a matter of fact the farmer had inadvertently set his field fence some four feet south of the international line. When he harvested his crop he merely followed the entirely proper routine of all his farmer neighbors in picking ninety-nine one-hundredths of his cotton. But when he plucked the line from the row or two nearest the fence he ran foul of the federal customs laws and technically became a smuggler.

"It is in this valley from El Paso southward for some 60 miles that Uncle Sam, with Mexican co-operation will try the experiment of photographing his border from airplanes. It is believed that a photographic record of river and its nearby landmarks will be invaluable in the future. Any disagreements as to changes in the river can easily be checked up either by measuring from the locations shown in the picture-map or by snapping new pictures and comparing them with those of 1924."

Stories That Recall Others

All in the Way You Look at It.

Husband and wife were doing some Christmas shopping and were in a store buying some records for their phonograph. When they had decided on several pieces Mrs. said:

Regardless of several smiles, "Impromptu" was added to the selected few.

FRECKLES TO ORDER FOR BRITISH FLAPPERS

Artificial "sun kisses" are the latest essential for British flappers.

A few months ago a freckle was a flaw—to be rigorously exercised with lemon juice and peroxide. Today it is an asset. Dame Fashion now demands a pale, clear skin, relieved with a slight sprinkling of freckles, the idea being that a thrush's egg complexion super-imposed on a vampish contour makes for piquancy.

A beauty specialist, in the course of an interview, remarked—"Yes, the beauty spot has been ousted by freckles. Nature often places the freckles badly. Art puts them where they tell, and that is not in mass formation on a nose of classical outline [illegible] the face, [illegible] the color from tobacco brown to burnt sienna, the shade depending on the complexion background."

Ever in search of a freckle does not always go to a beauty shop for it. Many of the freckles proudly borne in London today have come out of small brothers' paintboxes, and are painted on by Eve herself.

BREAK IN MINERS' STRIKE EXPECTED SOON

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 28.—Union leaders said tonight the first break in the strike of 11,000 Pennsylvania Reading Coal and Iron company mine workers is expected at the Underwood colliery of the company, near Throop, tomorrow morning.

As a result of a vote taken by the Underwood strikers yesterday it was said at least 800 of the 1,200 employes would return to work Monday.

The men who are to resume work will meet near Olyphant and march to the colliery in a body. A detail of state troopers from the Wyoming barracks and a squad of deputy sheriffs with Sheriff Jim Reap will accompany the men to the mines.

Both Sheriff Reap and Capt. William A. Clark of the state police received requests from the general manager of the coal company to supply police protection to the workers and the company's property.

FARMER-CONSUMER LEAGUE PROTESTS WILLIAMS BILL

Washington, Dec. 28.—The Farmer-to-Consumer league announced today that it had filed protest with the president's agricultural commission against the proposed Capper Williams bill for agricultural relief.

The measure was described in the statement as "nothing more or less than a sugar-coated pill prepared in the interest of Chicago packers and New York middlemen." The statement added that "the packer, the commission merchant, produce broker, and the parasitic middlemen are given an equal opportunity in deciding what prices shall be paid to the farmer for his products."

The future of the Co-operative Marketing association is challenged by this bill, the statement asserted, recommending the Curtis-Aswell measure, providing for national organization, as the kind that will enable agriculture to defend itself "against exploitation and save itself from ruin by its exploiters."

LIKES AMERICA EVEN THOUGH ROBBED HERE

New York, Dec. 28.—The Countess Di Robilant, who was held up and robbed of jewels and cash amounting to $50,000 here on Dec. 17, sailed for Europe on the Olympic today. Her daughter, the Countess Iren Di Robilant, said tonight that her mother blamed no one for the robbery and that she "was most favorably impressed by America during her short stay."

Eleonora Duse Statue

In the Lombardian town of Vigevano, birthplace of Eleonora Duse, there was unveiled in the foyer of the Teatro Cagnomi a bronze statue by Signor Villa, the sculptor, to the Memory of the great actress. WEDDING

Austin—Goldberg

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham W. Silverberg of 6 Goldberg avenue, was the scene of a brilliant wedding, Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock when Ethel Goldberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goldberg of 4 Goldberg Ave., became the bride of Dr. James S. Austin of Brooklyn and New York city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon D. Austin of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The bridal party entered the living room of the home to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss Lillia Stockdale, pianist with violin accompaniment by Henry Briman and were united in marriage by Rev. Samuel Jacobson an intimate friend of the families, in the presence of over fifty relatives and friends. The ceremony was performed beneath a bower of palms, ferns and carnations. Floral decorations were used throughout the house.

The couple was attended by Mrs. Abraham W. Silverberg, matron of honor, the Misses Okra and Kate Austin of Brooklyn, N. Y., sisters of the groom and Miss Miriam Goldberg, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids and Bernard S. Austin of Brooklyn, N. Y., brother of the groom as best man.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white satin with old lace, her coronet veil being caught up with pearls and carrying a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Silverberg, matron of honor was gowned in blue beaded georgette. Miss Okra Austin in pale colored evening gown of the latest French model, Miss Kate Austin in an evening gown of peach color embroidered in silver roses and Miss Miriam Goldberg in American beauty velvet. The attendants of the bride carried shower bouquets of pink roses.

The gift of the groom to his bride was a triple string of pearls while the bride gave each of her maids silver vanity cases. The bride was the recipient of beautiful gifts including checks, silver, linen, cut glass, china, electric appliances and other articles for household use. Guests were present from Brooklyn and New York city, Washington, D. C., Detroit, Mich., Southbridge, Mass., Boston, Mass., Chesterfield and other nearby places.

Immediately following the wedding ceremony, a wedding supper was served to about 50 guests, Mr. Silverberg acting as toastmaster. After a few remarks he introduced Simon D. Austin, father of the groom, a prominent attorney in New York, and then called upon Max Handover of Norwich for a short response. Others who spoke briefly during the supper were Herman M. Balsban of New York city, Attorney Joseph B. Stein of Washington, D. C., brother-in-law of the bride, Attorney Bernard S. Austin of Brooklyn, N. Y., brother of the groom, Rev. Samuel Jacobson, Harry M. Land, Mr. Eisenberg, Aaron Gordon of Max Gordon & Son, Corp., of this city, and Aaron Arnowitz of Chesterfield, grandfather of the bride. Many telegrams from friends in all parts of the country were read, wishing the couple happiness in life.

During the remainder of the evening a reception was held, the bride and groom being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Abraham W. Silverberg and the Misses Kate and Olga Austin. Dancing was enjoyed until about 10 o'clock when the bridal party left on their wedding tour which will include stops at Detroit, Mich., St. Paul, Minn., and Canadian cities. On their return they will be at home at 3016 East 3d street, Brooklyn, N. Y., after February 1st.

The bride's traveling suit was of tan color, trimmed in fur and she wore a hat to match.

The groom is prominent in medical circles in New York and Brooklyn and is a graduate of the Brooklyn College of Pharmacy and the National University of Sciences, Illinois. Dr. Austin is president of the Academy Pharmacies, Inc., of New York city and is associate dean of the College of Pharmacy, National University of Sciences and a member of the advisory board of the university. He is a member of the International Alliance of Physicians and Surgeons and of the New York State Pharmaceutical society, also the Culture club and Health club of New York city. He is also a member of John Hancock lodge, A. F. and A. M., and the Knights of Pythias and is a member of Delta Sigma Theta and Omicron Sigma Phi fraternities.

The bride is a graduate of Norwich Free Academy and a member of Phi Kappa Epsilon sorority of that school. She has been living at home since her graduation from high school.

The couple have many friends in this city and in New York who wish them every joy in their married life.

Carvalho—Rogers

Joseph Carvalho of 39 Talman street and Miss Anna Rogers of 39 1-2 North Main street were united in marriage Friday afternoon by Justice of the Peace John H. Light Co. The bride is the daughter of Manuel and Mary Silva Rogers.

NEW TRAFFIC SIGNS TO BE ERECTED BY POLICE COMMISSIONERS TODAY

The erection of the new traffic signs will be started this (Monday) morning by the board of police commissioners. Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney, chairman of the police committee, said Sunday evening that all the traffic signs will be in position by Wednesday night. The new rules will go into effect January 1st, (Thursday) and will be strictly enforced by the police.

Signs, three feet by two feet, with black letters on a yellow background, have been prepared to designate the one way streets. One of these signs will be placed at the Norwich Savings society corner to designate Main street as a one way street going west and another sign will be placed at the junction of Washington square and Main street and will read, "Do Not Enter Here" this diverting east bound traffic from Main street to either Church street or Water street. There will also be signs for Water street, designating it as a one way street, going east, from its junction with Commerce street to its junction with Shetucket street.

The "no parking" signs and signs designating time limits for parking will also be in black lettering on a yellow background. The "no parking" signs have already been attached to telegraph poles on Franklin street.

The new traffic rules have been published in booklet form and a supply has been placed at police headquarters where copies may be secured by drivers.

AUTO TRUCKS FITTED WITH SNOW PLOWS

To cope with the winter's snow storms and keep open Connecticut's motor transportation routes, the state highway department has a fleet of 143 heavy automobile trucks fitted with snow plows and scrapers ready for action. Supplementing these are a number of plows and scrapers which can be attached to other equipment in case of emergency.

An aggregate of 1,800 miles of roads must be kept free from snow blockades in Connecticut and a comprehensive organization is essential to prevent tie-ups in the event of heavy storms.

By co-operating with the Hartford office of the U. S. weather bureau the highway department is advised of approaching snow storms. This information is transmitted to the supervisor of each of the eleven districts into which the state has been divided for this work. Each district is divided into sections with foremen in direct charge. The snow removal organization is directed to begin its work when the snow reaches a depth of three inches. The plows and scrapers are put into action and the roadways are cleared to a width of from 24 to 40 feet.

Each district supervisor is required to report to the Hartford headquarters at least once a day, giving the condition of the roads in his territory, so that travel can be directed from the Hartford office. Requests for information invariably descend on the department in large numbers during heavy storms, and the policy is to give the information to the newspapers at once, so that the public may be kept informed during serious storms.

An idea of the growth of the state's mileage may be obtained from the fact that in 1920 a total of 800 miles of roadway was kept cleared during the winter, while at present it is necessary to keep open more than twice that mileage.

CENTRAL BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE PRESENT PAGEANT

There was a good sized attendance at the Central Baptist church Sunday evening when members of the Young People's society presented the Christmas pageant Why the Chimes Rang. The pageant was given in pantomime and was from the story by Raymond Macdonald Alden, arranged by Martha Race.

The cast numbered about twenty people, assisted by the organist of the church, Miss Louise Fuller, and an augmented choir led by the violin. Miss Mabel Herberg read the story as the pageant progressed through the two scenes. The first scene was an out-of-door snow scene, the second a scene in the interior of the cathedral. Stage settings and scenery were in the period of the pageant and almost all the costumes which added so effectively to the beauty of the pageant were loaned by the Wheeler school of New London. They were designed by Mrs. Norah Whitelaw.

The pageant was one of the most beautiful ever presented by the young people of the church.

AUTO, CRANKED IN GEAR, SMASHED PEARL ST. HYDRANT

Accidently leaving his automobile in gear when it stalled on Pearl street, near the junction of that street with Asylum street about 7.30 o'clock Sunday evening, Cornelius Hamil of No. 61 Spring Garden avenue, stepped in front of it and cranked it. The engine started and so did the machine. Mr. Hamil managed to get out of its way as it shot ahead. It hit the hydrant opposite the Pearl street school breaking the hydrant off short.

A small sized geyser shot up from the broken hydrant. The water department was notified and Foreman Michael O'Neil and water department employees shut off the flow of water. A new hydrant will have to be installed.

MANSFIELD INSTITUTIONS TO ASK APPROPRIATIONS

Appropriations approaching two million dollars for the extension and development of two state institutions in the town of Mansfield will be requested of the incoming session of the legislature. For the care of the feeble minded a statement requesting $1,099,060 for the Mansfield state training school and hospital has been submitted to the state board of finance by Dr. Charles T. Lamoure, superintendent of the institution. Increase of accommodations for students at the Connecticut Agricultural college is contemplated in plans of the trustees of that institution calling for an aggregate appropriation of $660,000 filed with the finance board by President Charles C. Beach.

The accident happened near the old Adams tavern in Norwich Town.

THE UNIVERSAL GIFT TO THE WORLD

The annual Christmas service of Mt. Calvary Baptist church was held at the church Sunday evening when a special Christmas sermon was given by the pastor, Rev. G. G. McGee. Rev. Mr. McGee took for his topic The Universal Gift to the World. In part he said:

The time was ripe for the birth of the Christ Child; even though there was no room for Him in the inn. The then known world was at peace and there was quietness throughout the Roman provinces. The lowly stable was waiting to give the promised Messiah a place to lay His Kingly Head. God had just the place prepared to shelter His Son that He desired.

In the quiet of the night, the Angelic message broke the stillness of a peaceful slumber to herald the good news and glad tidings, that "this day is born unto you a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord," and this joy shall be to all peoples. The shepherds saw the heavenly sight and heard the message of the angelic host. Filled with both joy and fright they stole across the moonlit plains to the little Divinely honored manger in the city of David. There they found the babe Jesus. It was glorious to behold the infant Messiah. Tradition would describe His countenance as being bathed in stardust and garnished with sparkles of light from the face of God the Father.

The Wise Men and the star attest the fact that the Messiah has come. "For we have seen His star and are come to worship Him."

The star served as a compass to guide the pilgrims of the east to the feet Divinely honored town in all the world. The star led the Magi to the King's palace in Jerusalem, quietly entering the city, they inquired of the King: "Where is He that is born King of the Jews?"

The star was a visible sign for the whole world, to let all nations know that a Saviour was born to save the world from eternal peridition. The wise men from the east were dumbfounded to find that the Jews themselves, living near the incident had not overheard or seen the wonderful Kingly babe. The Jews were equally surprised to see that people over a thousand miles away knew more about their infant King that had had come to rule them, than they did themselves, etc. But before the Jews could ask the wise men why they were so interested in one born to be their king, the wise men exclaimed, "We have seen His star and are come to worship Him."

This is the beginning of the Gentile acceptance of Christ as their Lord and Master. As the wise men continued their journey, the star led them to Bethlehem. In a short time they were brought face to face with the One that was to be the light of all men. There they saw God manifest in the flesh. And we are happy at last to believe that God had great love for us and made it known by sending Jesus Christ to suffer and to die for our well-being and happiness. Since He has made this magnificent gift to us, we have only to love, trust and obey Him. Jesus came to satisfy our chief desire. And when we behold His face and see upon His hands the scars of the conflict through which He passed in this world; that He might bring us to his holy habitation, we will understand better than we do now how much God loved the lost race of man in giving His Son to the shame and agony of the cross, that He might bring many sons to the glory and blessedness of heaven. Then we will understand that it is infinite gain to win Christ at whatever cost, but that it is infinite loss to win the world and lose the soul. May we not forget that Christmas means more than the outward gaity displayed by the world at this season.

Christ is born not only King of the Jews, but King of our lives. We know it because our hearts have felt the impulse of His spirit and now we live in Him.

SAW BLAZING COAL AND THOUGHT AUTO WAS ON FIRE

Shortly before 11 o'clock Sunday night the fire department was called out for a supposed fire on Pearl street. A resident in the neighborhood saw what she thought was an automobile on fire near the school house. A few minutes later the fire department was on the way.

When the firemen arrived they found that the fire was nothing more or less than a coal fire lighted by the water department employes to thaw out the ground around a hydrant that had been smashed earlier in the evening by an automobile.

One of the water department's machines was standing between the blazing coal pile and the home of the person who was responsible for the sending in of the call. The flames from the pile of coal gave her the impression that the automobile was on fire.

$20,000 FIRE SWEEPS WATERBURY BUSINESS BLOCK

Waterbury, Dec. 28.—Damage estimated at $20,000 was caused this morning in a fire which swept the Xanthos Candy company and Owl Cafeteria at 67-69 East Main street. Slight damage was also done to the Palais Royal restaurant which occupies the second floor but the timely work of the fire companies kept the blaze from spreading above the first floor and the basement except in one place. The fire is believed to have been due to furnace trouble.

The fire was reported at 5.20 o'clock and by the time the firemen arrived the first floor and basement were in flames. During the course of the fire fighting the floor of both restaurant and candy store collapsed. The building is owned by T. Frank Hayes, of 118 Prospect street and the store and restaurant are occupied by Anthony and Theodore Xanthaky of 33 East Main street and James Xanthaky of Brooklyn N. Y.

Subterranean Ice

A steam shovel, working on a new highway, near Reno, Nev., uncovered a huge block of ice under the ground, measuring 60 feet in length, 20 feet in width and 10 feet in thickness. It is believed that originally the ice, which is estimated to be about forty years old, was a field of snow on the mountain side above, and was compressed into its present form by an avalanche of earth, rocks and trees.

Tires Collect Relics

Some automobilists using the Pottstown, Pa., pike have discovered that their tires are Indian relic collectors. One man found two unusually fine specimens of flint arrowheads in a tire, and another unknowingly became the possessor of a tomahawk head in the same manner.

EASTERN CONN. INTERSCHOLASTIC FOOTBALL TITLE WON BY CHAPMAN TECH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Dec. 28.—After a lapse of one year, the Eastern Connecticut interscholastic football title has come to this city to roost. Chipman Tech by going through a league season of five victories and but a single defeat gained honors by consistent effort throughout the past season. It marked the continuation of winning this coveted honor after losing out to Westerly last season. Chapman Tech has dominated the pedestal of the league for two years previous to the time when Westerly came through with flying colors last year.

Confining her attention mostly upon the efforts in league competition, Chapman Tech came close to recording one of its most successful seasons. Only the disgracing defeat suffered at the hands of the Windham High school eleven tended towards thwarting any attempts made to establish a record which would prove to be among the best turned in by the Red and Black machine. So in reviewing the past activities of the past activities of the Chapman Technical High school football team, more emphasis is being paid to Tech's efforts against the teams in the Eastern Connecticut league rather than contests with teams outside of the league.

Some consider Chapman fortunate enough to come out a league winner. It was a strange happening, so unusual in football that it is called to the attention of the reader to this fact. Westerly seemed to have a team that was about par with the championship Chapman Tech outfit, but the failure of this eleven to develope along the championship calibre line early in the season was one of the direct causes of the loss of the Eastern Connecticut league title. True enough Westerly improved considerably over the early season performance, but the loss to Chapman Tech at New London by a 9 to 0 score, and when the team from Rhode Island was held to a scoreless tie by Norwich Academy at Westerly, the last chance for a championship faded with the sun. Little was it realized at the time that the tie score with the academy would hold up Westerly's chances for the title, but that is exactly what happened and it was merely a fortune of fate, which smiled upon the efforts of the Whaling city eleven.

The rules of the Eastern Connecticut league do not provide for a play-off of games tied. Whether this would be fair to one team or another is unknown, but a tie score through the season is most likely to hold up any team's chances for a championship and thus furnish a repetition of this year's activities. It seems as though the officers of the Eastern Connecticut league should in some manner have this important point covered to the fullest satisfaction of all teams concerned, for it is reported that Westerly was not at all satisfied with the ultimate outcome of the past season of Eastern Connecticut league football, and that some definite steps should be taken towards clarifying the exact status of this important point.

If there was any game which tested the strength of the Tech team it was the opening contest of the season with the Western A. C. Although the Westerns were handicapped by lack of practice, yet their play was easily three touchdowns better than that of Chapman Tech. However more team play furnished a background of resistance which the Western A. C. was able to punch but once. For that reason the Westerns were not able to tally more than once, although after this team was organized there would be little doubt that a larger score would result.

If Chapman Tech's hopes for a league championship were based upon the form exhibited in the game with Stonington High on the following Saturday, then it must be admitted that the Red and Black machine would finish no better than third or possibly fourth. Stonington finishing in fourth place as it did proved to be the nemesis of the Red and Black. They gave hopes of expectancy in the games to come, the form shown against Chipman Tech was the most promising that was ever exhibited by a team that dated back a number of years ago. Stonington outplayed Tech, but failure to take advantage of opportunities furnished Tech a chance and they did not fail in putting the oval over the line for a score.

But Chapman Tech seemed to improve with the succeeding days of practice and by the time the game with Norwich Free Academy rolled around, Tech was ready. Effort was centered about this game with rich rewards in the future following this game if it was returned propitious to the Tech cause. Tech was two touchdowns better than its Norwich rivals, gaining a decided victory and sending the Red and White into oblivion.

However the victory over Norwich did not lessen the preparation which attended the practice sessions which followed in anticipation for the contest with Westerly high on the following week. It was the crucial test of the year, with both teams primed for a battle which was to decide the destinies of these teams on the grid iron in the weeks to come. Chapman Tech had to but remove this obstacle which loomed up as a possible lugubrious aftermath to what promised to be a successful season. Westerly invaded the Whaling City with all its implements of warfare, needed to make the raid a successful one. Chapman Tech sent Westerly back to its native haunts, a bickering and scowling animal who was robbed of his very existence. Chapman Tech was master, yes complete master of the "little four" which made up the league personnel. There was no doubt that Tech would be an ultimate winner, a coveted place in football's hall of fame regardless of the prominence of the schools or leagues. Tech players were buoyant, nothing could separate their aspirations of a championship team. All eyes were focused upon Tech after this game.

Remaining games were looked forward with victories. However after annexing its fourth league victory at the expense of Stonington, Windham high with its snorous howling state team, added an easy victory at the expense of Tech tending to disprove that Eastern Connecticut league football was not of the high grade that it should be.

Chapman Tech's aspirations were realized for the league championship in the next league contest with Norwich Free Academy. A 13 to 7 victory gave the Tech eleven their championship which could neither be questioned nor hoped to be so, they were crowned the 1924 victors of the league although a game with Westerly was still on the schedule to be played.

Chapman Tech nearly slipped through the season in league games without a defeat but Westerly spoiled the record which in league contests up until this point had been unbesmirched. It was a poignant defeat for Tech to suffer, for it showed up Westerly as a team which improved with each game to attain its highest efficiency in the closing of the season. It was either this Chapman Tech was in poor playing condition that way.

OHIO STATE COACH SAYS LEAVE FOOTBALL RULES ALONE

Columbus, O., Dec. 28 (By the A. P.)—Except for a few minor changes the football rules should be left strictly alone for the 1925 season in the opinion of L. W. St. John, athletic director at Ohio State.

"The game never was more satisfactory," he said tonight as he departed for New York to attend the annual meeting of the American Association of Football Coaches. The game is balanced delicately between the defense and the offense and is pretty well balanced between the forward pass and the rushing game."

Dr. J. W. Wilce, director of football at Ohio State, who is secretary-treasurer of the Football Coaches' association, is known to be substantially in accord with Director St. John's views. Dr. Wilce is now on the Pacific coast to attend one of the New Year's intersectional games.

A minor change suggested by Director St. John, that is not known here to be championed in other quarters, is a suggestion to make the goal posts ten feet higher and the cross bar six inches deeper. Such a provision, he pointed out, would aid officials and spectators in determining whether kicks at goal were successful.

Another change favored by Director St. John is to set the kick-off back to the 40-yard line. "No one cares particularly," he said, "about seeing a team kick off over the defending team's goal line. Spectators always like to see the ball run back."

He is opposed, however, to a proposal made in some section, for a restoration of the kick off tee, the tee, he held, is an artifical factor. If it is legitimate to use it for the kick-off there is no valid reason, he contended, for not using a tee on a place kick.

He also favored making the rule on clipping read to inflict to penalty from the spot of the foul. He would eliminate the rule requiring padding shoulders as thoroughly on the outside as on the inside of the jersey and would do away with the penalty for use of the flying tackle as being a dead letter.

The Ohio state director would indorse a suggestion that Rule 18, Section 3, be changed to read the old penalty of the ball going to the opposing team at that spot be restored. He also would make the pistol shot end the game or period without waiting for the referee's whistle.

Dr. Wilce is known to favor a clarification of the rule covering the use of the screen pass. As used by a number of teams last fall, he has said the play verged on the illegal because the rules did not cover the point thoroughly with regard to undue interference.

THREE FOOTBALL GAMES SCHEDULED FOR NEW YEAR'S

San Francisco, Dec. 28 (By the A. P.).—Six undefeated football teams will clash in three intersectional games in the far west on New Year's day.

At Passdena, Cal., Knute Rockne's "Four Horsemen" and other trained performers from Notre Dame will close a spectacular season of undiluted victory by meeting Glenn Warner's unbeaten Stanford eleven. At Berkeley, Andy Smith's University of California Bears, undefeated in five years, will face Lou Loung's University of Pennsylvania team, one of the few unconquered outfits of the east. Over at Honolulu the University of Colorado, champions of the Rocky Mountain conference, will share the gridiron with the strong University of Hawaii eleven.

While Notre Dame is odds-on favorite in the wagering, according to all reports most observers look for a close game. Stanford supporters, though not optimistic, hope that the trickiness of Rockne and the "Horsemen" may be upset by the power of the Cardinal defense and that Warner may pry open a few strategies of his own.

California and Pennsylvania are considered more evenly matched, and betting is reported hesitant.

There is little basis of comparison for the Honolulu game. Colorado has won the Rocky Mountain title for two seasons. Hawaii has cleaned up everything in sight this year.

Already two east-west games have been played in Los Angeles this month, and the west, represented by the University of Southern California, took them both. Syracuse and Missouri were the victims.

PENN FOOTBALL PLAYERS ENGAGE IN ONE HOUR PRACTICE

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 28 (By the A. P.).—Bundled in sweaters, but not disheartened by the coldest weather of the present winter season, the undefeated University of Pennsylvania football players, en route for their New Year's game with California's Golden Bears, engaged in a lively one-hour's practice near the union station here this afternoon.

Preceded by their 35-piece band, the Quakers, their trainers and Coach Lou Young passed the ball, wrestled and jumped about while a thorough signal drill was under way. Every player, with the exception of Joe Willson, tackle, and Clark Craig, end, pronounced themselves as more than fit and anxious for the battle with California. Craig and Willson are out of lineup with injuries.

A punting duel is expected by Coach Young when the teams meet, he remarked during the drill.

"We expect a very hard game," Coach Young said. "Andy Smith is a great coach and he plays about the same kind of a game we play—a kicking game. It will be a battle between punters, as both the Bears and Quakers have a wonderful defense. Penn's 20-yard line has been crossed only twice this season, and both plays started back of the line. One was a forward pass play."

Cold weather has impeded practice somewhat since the team entrained at Philadelphia, according to the trainers.

Hobin-Bosisio Fight Draw.

Milan, Italy, Dec. 28.—A 15-round bout for the welterweight championship of Europe was fought tonight between the Belgian, Piet Hobin and the Italian Bosisio. The referee called it a draw. Hobin is the titleholder.

KAPLAN MEETS KRAMER IN THE TITLE FINALS

New York, Dec. 28.—Flistic activities this week will erase the only question mark left in the list of champions when Danny Kramer of Philadelphia and Louis (Kid) Kaplan of Meriden, Conn., meet for 15 rounds in Madison Square Garden for the featherweight title on Friday night.

This crown, since being swept from the head of the failing Johnny Kilbane by Eugene Criqui of France on June 2, 1923, in this city, rested on that of Johnny Dundee, only to be set aside when the Italian admitted that he was unable to make the weight again. Then it was snatched up by the New York state athletic commission to be awarded to the survivor of a tournament built around six contenders and two alternates.

Kaplan outpointed Babby Garcia of Camp Holabird, Md., in the preliminaries and on the same night Kramer eliminated Mike Dundee of Rock Island, Ills., and Jose Lombardo of Panama conquered Lew Paluso of Salt Lake City. In the semi-finals Kramer drew a bye and Kaplan met Lombardo, knocking out the Isthmian in four rounds. Kramer has had six weeks in which to prepare for the final test, Kaplan only three.

Criqui lost his championship to Johnny Dundee just eight weeks after he won it from Kilbane in 1923.

RECORD ENTRY FOR DAVIS CUP EXPECTED

New York, Dec. 28.—Early interest in the 1925 tennis competition for the Davis cup indicates that there will be a record entry list, according to the United States Lawn Tennis association. Switzerland is the second nation to make known its decision to play its third season in the international tests. Ireland's entry was announced some weeks ago. Last year 24 nations, including the United States in the role of defender, participated.

In the past two seasons Switzerland has played in five ties, winning three and losing two. In those ties 25 matches were played of which the Swiss players won 14 and lost 11. In the 1924 matches Switzerland won from Austria at Vienna in the second round, but was defeated by Czechoslavakia at Prague in June.

MUST FIGHT RENAULT OR GIBBONS, SAYS FIRPO

Paris, Dec. 28.—Luis Firpo, who arrived in Paris last week, on a European tour, reiterated today that he certainly would not fight in Europe until he could meet either Jack Renault or Tom Gibbons.

The Argentine heavyweight has taken quarters in the Montmartre. After a whirlwind tour of the city, he remarked: "The Montmartre atmosphere reminds me of the Pampas. I am surrounded by compatriots, who instead of escorting me to the Versailles Palace, the Eiffel Tower and the Velodrome d'Hiver, which is finer than Madison Square Garden."

Firpo will leave on Wednesday for London.

CROSBY FANS DISAPPOINTED; BULKELEY FAILS TO APPEAR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Dec. 28.—Due to some misunderstanding between the Bulkeley and Crosby high school management, Crosby high expected the Bulkeley basketball team to play in that city on Friday December 26. With a large crowd waiting for the game to start, Bulkeley temporarily disbanded for the holidays did not hear of the game which Crosby had Bulkeley on her slate for. Consequently the game had to be called off with a large crowd being forced to leave the high school gymnasium in a disappointed mood.

With five Crosby hoopsters ready to atone for a defeat received in football, the game which the Crosby authorities thought to be scheduled for Friday had to be called off. There is no mention of a game with Crosby High on the Bulkeley schedule which was recently let out for publication by Manager Arthur J. Shugrue. The date Bulkeley had with Crosby was on March 14, and an error that was so noticeable in dates as the one committed seems unlikely to be the cause of misunderstanding as to the proximity of the dates the game was scheduled for originally.

Either the Bulkeley or the Crosby high managements are responsible for the slight mixup which it it happens many more times will leave the two teams without the support that they should have. Two years ago it is recalled that Bulkeley arrived at Waterbury a day before the game was slated, anyway that is the way the Crosby management stated in the newspapers, although the contract held by Bulkeley read that a game to be played one day before the Crosby management made arrangements. Here was another case of mismanagement, which shows that managers of teams do not keep in touch with each other if a game is to be played by two teams in a week or so.

HUMOROUS CHAT BETWEEN TWO FOOTBALL DEVOTEES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Dec. 28.—A humorous chat which was held between two local devotees of the football sport and which was related a short time later seems to throw some light upon the reason of the refusal of several high school teams in this section of the state to play Bulkeley.

One of the group seemed to be a backer of Chapman Tech while another a former grad of Bulkeley. The conversation as related to writer of the article ran as follows:

Bulkeley follower: Why did Chapman Tech cross Bulkeley off her schedule?

Chapman Tech follower: I don't blame Tech for doing so. For even though the so called four horsemen of High school fame in this state of Bulkeley graduate, you can bet that Coach William R. Canty will have an equally strong combination to take the places of Henkle, Rice, Shedd and Barry. Already the Bulkeley mentor is busy signing up Don Burr, Paul Revere, Lady Godiva and the Prince of Wales at quarterback. Try and beat that selection of horsemen.

Wanderers vs. Gold Bugs

The Baltic Wanderers basketball team will play the fast Gold Bugs from South Kingston at Baltic Friday evening in what is expected to be a good game as the two clubs have proven such teams as the Woodbines of Pawtucket and other fast teams in Rhode Island.

EMPS WIN EASILY FROM JEWETT CITY FIVE

The "Y" Emps won its third victory of the season Saturday afternoon when they succeeded in defeating the snappy Olympic Five from Jewett City by the score of 35 to 16. Despite the wide margin in the score the wide margin in the score, the game proved full of interest and was fast throughout. Moody the new addition to the Emps lineup this season, is showing up well in center and proved to be the star cager of the afternoon. Guillet secured most of the points for the visitors. The lineups:

Y. M. C. A. Emps:		Jewetty City:
Hollender	G	Sawicki
Falcone	G	Parkhurst
Moody	C	Guillett
Pascouche	F	Sweet
Brauman	F	Eickelburg

Referee — Howard Ludlow — Emp. substitutes—Barber, Stephano, Bergerson, Visitors, Davis, Skoczles, Sharkey.

Coach Owsley's Reply.

New Haven, Dec. 28.—Jack Owsley, coach of the Yale football scrubs, and a halfback on the Yale teams of 1902, 1903 and 1904, commenting tonight on reports that he would replace Bob Folwell as coach of the Navy football eleven, said:

"I have been in communication with the Navy athletic authorities but there has been nothing done, so far as I know."

Spalla Knocks Out Williams.

Turin, Italy, Dec. 28—Erminio Spalla, the Italian fighter who holds the European heavyweight championship, today knocked out an American negro, Max Williams, in the first round. The end came thirty seconds after the fight started.

SPORTING NOTES

Harold Abrahams and Eric Liddell, Olympic champions and Britain's most famous sprinters, may appear in competition next spring at the Pennsylvania relay carnival. Abrahams, the Cambridge all-around star, won the Olympic 100-metre dash, beating four American aces, while Liddell captured the 400-metre run at Paris in world's record time. Liddell, who is studying for the ministry in Scotland, competed at the Pennsylvania meet last spring but was defeated in 100 and 200-yard dashes.

According to unofficial estimates, $10,000,000 was distributed in 1924 among turfmen in the form of stakes and purses for thoroughbred racing in Canada and the United States. Of this sum, it is estimated that close to $2,000,000 each was distributed in New York and Maryland, with that figure exceeded in Kentucky, historic stronghold of the sport. Canada is credited with having disbursed $1,000,000.

Alan Woodring, former Syracuse university and Olympic champion at 200 metres in 1920, will make a renewed endeavor to come back during the coming indoor season. Wearing the Millrose A. A. colors, Woodring will enter most of the big meets, his first start being in the 250-metre sprint special in the Finnish-American A. C. games at Madison Square Garden January 6.

One of the countrys' leading football authorities has come forth with another suggestion to the football rules committee. According to the present rules, if a penalty is inflicted against the defending team, the offending team is given the number of yards called for by the penalty and a first down at the point where the ball rests. The new suggestion is to give the offending team the yardage without the first down unless the ball advances beyond a point which would automatically give the offending team a first down. It is likely this suggestion will be given some consideration by the legislators when they meet in January.

Although official announcements regarding the Giants' journey abroad after the 1925 playing season closes have not been made, it is understood that present plans call for the chartering of an entire ship for the baseball party which will be led by Manager John McGraw. After a series of games in England, the itinerary turns to South America with visits scheduled at Rio De Janeiro Buenos Aires and Montevideo.

Andrew O. McGarrett is either a champion or a first class contender at his own game. This year he has plodded 1500 miles to push a golf ball into a cup 5400 times, using 27,640 strokes an average of 92.1 to an 18-hole round. He is 60 years old.

X-Raying Coal

Considerable progress has been made recently, particularly in Great Britain, in the commercial application of X-ray analysis. This comparatively new development, concerning which considerable has been published in this country in the last year or two, is being applied both for testing of metals and for the analysis of coal in Great Britain. The method is an adaptation of the X-ray stereoscope technique, the samples examined being first submitted to some preliminary treatment to "bring out" the constituents, such, for example, as treatment with pyridine to dissolve out soluble portions of the coal. In this way the mineral portion of the specimen are clearly shown.

Why Forest Fires?

Of the 556 forest fires that took place in the Adirondacks and Catskills last year 72 were due to careless smokers, 38 to locomotives, 82 to fishermen, 70 to campers, 29 to hunters, 28 to berry pickers, 18 to lightning and 17 to incendiary causes. One of the worst of the lot—and one of the worst in the history of the Catskill region—took place in July in the Shawangunk Mountains and was started by the pickers of the famous Shawangunk blueberries.

Universality

UNIVERSAL telephone service must be universal in scope—it must reach anyone, anywhere. But it must be universal also in cost—it must be within the financial reach of everyone, everywhere.

Years of research have been required to provide the telephone instruments, switchboards, wire and supplementary apparatus which afford inter-communication between housewives, shopkeepers, farmers and millions of other American telephone users.

But these facilities do not in themselves make America's telephone service a universal service. Telephone engineers have spent years of additional study in order to build, maintain and operate this nation-wide system so economically that the cost of service may be kept at all times well below its value to the telephone user.

Upon the two fundamentals of extensiveness in scope and economy in cost the Bell System has built the most universal telephone service in the world.

FOOTBALL COACHES EXPECT LIVELY SESSION AT ANNUAL MEETING TODAY

New York, Dec. 28 (By the A. P.)—Discussion of football rules, with the probability that a number of concrete recommendations for changes will grow out of recent views voiced by coaches and officials, promises to be an outstanding feature of the gathering of various athletic groups and interests here this week.

The opening gridiron forum, where sharply opposing views on the forward pass and other features of the gridiron sport may come into conflict, takes place tomorrow when the Football Coaches Association of America holds its annual meeting. This will be followed on Tuesday by the annual session of the National Collegiate Athletic association, when E. K. Hall, chairman of the football rules committee, will file his annual report and shed considerable light, it is expected, on the position of this governing body. The National Amateur Athletic Federation, likewise bringing together athletic interests from all parts of the country, also is scheduled to hold its meeting tomorrow.

Though some drastic changes in the football code have been advocated in discussion by coaches recently, it appears likely that no radical changes will be endorsed by the coaches as a whole, most of whom believe the game is fundamentally sound in its present form.

Agitation started recently by H. M. Gore, Massachusetts Aggies coach, against the forward pass as a "menace" to the game in its present usage, likely will be reflected in the meeting. Gore has received support from several sources, but on the other hand such prominent figures as Bob Zuppke, Illinois coach; Fielding H. Yost, of Michigan; Knute Rockne, of Notre Dame, and Bill Roper, of Princeton have come out in opposition to any "tinkering" with the aerial game. Eastern football officials yesterday went on record as opposed to any material changes in the pass.

Principal among the changes which appear likely to receive endorsement, however, is one placing the ball back to the 40-yard line for kickoff instead of midfield, as under the present code. Other suggestions more or less widely favored include elimination of the run after the recovery of a fumble, elimination of the run after receiving or intercepting a forward pass, elimination of all optional features of penalties, elimination of the point after touchdown, and elimination of the award of first down on an offside penalty except in cases where the penalty gives the offensive team the ball beyond the point to be gained.

The N. C. A. A., among other matters, will consider phases of an athletic educational program, the aftermath of the 1924 Olympic games and the development of other features of its work with college sports, including track and swimming championship meets under its jurisdiction in 1925.

Major John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the Western Conference; A. A. Stagg, football coach at Chicago; Dr. R. Tait Mackenzie, of the University of Pennsylvania; and Dr. John Brown, athletic secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; will be among the principal speakers.

C., and continue through the week.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

Watch for the programs that are scheduled to be shown at the Broadway theater. You'll wonder and be surprised at the great shows of B. F. Keith vaudeville and Paramount pictures that are to be shown starting today. Here is the Keith program for today.

Danny Duggan is an exhibition dancer and as such has gained world fame. He hails from New England and has over 100 tournaments in these states. Dancing author ties claim that his work compares favorably with an exponent of ball room dancing and because of this originality has greater value. Duggan is young, graceful and artful. He understands the poetry of motion and appreciates the fact that rhythm is absolutely essential to poetry. His company consists of an expert young woman dancer and a xylophonist.

James Reynolds, a loose leaf from the legend of laughs offers a real act.

Follows more fun with Harry Stewart and Co., with Miss Mazie Berto and Minnie Desmond in Some Party, a meritorious snappy farce comedy.

Miss Marcelle offers singing southern syncopated songs.

The Murray Bros., the bounding bouncers, are artists on the trampoline and is comedy casted.

Thomas Meighan in Peter Clark Macfarlane's Tongues of Flame, produced by Joseph Henabery.

Bessie Love, and Eileen Percy head a cast which includes Cyril Ring, Burton Churchill, Nick Thompson, John Milliern and others.

It is such pictures as Tongues of Flame that keep the fans' faith in the silent drama.

Digging for buried treasure on one of the islands of the Pacific!

Caskets with gold doubloons, pieces of eight, duros, Napoleons, rubies, pearls, bracelets of hammered gold, rare silks sewn with seed pearls, now faded and tarnished, antiquated weapons and chains of silver were dug up in one grand discovery of buried treasure recently upon lonely Santa Cruz island which lies forty miles off the coast of California.

All the outdoor scenes for Peter Pan were filmed on Santa Cruz island. A company of over one hundred people, including the featured players, Betty Bronson, Ernest Torrence, Cyril Chadwick, Virginia Brown Faire and Anna May Wong, accompanied Mr. Brenon on location. Roy Pomeroy aided Mr. Brenon in the production.

Peter Pan, with an all-star cast of players appearing in support of the principals, pens soon at the Broadway theater.

Breed Theater

From every walk of life they come into pictures, some act, some to direct and some to engage in the technical end. That is brought home forcibly in His Hour, Elinor Glyn's latest production which is the feature at the Breed theater today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

A bonafide Prince, a General who actually served as aide de camps to the former Grand Duke Nicholas; a Duchess born to the title and numerous other brilliant members of the old Russian court circle all play in His Hour which is a Metro-Goldwyn picture.

Royalty appears in role that are really a part of them, wearing the jewels and ermine to which they were so long accustomed and which were so melodramatically snatched from them when the Soviet came into power during the World war.

His Hour, which Mrs. Glyn wrote while visiting the royal family in St. Petersburg, is a colorful drama of love and pathos and is brimful of the brilliance always to be found in Mrs. Glyn's writings.

The two featured players of this vivid production are those Mrs. Glyn has selected as the screen's most romantic lovers, Aileen Pringle and John Gilbert. His Hour was directed by King Vidor and is a Louis B. Mayer presentation.

The Pathe news and a roaring two part comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

Strong on Screen Despite 68 Years

Still going strong in the picturization of important character parts of feature photoplays despite his 68 years, is the much-to-be-envied achievement of Bert Woodruff, who has a highly vital part in Sol Lesser's production of "The Mine With the Iron Door," a screen version of Harold Bell Wright's latest and best selling novel, which is the chief attraction for next three days at the Palace theatre.

In "The Mine With the Iron Door," Woodruff has the role of one of two old gold mining prospectors who furnish many a chuckle and many a hearty laugh and are pictured with all the deftness of Mr. Wright's facile pen.

Bert Woodruff was born in 1856 in Peoria, Ill., and educated there. His first stage work was in minstrel, and then came vaudeville. His first screen work was under the direction of D. W. Griffith in "Intolerance," and then came character parts in "Jim Bledso," "Daddy," "The Isle of Lost Ships," "Children of the Dust," "Flowing Gold" and "The Sea Hawk."

Fred E. Hilton for four years secretary of the Brockton Chamber of Commerce, has announced his resignation to take effect March 1, 1925.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

Good Night

Now fades the sun, and one by one
The stars gleam soft and fair;
No robin sings, no swallow wings
Its eager flight in air.

But only silent dews distill,
To fall in fairy rain;
And only whispering breezes thrill
The hush of grove and plain.

The lily slumbers on the lake,
Where not a ripple stirs;
The hare lies crouched amid the brake,
The partridge 'neath the firs.

And down the lawn the roses droop
Their crimson and their snow;
And poppies hide their scarlet pride
And wait the hour to blow.

Good night! good night! the moon will light
The east before the dawn,
The stars arise to gem the skies
Where these have journed on.

Good night! and sweetest dreams be thine
Through all their shining way,
Till darkness goes, and bird and rose
With rapture greet the day.

—Edna Dean Proctor.

Lines to a Bear Cub

Little black Deceiver,
Circling 'round our fire,
Amateur pretender,
Funny little liar;

Think we do not watch you,
Stealthily approaching?
Awful, if we caught you,
Honey-pot encroaching!
Gazing round about you,
Innocence assuming,
Just a glance could rout you,
Greedily consuming.
Why the cautious frantic?
Sneaking won't conceal you!
Every schoolboy antic
Serves but to reveal you?
Don't you know we love you?
In our favor basking
All those sweets above you
Yours for just the asking!

Foolish little Bruin!
All our hearts you've captured;
Complete our larder's ruin—
We but watch, enraptured.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Only three days more to another year! Uncle Jed wishes all of the Wide Awakes a happy New Year. Has the year which is now drawing to a close been one of happiness and success for the Wide Awakes? If not, the reason may be traced right back to yourself. In a way happiness is of our own making. If we only try hard enough we can be happy, even in the face of discouragements and disappointments.

It is not always easy to be happy but if we really try we can overcome discouragements and disappointments and start in anew. One of the causes of unhappiness is envy, another jealousy over favors shown others and still another cause is discontent. We should not envy the success of others, their possessions, their wealth or their position in life. Envy and jealousy are closely related and cause us many unnecessary heart pangs. We should not be discontent with out lot. We may not like things as they are but instead of grumbling over them we should try our level best to improve them.

So if the year 1324 has not been just what we hoped it would be, let us start out anew with the coming year and try to make it the happiest year of our lives. In doing so we will help to spread joy and happiness to others. Help those who need your assistance and in doing so you will find that the little service you render to those about you will be a source of gratification and happiness to yourself. A happy New Year to you all!

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

The Importance of Education

Dear Uncle Jed: I would like to tell the Wide Awakes about education. In accordance with the strong feeling in Connecticut for local self government the towns are allowed much freedom in conducting their schools, but the state board has many important powers. The state maintains four normal schools for the training of teachers. These schools are located at New Britain, Willimantic, New Haven and Danbury. Connecticut Agricultural college situated at Storrs, about six miles north of Willimantic, is maintained by the state in connection with the national government. Connecticut does not maintain a state university. It contains, however, four endowed institutions of this rank: Yale University at New Haven, Wesleyan University at Middletown, Trinity College at Hartford and Connecticut college at New London for women.

LOUISE LA RUE.
Jewett City.

The Sea and Her Children

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write to you about The Sea and Her Children. The players seat themselves in a circle, one of the number remaining in the center to represent the "sea". Each player takes the name of a fish and the "sea" walking around the circle calls each person by the name he has adopted.

As he is called he must rise and follow the "sea". When all have left their seats the "sea" begins to run crying, "The sea is troubled." Suddenly she seats herself, when all her companions must try to do the same, but there will be one seat short so there will be one player left over and this player becomes the "sea." No player must seat himself until the "Sea" has taken a chair and she can create some fun by running about and pretending she is about to seat herself. Any player seating himself before the "sea" must pay a forfeit.

Little One Eye

Dear Uncle Jed: I will now write to you about little one eye. One eye is a small, white, soft haired spaniel and is a most cunning and amusing animal. Though he has but one eye, yet he is alert and watchful, successfully making the one left him do double duty.

He is as wise as it is possible for a little dog to be. When he sees the cook go by, he will fall down, stretch himself out full length and play "dead dog." He can tell his mistress when the telephone bell rings, also bring the daily paper from the yard. She has taught him to bring things to her and to beg for what he wants. His begging looks, for all the world, like coaxing so cunningly is it done. The pleading, pathetic look beaming from that one eye is hard to resist, and he generally gets whatever he desires.

One day his mistress sent him upstairs for her slippers. He came down presently with only one. He was sent back for the other but came without it again. He went again but stayed so long she went upstairs to see what was keeping him. He had been trying to get it but the suit-case was on it.

Is In Fourth Grade

Dear Uncle Jed: I am a little boy I am in the fourth grade. I am going to tell you about A Cat and Mice. I gave one of our cats to our next door neighbor a year ago. She caught 15 mice.

CHARLES HALL, Age 9.

A Secret

Dear Uncle Jed: One day Mary, my friend, and I went out to play. There we saw a lady we knew. She asked us to come up to see it. It was a little squirrel. She told us to sit still so it wouldn't run away. We sat very still. The squirrel put his two front paws in the lady's hand. The lady gave him a bad nut to see what he would do. He threw it away and began running toward his home. We called him and he came back and this time she gave him a good nut. He ate it and ran up the tree with some to store away for winter.

GERTRUDE DEAUSOLIER, Age 10.
Norwich.

A Trip to Long Island

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to tell you about my trip to Long Island. We started early one Saturday morning in the car. We reached New London about 8.15 A. M. The boat was named the Shinnecock. From there we went to Bar Harbor and then to Greenport. We stayed over Sunday. Then we started home Monday morning. I hope all the Wide Awakes have such an opportunity.

NORMAN A. KERR.
Brooklyn, Ct.

Visiting Day

Dear Uncle Jed: Last week on Nov. 21, 1924 in the afternoon we didn't have any school because it was the teacher's meeting. My friend said we might as well visit Lisbon school this afternoon. I said, "All right."

At half past one we were ready to go. When we got there the teacher came to the door. I told her that we came to visit the school. She told us to sit down. After a while recess came. When the children came in school we went to visit the other room. We went in and sat down. Then we looked at the clock and it was half past three. We were ready to go but the man told us that we were to sign our names. When we were finished we went out.

Christmas Day

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you and the Wide Awakes about Christmas. Jesus Christ was born on Christmas and that is why we have Christmas day. Jesus Christ was born in a manger, with a horse, cow, and sheep.

His mother's name was Mary and she was very kind to little Jesus. On Christmas we have either a turkey, goose, or chicken, cranberry sauce and nuts, and also candy and many other things. I hope all the Wide Awakes will have a Merry Christmas.

Is Ten Years Old

Dear Uncle Jed: I am in the third grade at school and I like to go to school very much. I am ten years old. I have many pets.

MARY WALAJTYS, Age 10.

Buckey a Good Hunter

Dear Uncle Jed: My dog's name is Buckey. He is about three feet from the ground. He is about four and one half feet in length, from the tip of his nose to the tip of his tail. His coat is between a brown, red and yellow. His chest is white. He has three brown paws and one white one. His ears are nearly four inches long. They are smooth like velvet. His intelligent eyes are brown.

He is very large and most people who don't know him are afraid of him and run. All the boys near my home like him because he digs moles, rabbits, skunks and chipmunks out of their holes. He looks like a police dog but his mother was a long haired collie. He is a male dog. I am very fond of Buckey because he is a good hunter, is a faithful dog and he likes to play with us.

The Pilgrims

Dear Uncle Jed: There were once some people in England who wished to worship God in the way they thought best. But the cruel King of England did not let them. So they made up their minds to go to Holland. But there, their children learned to be Hollanders. This they did not wish so they went to Plymouth. They sailed in a boat called The Mayflower. It took many days and when they got there it was very, very cold. The wind blew a gale. But the men built huts out of the logs. They went to church on Sunday with guns on their shoulders. All this happened in the year 1620. Many Indians roamed in that part of the country then. Now do you see how brave our forefathers were.

HELEN PENDLETON, Age 9.
Norwich.

My Special Topic

Dear Uncle Jed: Every child of the seventh grade of our school has a turn to say a special topic. Special topics are very good for they teach you how to talk read and write.

Last week Thursday it was my turn. I told the children how to play a few Indian games from Oklahoma. I think that some of the Wide Awakes know how to play these games. The names of the games are storm game. The deer and the wolves. The donkey in the ring.

The teacher said that my topic was very interesting. My next topic will be Professor Cizek's Art Class in Vienna. The children all enjoyed in hearing me tell them how to play these games.

How We May Safeguard Our Nation

Dear Uncle Jed: Every day thousands of automobiles come into this world that were not here yesterday. That means that no nation will lose more lives and that the next generation to come will be a weak one. There is one way in which we can save out nation from destruction and that is by being careful. Here are a few rules which we can easily obey.

Look in all directions before crossing streets. Before stepping from a vehicle let it stop. Help the needy. Walk across the streets, don't run. Always walk on the sidewalk. Don't jay walk. Do not slide in the street. Never stop to talk to a friend in the road. Don't count your change or read when crossing streets.

If we would obey these rules we would very likely have fewer accidents as most of them are caused by carelessness. Mothers should try to teach children, as soon as they are old enough to understand, how being careful could bring them to an old age. Any mother would rather have her child in her arms than all the gold in the world and so it is our duty to see that she does not lose us.

If we always heed to the warnings our parents give us and to the rules I have stated we will have a much stronger generation.

ELSA MEHL, Age 13.

Has a Pet Cat

Dear Uncle Jed: I have a pet. I feed my pet every night. Her name is Nelly. When I go to sleep at night I put my cat in the cellar. I am in the third grade. I like my teacher very much. I like to go to school.

ANNIE WALAJTYS, Age 8.
Jewett City.

A Wonderful Trip

Uncle Jed: It was a beautiful morning and the birds were sweetly singing their morning cacols. A brand new car stood near the doorvard. Mother dressed me in my Sunday clothes and I was prepared for a long journey.

Soon I was speeding along the highway watching the world wake into life. After riding a few miles we stopped and picked up a gentleman between the age of thirty and thirty-five.

We passed greetings and soon he was describing all the different things he saw and the places he visited. We reached a place (the name I don't remember) and got off to look at the surrounding buildings.

They looked very big and soon we were strolling through the marble halls looking at the pictures of our great artists, when all of sudden I heard a crash and found it was all a dream.

DAVID GELFMAN, Age 9.
Mansfield Center.

Early Settlers

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write you a story about English explorers and hope you will be interested in it.

The first English explorer who came to this country was John Cabot. He landed on the coast of Nova Scotia or Labrador. But the great English settlements in America were made more than a century later, on the middle Atlantic coast. The first successful settlement was at Jamestown, in Virginia, in 1607. The Mayflower Pilgrims came to Plymouth in 1620. The Dutch took possession of Manhattan Island and named the place New Amsterdam; but later they were obliged to give it up to the English, who called it New York.

The English settlers built up thirteen colonies, but they were confined to the narrow Atlantic Lowland. The French held the St. Lawrence and the great interior lowland. The Spanish held Florida and the southwest. But the French and Spanish generally cared more for furs and gold than they did to make homes, though many noble French missionaries sought to turn the natives to Christianity.

Our Pine Hut

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to tell you about our hut. One Saturday my sister and I started building a hut. We got some axes and chopped down some pine trees. Then we took them and wove them together for 14 per cent.

walls. After we worked hard for four hours we finished it. We had banked the woven trees to two standing trees. There was no ton to it. We dug a fire place in it and roasted some potatoes over it and toasted some bread. We looked at our hands and they were full of pine pitch. We went into the house and cleaned our hands. We play there every Saturday when we are out of school.

A Smile

Dear Uncle Jed: A young man took his grandmother to an art exhibition. They wandered about looking at the paintings with interest. Finally they stopped before a portrait which showed a man sitting in a high backed chair. Tacked to the frame was a small white card. "What does it say on the card?" asked the old lady.

A portrait of J. F. Jones by himself.

The old lady went close to the picture. "What fools these people must be," she muttered. "Anybody can see Jones is by himself. There's nobody else in the picture."

MILTON ANDREW, Age 8.

What the Clock Saw

Dear Uncle Jed: There was once a girl whose name was Rose. Rose had a brother, and she had to take care of him very often. One day as her mother was leaving for the city she gave Rose a bag of candy, so if her brother would cry she would give it to him.

No one was home and she gave her brother some toys to play with and she went in the cupboard and ate all the candy.

Rose thought that no one saw her but somebody did and that was the clock. Everything we do in the house the clock sees. We never think of this.

EAST HADDAM

Mrs. Norman S. Boardman has returned home after a visit with her sister, Mrs. Henry Morgan in Springfield, Mass. She also visited friends in Windsor Locks.

Raymond Henry is now employed with the local branch of the state highway department.

Mrs. John W. Hatstat, who is passing the winter with friends in Yonkers, N. Y. recently spent a few days with friends in the village.

Miss Alden is spending a few days with Miss Lobdell, in South Manchester.

Judge Walton Hall, Jr., has resumed his duties at the Moodus Savings bank after several days' illness with grip.

Mrs. Hall and youngest daughter were also ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney L. Chapman of Hartford and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Joyner, were recent visitors in town.

W. J. Thomas and son have built a storage room on the east side of their store building.

Columbia lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., held their annual election Monday.

Mrs. F. G. Ingersoll is ill at her home and under the care of a graduate nurse.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Edward Bartman were in Middletown recently to meet Mrs. Bartman's sister, Miss Damaris Warner who is having a vacation from the New Haven School of Gymnastics.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Beebe, with Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Manee, were recent visitors with the former's daughter, Mrs. Cassius Pratt, in Essex.

London is slowly becoming a city of grown-up people, with fewer children every year. In ten years the number of children has decreased

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

The Story About the Tadpole

Granddaddy Bullfrog sat on his log
Close to the edge of the Old Mill Bog
As he turned his eyes towards the Sunny South
He caught a fly in his great big mouth.

"Ha, ha!" laughed Little Jack Rabbit, who happened at that very moment to be hopping by, "you ought to play ball on the Bunnybridge baseball team. You're great at catching flies."

"I'm growing old"

"Maybe, but not perhaps," answered Granddaddy Bullfrog. "I'm growing old. Teddy Tadpole when he grows bigger might play."

"Can't play baseball in the water," sighed Little Jack Rabbit, sitting down close to the edge of the pond.

"When Teddy Tadpole grows up he won't live in the water all the time," answered the wise old frog gentleman.

"Oh, well, his tail would be in the way," replied the little rabbit.

"Not a bit of it—not even a little bit of it," answered Granddaddy Bullfrog with a croaky laugh and a smile a yard wide. What will he do with it?" asked the curious little bunny, as the old frog winked his eye.

"Why all tadpoles lose their tails before leaving the water. They have no use for them except at the swimming stage,—when they are more like fish, you know, then tiny frogs."

"What is that true!" exclaimed the amazed little rabbit.

"It certainly is," replied the wise old frog gentleman. And what's more when food is scarce, they live on their own tails."

"Do they eat them?" rasped the amazed little bunny.

"Not exactly. They are absorbed like so much food."

"Absorbed?" asked the bunny boy questionably. "What does that mean?"

"Well," slowly replied the old frog, scratching his chin. "You know when you fill your stomach with food it makes your body strong. The tadpole's tail is like a full stomach. And when the water is cold and there is little natural food about, the tadpole uses up faster his tail supply of nourishment."

"Oh, I must tell all this to Professor Jim Crow," cried the bunny boy. "He'll print it in his Wisdom Book."

"Maybe," croaked the wise old frog gentleman, gulping down a big fly that ventured too near. "Tadpoles and camels are something alike," went on the old bullfrog, smiling into the wide open eyes of the startled little bunny.

"Dear, dear, dearest me," gasped the bunny boy. "Tell me more. I'll repeat it to dear Uncle Lucky. He'll be surprised to hear that a tiny little tadpole is something like one of his great big circus camels. Goodness me! I never knew you could tell such wonderful things. Please go on."

"Wait a minute. I hear the Old Dog Editor on the Bunnybridge Bugle shouting from the newspaper office that he has no room to print another word." So, dear little reader, your Uncle Dave must write in the next story what Granddaddy Bullfrog explained to Little Jack Rabbit.

POETRY

THE COMMONWEAL.

A prayer for social welfare—what say ye?
I hear the note of that new pioneer,
Samaritan of our democracy;
The social engineer.

Coin a new fancy from the sacred lore,
Quoth the Samaritan, "I will repay,
When I return, whate'er thou spendest more,"
And in our modern way,

Take care of him, and keep a record, too.
So the old story serves us for a chart
To bring men's needs, God knows they are not few,
Into the brotherhood heart.

Like him who held the bag and was a thief,
Man's selfishness pretends to be fervent,
"Why gifts for service? Alms will give relief,
Nor search the evil out."

But the creative tide of charity
Goes forward to produce, to save—its mind
The sacrifice of bitter Calvary—
Devotion to mankind!

Awake the memory of Columbia's story,
The glorious record of her hardihood,
A prayer for social welfare—"O my country, Ever give us this food."

—Laura G. Woodberry, in Boston Transcript.

CLAY.

"We are but clay," the preacher saith;
"The heart is clay, and clay the brain,
And soon or late there cometh death
To mingle us with earth again."

Well, let the preachur have it so,
And clay we are, and clay shall be:—
Why iterate?—for this I know,
That clay does very well for me.

When clay has such red mouths to kiss,
Firm hands to grasp, it is enough;
How can I take it aught amiss
We are not made of rarer stuff?

And if one tempt you to believe
His choice would be immortal gold,
Question him, can you then conceive
A warmer heart than clay can hold?

Or richer joys than clay can feel?
And when perforce he falters nay,
Bid him renounce his wish and kneel
In thanks for this same kindly clay.

—Edward Verrall Lucas.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Mrs. North—Now I have a theory about raising children—

Mrs. West—Well, you wouldn't have if you had the children!—Judge.

Sunday School Teacher—What fruit was it caused the fall of man?

Devotee of Charlie Chaplin—Please, ma'am, the banana!—The Progressive Grocer.

She (back from a honeymoon in Switzerland)—Don't you remember that wonderful gorge in Alps, dear?

He—Sure do. It was the squarest meal I ever ate.—Royal Gaboon.

Wife—Shall I charge the things I buy, or will you just sign a blank check for me.

Husband—I'll sign the check. The bank at least won't give you any more than I have!—Kansas City Star.

Roommate—So your father refused to send you money for Christmas. I suppose he's forgotten that he spent money when he went to college?

Blinks, jr.—Not a bit of it. And he hasn't forgotten what he spent it for, either.—American Legion Weekly.

I'm about through with you, old sox.

Thus spoke the girl.

Sounds like a slangy way of turning adrift a faithful suitor.

But she was merely discussing some half.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Little Mary approached her mother sobbing with penitance.

"Oh, mother," she cried, "I—I broke a brick in the fireplace."

"Well, that isn't very hard to remedy," said Mother, "but how did you do it, child?"

I pounded it with father's watch.—Harvard Lampoon.

A hardware merchant advertised for a boy. A red-haired, red-faced youth applied for the job.

"Do you like work?" asked the merchant.

"No, Sir," said the lad.

"Then you can have the job! You're the first boy who's been here today and hasn't told a lie."—Good Hardware.

WESTERLY

The Pawcatuck fire alarm whistle was blown Sunday afternoon about 4.30 o'clock from Box 62, Liberty street and Stillman avenue, for a fire on the roof of the house of Ernest A. Smith, 16 Lincoln avenue. It is thought to have been caused from a spark from the chimney which ignited the shingled roof. The fire truck of F. S. Barber Hose company with Engineer Pierce Morrison responded and arrived so promptly that a well directed application of chemicals soon extinguished the blaze. The damage was small.

Official notice and warning posted on the Stonington town bulletin board at the Pawcatuck river bridge directs Martin Clemens and all parties interested in the home brew seized by Connecticut State Policeman Caron and others, in the raid on the Martin Clemens place, last Wednesday afternoon, to appear before a session of Stonington town court to be held in borough hall, Stonington, Saturday morning, Jan. 3.

Many skaters took advantage of the smooth ice on Burden's pond on Sunday afternoon. Fishermen also engaged their favorite sport in fishing through the ice. A young boy pulled out a four-pound bass which was weighed on the spot. The fish was in good condition.

The Christmas festival of Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church and Sabbath school was held in the vestry Sunday evening. A supper was served at 6 o'clock, which was followed by a program of Christmas music and recitations by members of the Bible school, Superintendent Samuel H. Davis, in the auditorium in charge of Miss Emma Crandall. Saturday noon in the vestry the annual commencement exercises of the intermediate department of the Bible school were held when a class of boys taught by Miss Ruth V. Davis, were promoted to the advanced school. The members from other classes were advanced so that the New Year will mark the beginning of the new classes.

About forty of the less fortunate girls and boys of Westerly and Pawcatuck named by Mrs. Dagmar Smith, superintendent of the People's Mission, West Broad street, were entertained Saturday afternoon from 2 to 4 by the members of the Westerly Masonic club No. 176 at their club rooms on High street. There was a Christmas tree lighted by miniature electric lamps and decorated with ornaments and surrounded by toys. Ice cream, cakes, cookies, fruit and candy were provided. Santa Claus in the person of Fred Robinson came up the fire escape and appeared at the window to prove that even if Christmas had passed he had not yet returned to Greenland, but must have stopped off on his way back. There were useful gifts, too, for big and little, such as warm gloves, woolen stockings, etc.

The work of tearing down the overhead wiring of the trolley road was continued in Westerly on Sunday. Some time ago the large feed wire, trolley wire and guy wires were removed on West street and Railroad avenue and the heavy feed wire taken down, as far as High street. Sunday advantage was taken of the decreased pedestrian and vehicle traffic on High and Broad streets, when a gang of wiremen, under direction of William J. Sheehan of Lowell, Mass., continued the operation of removing the overhead wires.

Friday afternoon the Rhode Island supreme court, in session in Providence, in rescripts handed down, sustained the decision by which Victoria M. Brown as administratrix of the estate of her mother, Louise E. LaBonte, and she was awarded $1336.25, and as administratrix of the estate of her sister, Jennie E. Scribner, was awarded $460.14 for money claimed to have been loaned by each testatrix to her brother, Adolphus LaBonte. Defendant claimed that his sister gave her estate by her will to his mother, and that his mother forgave him the indebtedness.

"The jury apparently did not believe his testimony and returned a verdict for the amount claimed to be due," says the rescripts. "After a careful consideration of the evidence it does not clearly appear that the approval of the verdict by the trial justice was erroneous, and the defendant's exception is not sustained." The case is remitted to the superior court for Washington county with direction to enter judgment for the plaintiff on the verdict in each case.

WEEKLY MARKET REVIEW

New York, Dec. 28.—For the first time in nearly a quarter of a century, Wall Street enjoyed a real "bull" Christmas this year. In defiance of a tradition that calls for reactionary or irregular and dull markets during the holiday season, stock prices swept forward in a wild burst of bullish enthusiasm which carried the general industrial average within striking distance of the figure attained during the peak of the post-war boom in 1919.

Revival of strength and activity in the copper shares following the unexpected resumption of dividends by the Anaconda Copper Mining Company and the further stiffening of red metal prices to around 15 cents a pound, was one of the week's features. This leaves only one important group—the oils—that has failed to participate in the general advance, although a few isolated petroleum issues, such as the Pan-American, the Pure Oil, Barnsdall A., and Simms Petroleum have been elevated to new high levels.

Outside the coppers, the equipments gave one of the best demonstrations of group strength, reflecting the unusually heavy demand being made on the railroads for rolling stock and maintenance of way material. Rails were a bit sluggish, awaiting more definite information concerning the November earnings statements. United States Steel common crossed 120 for the first time in seven years.

The stiffening in call money rates, which is generally believed to be temporary, was attributed to the heavy demands in connection with the dividend and interest payments and the calling of loans by banks in order to make the best possible showing in yearend statements. This condition probably will prevail until after the beginning of the new year when the return flow is expected to lead to a reduction in the rate on day-to-day loans.

NORWICH TOWN

Ever Ready Circle of the King's Daughters, Miss Jennie L. Congdon leader, brought cheer to the members of the family at the Almshouse, on a recent visit, when a religious service was conducted by Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church, and the circle distributed Christmas gifts to everyone.

Rev. Mr. Bailey offered prayer and told a Christmas story. Several Christmas carols were sung by members of the circle and a few friends. A special feature was A Child's Christmas song, by Joseph and Vincent Godfrey, two little boys from the primary department of the First Congregational Sunday school.

A visit was also made to the inmates on the upper floor, who were unable to attend the service. Here Rev. Mr. Bailey offered prayer and several Christmas songs were sung.

Besides distributing fruit and candy to each one, each woman was presented an apron and each man given a sum of money. The gifts were placed around a Christmas tree arranged by the officials at the institution and it was here that those inmates who were able assembled for the exercises.

For years this Circle has provided a Christmas service at the town farm and it is very much appreciated.

Miss Florence Sterry a student at Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs, is passing the holiday recess with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Sterry.

Included on the programme given recently at the Christmas entertainment of the First Methodist Episcopal Sunday school was a recitation, entitled Dolly's Piece, by Mildred Carter. The purchasing committee for the Christmas gifts comprised Mrs. Stanton W. Brown, Mrs. Albert G. Miner and Miss Hazel Cruthers.

Holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Vaughn of Bliss Place included their son Stanley Vaughn, who is home from Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Penn., to pass the holiday recess, also their son-in-law and daughter, Mr and Mrs. Loue E. Stockwell and little daughter Priscilla Stockwell, of Worcester, Mass.

Alexander Kilroy, R. N., of Bellevue Hospital, N. Y., was a guest over Christmas and the week end at the home of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Brosofske.

MAYOR WATERS RECEIVES PETITION FOR SPECIAL CITY MEETING

Mayor Milo R. Waters has received a petition signed by G. Warren Davis and 19 others requesting that a special city meeting be called January 12th for the purpose of taking action on a proposition to move the intake pipe at the Trading Cove brook pumping station farther up stream. The petitioners in their petition refer to the water now being pumped from the Trading Cove brook as "repugnant and germ laden." Another matter which the petitioners wish to bring before the meeting for action is a proposition to direct the mayor and members of the court of common council to cease all negotiations contemplating the sale or lease of the city's gas and electric plant on North Main street.

Summarized, the matters which the signers of the petition wish to bring before the special city meeting for action are as follows:

To protect and prevent the use of the repugnant and germ laden water of Trading Cove brook in the water main of the City of Norwich until the intake pipe has been moved so far up the said Trading Cove brook pumping station as to avoid receiving the water now repugnant and germ laden.

To appoint five citizens to inquire into the legality of the expenditures by the water department or by the court of common council of any money whatsoever upon the Trading Cove brook project except when duly authorized by a legal meeting of the citizens.

The petition asks that this committee render its report at an adjourned meeting of the special city meeting and also that provision be made for the remuneration of the said committee.

The final matter on which action is asked is "to direct the mayor and the common council to cease all negotiations contemplating the sale or lease of the municipale gas and electric plant."

The signatures on the petition are as follows:

G. Warren Davis, Edward P. Ellsworth, Lucius P. Davis, George R. Hannis, Homer W. Davis, Stanley C. Spicer, Lucy N. Spicer, Fannie Barrows, William M. Wyman, Alice J. Chapman, C. Bogue, W. H. Wibberly, H. D. Simpson, R. Chapman, R. C. Britton, William J. Dauville, R. P. Potter, J. E. Allen, Edith E. Nafie, Eugene Nafie.

SIX-REEL PICTURE AT Y. M. C. A. SUNDAY

Practically all the seats were occupied at the meeting held Sunday afternoon in the gymnasium of the local Y. M. C. A. The opening exercises consisted of hymns, scripture reading, prayer, and solos rendered by Hugh Kinder, who was also the pianist for the pictures shown. The six-reel picture The Heart of a Hero portrayed very vividly the part played by Nathan Hale in Revolutionary days, and the impression made was strong for patriotism. Between the reels Secretary Hill gave a brief talk on patriotism, saying in part as follows:

Patriotism must not be confined to country alone; there is what may be called patriotism needed in the home life, and that patriotism calls for the best that is in us; it is not always easy to be patriotic at home, but every member of the family should do his and her best to contribute their share of harmony to the home life. Then of course there is patriotism of country; had we the time, we could take hours in mentioning the names of our patriots, from Washington to Lincoln and on to Harding and President Coolidge. There have been and are many patriots in times of peace as well as in times of war.

The brave young men who went across in the World war were patriots, and those in these days of peace who live their lives of manhood and womanhood to their country are just as truly patriots. America needs today the best that we can give her; our liberty has cost the best blood of our fathers and sons. Let us show our appreciation by measuring fully up to our responsibility of citizenship. After [illegible] may be a good patriot in the [illegible] his country, and yet not [illegible] the highest patriotism. The [illegible] is Christian following in all [illegible] and example. If these are true [illegible] certainly be true to

In view of the growth of automobile registrations in Connecticut during the past several years, the department is figuring on more than a quarter million cars being offered for registration in this state in the next year, the high mark for Connecticut. In the present year, the number of Connecticut registrations jumped from 189,000 to 221,009, in round numbers, up to December 1. Of that number, 159,999 passenger cars and 22,439 commercial motor vehicles were registered in the first month of the year and 37,754 passenger cars and 3,072 commercial cars in April, the second best registration month. May was the third best month, and June, July, March, August, February, September, October, November and December next, in the order named.

FORESTRY ASSOCIATION PLANS WINTER MEETING

The directors of the Connecticut Forestry association voted recently to hold the annual meeting of the association in Hartford on January 31, 1925. There will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions.

The morning session will consist of a trip through the forest plantations of the Hartford water board, together with meetings of smaller groups of fire wardens and others at the hotel.

The afternoon session will be in the form of a business meeting, followed by a programme of speeches, forestry and wild life moving pictures and the like. Major R. Y. Stewart, a close associate of Gifford Pinchot in Pennsylvania and a high officer in the American forestry work in France during the war, will make one of the chief addresses.

The evening meeting will be in the form of a banquet, followed by interesting features of various kinds.

There will be an exhibit of forestry material of various kinds, including maps, pictures, models and live trees displayed at the time.

All sessions will be open to the public. At the annual meeting in New Haven last winter over 300 people were in attendance, and an even larger number are expected this time including many members of the legislature.

Committee On Industrial Improvement.

The New Haven road management announces the appointment of a committee on industrial development which will have charge of all matters affecting the location and development of industries along its lines. The committee is made up as follows: A. P. Russell, vice president, Boston, chairman; E. L. Taylor, contract agent New Haven, secretary; J. A. Beahan, assistant general freight agent, New Haven; W. T. Dorrance, designing engineer, New Haven.

THE ONE GREAT EVENT IN 1924

Seen in Retrospect, the One Great Event in 1924, was the topic of the sermon given Sunday morning at the Church of the Good Shepherd (Universalist) by the pastor, Rev. A. N. Foster. Rev. Mr. Foster took as his text Isaiah 11: 4, "For a law shall proceed from Me and I will make My judgment to rest for a light unto the people." In part, Rev. Mr. Foster said:

The one great event of the past year has been not the encircling of the globe by the American army airplanes —but rather the announcement of the protocol by the international conference in session at Geneva last October. This conference represented some fifty nations of the world and the work of the conference is to be compared to the English Magna Charta, and the American Declaration of Independence.

It grapples with the age-long problem of international war. This problem is now acutely dangerous, as modern chemistry through the action of recently invented gases will blot out great armies and vast communities by explosives dropped from the skies.

As the next possible war would be vastly more destructive than any past wars, so much the more urgent is the demand for preventing war.

Every nation is prone to justify a particular war by claiming it is a "defensive" war. Deep significance attaches to the protocol for its definition of "aggressive" war. In case of dispute, "every nation which resorts to war in violation of the undertakings of the covenant of the league shall be adjudged an 'aggressor' nation." To enforce such judgments resort shall be made to economic and financial and military sanctions.

That means that the organized nations of the world stand in united opposition to the acts of "aggressor nations." No nation would be willing to assume such risk for the sake of going to war. Security comes from such agreement rather than from increase of armament. Never before in history have sovereign nations come to such an agreement regarding public policy.

The protocol and the implied international treaty will not be submitted to the United States for ratification, for the United States and Germany and Russia and Turkey and a half dozen minor nations have not yet joined the League of Nations. America has not yet shared the extreme bitterness and devastation as Europe has known such through war. And still it may be presumed that the vast resources and the noble spirit of America will be used co-operatively in preventing the recurrence of the havoc and the horrors of war.

The protocol is a challenge to the teachings of religion. For centuries religion has proclaimed brotherhood and marmified the doctrine of peace and good will.

Here is an opportunity—a duty—to actualize religion and to show the sincerity of our faith and our prayers.

The word of the Lord is not afar off but it is nigh unto us and the law of the Lord is a light unto the people.

TAKING 1924 INVENTORY IS THEME OF FATHER GALVIN

Yesterday, the last Sunday in 1924, and the feast of the Holy Innocents, Rev. Myles P. Galvin, preaching at the nine o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church, considered the wisdom of reviewing the spiritual side of the year just closing. He expressed the fear that for too many it would bring back memories of sinfulness, negligence, lack of good will, resolutions made in sincerity but too quickly forgotten.

With this spiritual inventory he advocated the prompt determination to make of the year to come one more worthy in every respect. Especially did the preacher recommend a resolve to conquer what he characterized as the pet sin against which every person has to strive. While often such a sin may seem trivial in itself, its leads frequently to other and graver faults, inasmuch as it weakens the will and the character, making drifting into serious sins easy. The speaker directed his strongest rebukes against those careless Catholics who ignore the many grace sent them by God, often trampling them, as it were, in the dust. He reminded his hearers in the large congregation that many who were assisting at mass on the last Sunday of the previous year had since gone to their eternal reward—either the presence of God, the probation state of Purgatory, or the punishment of hell for their unpardonable sins.

In giving Holy Communion at the mass Father Galvin assisted Rev. John J. Reilly. The hymns were sung by the junior choir of over forty voices. Miss Mary Bresnahan, organist. The solo, "Holy Night" was sweetly sung by Miss Marguerite Driscoll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Driscoll.

SANTA CLAUS VISITED COUNTY HOME SUNDAY

Santa Claus made a visit to the New London county home Sunday afternoon and remembered the 53 children with gifts of candy, fruit and money. The children and Miss Gibson, matron of the home, expressed their appreciation of the contributions of Peter Peterson and friends, who made the affair a success.

HELD JOINT SOCIAL AND CHANUKKAH CELEBRATION

At Buckingham Memorial Thursday evening, Rose of New England lodge, No. 398, Independent Order of B'nai Brith, held a joint social and Chanukkah celebration in conjunction with the Ladies Auxiliary No. 40, I. O. B. B. The programme opened by singing "America." President Morris Sussman introduced Max Hanover, to act as toastmaster, also to welcome the many out of town visiting guests. Bryman's orchestra furnished the music of the evening. A novel feature of the entertainment was that each man drew a tie out of a bag and the lady who wore an apron matching the tie was his partner in the grand march that followed.

Alex Pasnik, who was fortunate in picking the tie matching the apron worn by the honor bride of the evening, Miss Ethel Goldberg, having the honor of leading the march as her escort, was agreeably surprised by the orchestra, which without notice changed the grand march into "Here Comes the Bride," bringing the applause of all present.

About ten o'clock there was an intermission and tables were set and the auxiliary ladies, who acted as hostesses, entertained their friends with lunch which they provided. Alex Pasnik was the song leader of the evening, performing his part with marked ability.

Mrs. Esther Trachtenberg in the name of the Ladies Auxiliary, presented a "Menorah" (Candilabrum) to Miss Ethel Goldberg, who was married on Sunday. Miss Goldberg expressed her appreciation to the ladies of the organization.

Henry Brynan gave several violin solos and was roundly applauded.

The seven year old son of Jacob Weschler of Jewett City entertained with a song.

At 12 p. m. the party broke up after singing the Star Spangled Banner and giving the salute to the flag.

OCCUM & VERSAILLES

Activities in both villages during the past few days have been expressive of the Christmas spirit. Inspiring Christmas programs were held Sunday morning, the 21st, at both the 8 and 10 o'clock mass which were sung at St. Joseph's church by Rev. Frederick R. DesSureault. Miss Irene Lavallie is organist.

Those in attendance at the Versailles M. E. church listened to a helpful Christmas sermon by Rev. Chauncey W. Ruoff. Mrs. Louis Erlbeck was at the organ in the absence of H. R. Bushnell. The church was attractive in its decorations, cut flowers and flowering plants were furnished by the Ladies' Aid society under the direction of Mrs. Irving Gregory and Mrs. John Hargreaves.

Tuesday a Christmas tree for the young children and their mothers under the direction of Mrs. Philip T. Welles, representative of the children's health clinic, United Workers, was held in the quarters of the Totokett Hose company. Tuesday evening members and friends of the Versailles M. E. S. S. held their annual Christmas exercises in the vestry. A pleasing program, preceding the tree exercises, was given by the members of the school under the direction of Miss Helen Towers and Miss Alma Boutilier. The program consisted of the following songs and recitations: Hymn, O Little Town of Bethlehem; Welcome, Ruth Frohmander; The Christmas Express, primary class; Christmas Doctor, Albert Seifert; song, primary class; Too Small, Myrtle Phillips; Tom's Christmas Surprise, John Schwartan and Oscar Anderson; Mother's Christmas Fairy, Katherine Topliff; song, Cradled in a Manger; Santa's Little Girl, Elsie Laycock; recitation, Melvin Robinson; Just Make Someone Happy, Clarence Macht; The Christmas Stocking, Betty Allen; hymn, Silent Night; sketch, An Original Christmas Entertainment, was given with ability by Herbert Richards, Jr., Carl Benker, John Benker, Hilda Benker, Mildred Cole, Erna Seifert, Ester Phillips, Alberta Mathers, Francis Bush and Henry Babbitt. Following the sketch, Santa Claus, impersonated by William Boenig, gave the younger members of the school a large amount of pleasure and fulfilled their expectations of Santa's visit. Santa Claus was assisted by W. G. Frohmander and the boys of his Sunday school class in the distribution of gifts and candy.

The Occum hall held a happy and wideawake gathering of young people when the pupils of Occum school under the direction of the principal, Miss Anna L. Welch, and her assistants, held Christmas tree exercises Wednesday morning.

The midnight mass held at St. Joseph's church on Thursday morning taxed the seating capacity of the church to its utmost. Fine music was given by the members of the choir, assisted by Taftville singers. Miss Lavallie was organist. The Christmas sermon by Rev. Frederick R. DesSureault was of special interest and help. The travels and visit to the Holy Land by Fr. DesSureault gave him the opportunity to impart an historical setting to his able discourse.

A group of young people added much to the Christmas spirit by carol singing in both villages on Christmas eve. The singers were entertained at the close of their program at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Topliff.

A custom in vogue in other years by the members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Versailles M. E. church, of sending Christmas baskets of fruit and sweets to the shut-ins in this vicinity, was again adopted this year. The society carried out its plans under the direction of Mrs. Max Nichols and Mrs. Fred Laycock.

Friends of Mrs. L. A. Brand are rejoiced to learn of her fast returning strength from her recent severe attack of pneumonia.

C. H. Boyens, overseer of the outside work at the plant of the Totokett Manufacturing company, although still confined to his room, is slowly regaining his health.

H. R. Bushnell is unable to be at his accustomed duties on account of a severe attack of grip.

NEW HAVEN ROAD IS VITAL TO NEW ENGLAND INDUSTRIES

Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut to Cooperate With the Management of the Road in a Definite Plan of Refinancing—Industries Realize They Are Partly or Wholly Dependent Upon the Railroad System For Receiving Supplies of Raw Materials and For Marketing Their Products—Details of the Plan of Cooperation Are to Be Announced Later.

Hartford, Dec. 29.—Impressed with the necessity for an adequate and improved transportation service in the industrial areas of Connecticut and in southern New England generally, the directors of the Manufacturers' association of Connecticut have for some months been giving their attention to the financial situation of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, upon which the industries of Connecticut, Rhode Island and eastern Masschusetts are partly or wholly dependent for receiving supplies of raw materials and for marketing their products.

As is well known, the New Haven company must meet on April 1, 1925, notes of indebtedness to the amount of practically twenty-three million dollars which then become due. Failure to meet this obligation promptly and in full would of course seriously impair the credit standing of the company and produce a situation that would quickly be reflected upon industry in the form of reduced or less efficient transportation service. From the first it was seemed to the directors of the association that all danger of industry being hampered as a result of financial embarrassment of the railroad in connection with the coming due of this indebtedness must by all means be averted. Accordingly, having in mind the protection of industry, on June 4 last the directors authorized the creation of a special committee to "formulate a definite plan for assisting the re-financing of the New Haven railroad" in relation to the maturity of April 1, 1925. The committee was authorized to confer with the directors of the New Haven road and with the representatives of organized commerce and industry in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, states in which the financial stability and efficient operation of the New Haven are matters of almost as much concern as in Connecticut. The committee appointed consisted of the following:

Henry B. Sargent, Sargent & company, New Haven; E. Kent Hubbard, Manufacturers' association of Connecticut, Hartford; J. Arthur Atwood, Wauregan company, Wauregan; George T. Klumpke, American Hardware company, New Britain; S. H. Bullard, Bullard Machine Tool company, Bridgeport; E. O. Goss, Scovill Manufacturing company, Waterbury.

In pursuance of the authorization of the association directors, and after numerous conferences with the directors of the New Haven railroad and representatives of industry in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, a definite plan of re-financing was jointly worked out to the satisfaction of all primarily concerned. The plan takes the form of a new issue of 6 per cent. railroad bonds, fully secured, and with adequate arrangements for sinking fund and retirement, as has already been announced by the New Haven Railroad company.

The purpose of this statement on the part of the Manufacturers' association of Connecticut is to advise its members that on Dec. 23 last the association directors received from their special committee a full and complete report of all its activities since its appointment under the vote of June 4. The directors accepted the report of the committee and approved its recommendation that the association not only record its indorsement of the plan for assisting in re-financing the New Haven railroad but that it also lend its active support and cooperation in securing subscriptions to the new bonds, especially in areas where industry is largely or wholly dependent upon the rail transportation facilities of the New Haven road.

Details of the form of the association's co-operation and support will be announced to members just as soon as arrangements for joint action with the representatives of organized industry in Massachusetts and Rhode Island are completed.

In the meantime it is not too much to say that the reception already accorded the plan holds forth the brightest prospect for its complete success. Unqualified approval and large subscriptions have already been forthcoming from important banking houses, investment institutions, industrial corporations, insurance companies and individuals. Under the plan no commissions will be paid and all subscribers will be treated on the same basis. The unique circumstances in which the plan was worked out and will be executed are unprecedented in railroad finance and constitute a new form of co-operation between industrial and transportation units which, it is believed, will provide a sound basis for closer relations in the future and a deeper appreciation of their mutual relations on the part of both. Such a relationship cannot fail to aid both industry and transportation and will thereby contribute to the better operation of the entire machinery of production and distribution in the area concerned.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

Hearings were continued by the congressional joint committee on the postal rate increase bill.

Secretary Weeks approved a plan for rewarding the army world fliers by advancing them on the promition lists.

A resolution was introduced by Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, for the federal trade commission to investigate an alleged "power trust."

Secretary Hughes and Ambassador Howard of Great Britain addressed scientific gatherings on public questions.

Senator Bruce, of Maryland and Harrison, of Mississippi, engaged in an inter-party debate on democratic politics.

The state department directed Ambassador Kellogg to make inquiries of Great Britain regarding the British potato embargo.

Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan introduced a resolution to prohibit political appointments to federal offices except in a few cases.

Administration officials gave consideration to the French war debt question while the subject was discussed on the floor of both the house and senate.

The department of justice announced it had confidence in such jurors as would be drawn from Hudson County, N. J., for trial of the Weehawken liquor cases.

SIX MONTHS' SENTENCE FOR STEALING CHICKENS

Bristol, Conn., Dec. 29.—At a special session of the city court held this afternoon Felix Dubicki of Lake avenue was given a hearing before Judge William J. Malone on a charge of the theft of chickens. He pleaded guilty to stealing chickens from Miss Mary Hubbell of South street and from Arthur H. Merwin of Queen street and was sentenced to six months in the Hartford county jail. There has been an epidemic of chicken stealing here since last September.

According to the police, Dubicki used two of his sons, one 8 and one 14, on his traps for chickens.

BATHHOUSES AT CONEY ISLAND DESTROYED BY FIRE

New York, Dec. 29.—All fire apparatus was called out in Brooklyn today to bring under control a fire which destroyed two bathhouses on the southwest end of the Coney Island boardwalk.

The Fulton and the Jefferson bathe cars are consumed, at a loss of about $40,000. One fireman was injured by a falling timber.

While it lasted, the blaze was a fierce one, and Coney Island firemen, fearing that a rising wind would sweep the flames through the entire resort, sent out a general call for aid.

FRANK A. VANDERLIP CONTINUES TO IMPROVE

Scarborough, N. Y., Dec. 29.—Frank A. Vanderlip, retired banker, who has been ill at his home in Scarborough with typhoid fever, continued to improve today and physicians now believe him to be out of danger.

TO HALT TROLLEY CARS DURING ECLIPSE OF SUN

New Haven, Dec. 29.—At the request of Professor E. W. Brown, who will be in charge of the Yale astronomic observatory here on January 24, the day of the total eclipse of the sun, President Lucius S. Storrs, of the Connecticut company agreed today to halt all trolley traffic in the state during the period of totality of the eclipse in order that everyone who happens to be a trolley car passenger at the time will have an opportunity of viewing the great phenomenon.

A second object of the stopping of trolley traffic, Mr. Storrs said, is to make it unnecessary for street lamps to be lighted, a contingency which, according to the scientists, would interfere with the proper viewing of the eclipse by the public. Mr. Storrs expressed the hope that autoists would stop their machines and turn off their lights in order that all might obtain a most advantageous view of the eclipse.

Trolley traffic on that day will be continued until one minute before totality since there will be sufficient daylight until that time. During the two minutes when the sun's face will be completely hidden and during the following minute, traffic will be at a standstill and will then be resumed according to the regular schedule.

COSMO'S COUNSEL FILED MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL

Providence, R. I., Dec. 29.—Counsel for Anthony J. Amaral, convicted last Tuesday for first degree murder of 9 year old Clementine Cosmo, filed a motion for a new trial here today, claiming the discovery of evidence which would prove the defendant's innocence.

The new trial is also sought on the grounds that the former verdict was contrary to the weight of evidence, that the jurisdiction of the superior court in which the case was tried was not proved, that the defendant was unfairly disparaged and that the atrociousness of the crime prevented the jury from giving fair and impartial consideration to the defense evidence.

The motion will be placed on the calendar Saturday for assignment of a date for hearing arguments of counsel.

TOO MUCH LIQUOR FOR JURORS TO CONSUME

San Juan, Porto Rico, Dec. 29.—Five inches of liquor in a quart bottle is too much for 12 jurors to consume in determining whether the "evidence" containg more than one-half of one per cent alcohol, in the opinion of Federal Judge Odlin, who ordered a mistrial of a hearing because the jury spent part of its time in the court room, and part in the jury room, and because too much "evidence" disappeared.

Neysa McMein, magazine cover artist in New York, became mother of an 8 1-2 pound girl. She worked all Saturday to finish a painting before keeping the appoint with the girl who may be the model for many future pretty girl pictures.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

To Visit Madrid.

Madrid, Dec. 29.—It is reported here that the Prince of Wales will visit Madrid early in January.

S. O. S. From Disabled Ship.

London, Dec. 29.—Lloyd's today received a radio despatch from the steamer Sarthe, which sent out S. O. S. signals Saturday evening that she had been disabled in a gale southwest of the Scilly Islands. Today's message said the steamer was proceeding under her own steam and that she expected to reach the Isle of Wight Tuesday night.

489 LOOTERS AND INCENDIARISTS ARRESTED

Peking, Dec. 29 (By the A. P.).—Four hundred and eighty-nine looters and incendiarists found with their loot in the railway station at Kalgan have been tried and executed, according to what purports to be an official report of the military chief of the Chahar district, made public here today.

"The men were shot," it was stated, "in the interest of military discipline."

Two regimental and three battalion officers admitted taking part in the mutiny and looting of December 16, the report said, whether they were shot with the others was not made clear. The chief of staff at Kalgan and other officers having only slight concern with the looting, it was declared, are being held for future disposition by the military court.

In addition, the mutinous brigade has been ordered disbanded, and orders issued for apprehension of mutineers who escaped capture. These will be "dealt with in such a way as to give warnings to others," the report said.

Klagin, 111 miles northwest of Peking, was looted the night of December 16 by a battalion of Chinese troops whose pay was in arrears. Outside troops restored order. No loss of life was reported. Several establishments belonging to Americans and other foreigners were among those robbed.

RETIREMENT OF THIRTEEN TEACHERS APPROVED

Hartford, Dec. 29.—The retirement of thirteen teachers was approved by the state teachers retirement board at a meeting today at the capitol. A pension reserve amounting to $65,424.30 was set aside for these teachers who will receive an average monthly allowance of $42.45. The largest monthly allowance will be $75.81, which will be paid to one of the group who retires after 53 years service. The average service of the thirteen was 35 years.

The board voted to change the monthly payment system so that allowances will be paid, after January 1 at the end of each month instead of at the beginning of each month as has been the custom.

Miss Dorothy M. Shanley, secretary of the board, announced that approximately $60,000 in accrued interes will be added to the teachers fund for 1924. The average interest rate has been four per cent. Annual statements will be sent to each member in February. The net meeting of the board will be on February 6.

SIX MEMBERS ONE FAMILY INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION

New Haven, Dec. 29.—Si membes of one family were injured, three of them seriously, in an automobile accident late today when a machine driven by Charles Watson, of North Haven collided with the automobile of Charles Gara, of New Haven, at Quinnipiac and Middletown avenues.

The injured:

Charles Watson, fractured shoulder and internal injuries, in serious condition.

Mrs. Bertha Watson, his wife, injury to skull, cuts about face, condition serious.

Frank Watson, si weeks old, fractured skull, not expected to live.

Charles Watson, eight years old, nose cut.

Edward Watson, seven years old, cuts on chin and arm.

Robert Watson, three years old, cuts on back of head.

Gara was arrested after the accident charged with reckless driving and was held in bonds of $1,000. Coroner Ell Mix was notified and will start an investigation tomorrow.

FUNERAL OF REV. F. W. BARNETT IN NEWTOWN

Newtown, Conn., Dec. 29.—The funeral of Rev. Francis W. Barnett, whose death occurred on Christmas day, was held this afternoon at Trinity Episcopal church, where he was an assistant rector. The officiating clergyman included Bishop Chauncey B. Brewster of Hartfrod, Rev. R. H. Gesner, Trinity church; Rev. John F. Plumb, Hartford, secretary of the diocese; Rev. Dr. John Lewis, St. John's church, Waterbury; Rev. Charles D. Carpenter, Bridgewater; Rev. W. H. Hooker, Woodbury; Archdeacon Walter Downes Humphrey, Roxbury; Rev. Charles A. Marks, Norwalk; Rev. Leonard Tood, Watrebury. The bearers were nephews of the deceased.

Rev. Mr. Barnett was a brother of the late William E. Harnett, vice president of the New Haven railroad, and a brother of Dr. Fred Barnett of West Haven, physician and artist. Burial was in Newtown cemetery.

JURY REFUSED TO INDITE CHINESE FOR TWO MURDERS

Hartford, Dec. 29.—After deliberating three hours today on evidence offered by the Hartford police to connect Yee Do Hong, now held in Boston, charged with the murder of two Chinese here on Nov. 26 in connection with the tong war, the extraordinary grand jury failed to return indictment against him. Immediately afterward, State's Attorney Alcorn expressed himself as satisfied with the conclusion of the jury upon the evidence and later said that he would notify the attorney general of Massachusetts that so far as the state of Connecticut is concerned it is no longer interested in trying Yee Do Hong.

DANCER ISADORA DUNCAN REFUSED PASSPORT VISE

Berlin, Dec. 29.—Isadora Duncan, the dancer, who has been stopping in Berlin, has been refused a passport vise by the French embassy. Miss Duncan had stated she wished to visit Paris but the French officials, it was said, declined to vise her passport because of her alleged connection with the bolshevist movement when she visited Moscow.

McCoy Found Guilty Of Manslaughter

In California the Penalty For Manslaughter is One to Ten Years' Imprisonment.

Los Angeles, Dec. 29.—Kid McCoy, former pugilist was convicted in superior court late today of manslaughter in connection with the shooting here August 12, last of Mrs. Theresa Mors. The penalty is from one to ten years imprisonment.

When the verdict was read, McCoy's eyes became tear-dimmed as he sat at the end of the counsel table.

"I don't believe it was a just verdict," he said. "If I am not guilty as charged, I am not guilty at all. It was not a just verdict."

The prisoner then arose and in custody of bailiffs walked across the courtroom to comfort his three sisters, who were weeping.

Foreman F. W. Coulther, of the jury said that the verdict was a compromise—"the best we could do."

The jury, which was out longer than any other in the legal history of Los Angeles county, had been locked up for 73 hours when the verdict was returned at 5.06 o'clock tonight and had been in actual deliberation for 34 hours.

Twenty-four ballots were taken before the fate of the former prize fighter was read in open court. The jury was comprised of nine women and three men.

Superior Judge C. S. Crill had no comment to make other than: "I guess it was the best that they could do."

Several hundred persons, many of them women, and members of southern California's boxing circles, thronged the halls outside the courtroom when the verdict was announced.

Outside troops restored order. No loss of life was reported. Several establishments belonging to Americans and other foreigners were among those robbed.

Sentence will be passed Friday at 10 a. m. Defense attorneys announced tonight that notice of appeal would be filed at that time.

Mrs. Mors, divorced wife of Albert A. Mors, and joint owner with him of the Mors antique shop in a fashionable shopping district here, was found dead of a bullet wound in an apartment leased to "Mr. and Mrs. Shields."

Her body was discovered about 8 a. m. August 13. At about the same hour, McCoy is alleged to have entered the antique shop and held up several employes of the place, while he waited for the appearance of Mors, whom he announced he was going to "get."

The men, after handing over their money and valuables, were forced to remove shoes and trousers to prevent their escape; the women were allowed to wait unmolested.

As customers entered the place, they were similarly disposed of, until one of them, William G. Ross, made a break for liberty. He was shot in the thigh, and then, it was testified, McCoy went next door to the shop of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Schapp, and wounded them.

About this time police investigating the death of "Mrs Shields," learned the dead woman was Mrs. Mors, and that "Mr. Shields," was Kid McCoy.

They launched a search for the former pugilist. It was scarcely underway before telephone reports reached the central police station that Kid McCoy had run amuck in the West Seventh street district, and shot several persons.

In the midst of the reports came word from relatives of McCoy that he had visited his sister's home during the night and confessed to her he had killed a woman.

McCoy had by this time left the vicinity of the antique shop shooting, and meekly gave himself up to a patrolman. He was finally brought to police headquarters and after a period of utter silence, talked freely, explaining that Mrs. Mors death as suicide, which he had vainly struggled to prevent.

FRANCE NOT MOVING TO REPUDIATE DEBT

Washington, Dec. 29.—(By the A. P.)—Hints that France might be moving toward a disavowal of her war debt to the United States were repudiated unconditionally tonight by the French embassy after they had caused an unaccustomed holiday season stir in Washington.

Embassy officials not only reiterated the intention of their government to meet its obligations but declared the widespread apprehension that suddenly enveloped the American capital today had been evolved from a set of circumstances which in themselves had no international insignificance.

The incident apparently had its genesis in the publication of a new balance sheet by the French ministry of finance, in which all reference to the debt to the United States was omitted.

79 YEAR OLD WOMAN WAS INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

New Haven, Dec. 29.—Mrs. Edla Hemingway, 79 years old of Watertown, Conn., was seriously injured late today when the automobile in which she was riding collided with another machine at Whitney avenue and East Rock road. At St. Raphael's hospital it was found that she was suffering from a fractured hip with possible internal injuries. Her condition was declared to be serious.

According to the police, Mrs. Hemingway was riding in the rear seat of a sedan with her husband and the machine was being operated by John Brown, a chauffeur. The second machine in the collision was operated by John Cole of this city.

TWO DEATHS AT GRADE CROSSING IN LEE, MASS.

Lee, Mass., Dec. 29.—Alden Smith of Lee, was killed and his mother, Mrs. Ives Smith, also of Lee, received injuries from which she died later today when their automobile was struck by a Pittsfield-New York express on the New Haven railroad at a crossing a short distance from the railroad station here.

TO INQUIRE ABOUT BRITISH EMBARGO OF POTATOES

Washington, Dec. 29.—A message directing Ambassador Kellogg to ascertain and report the facts concerning the promulgation by the British government of the embargo on importation of American potatoes into England and Wales, effective Dec. 20, was dispatched late today by Secretary Hughes.

Four of Family Were Found Shot to Death

Mrs. Emma Harbough, Aged 30, Lone Survivor, Was Arrested at Home of Neighbor

Logansport, Ind., Dec. 29.—Refusing to answer questions regarding to deaths of four members of her family but talking volubly of alleged ill treatment at their hands, Mrs. Emma Harbough, aged 30, a widow, rested in the county jjail here tonight.

She was arrested late this afternoon by Sheriff Walter Boyer at the home of Thomas Sheets, about four miles from the Bassler home, where shortly after noon, Henry Bassler, 69, Mrs. Harbough's father; Catherine Bassler, 60, her mother; John Bassler, 22, her brother, and Viola Harbough, aged three, her daughter, were found with their heads partly blown away, by the discharge of a shotgun.

Mrs. Harbough visited the home of Lyman Yantis early today and called on the telephone the Rev. Henry Mullins, pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist church of the city. Yantis said Mrs. Harbough told the minister her brother had knocked her down and that if she had a shotgun she would kill him. Yantis said he paid little heed to the woman's threat as the family quarrelled continually.

When neighbors failed to observe any signs of life about the Bassler home, they investigated and found the bodies of the elder Bassler and his granddaughter in the home and, after a further search, the bodies of Mrs. Bassler and her son were found in the barn lot, some distance from the house. The four were believed to have been killed in the house, as it bore evidence of a terrific struggle.

POSTAL RATES INCREASE ATTACKED AT HEARING

Washington, Dec. 29.—Proposed increases in postal rates were assailed again today before the joint congressional sub-committee conducting hearings on the administration measure providing for raises in rates on virtually all classes except letter mail.

While protests were made against increases in all classes of mail, second class rates received principal attention from today's witnesses. Representatives of publishers reiterated opposition to an increase in this class but spokesmen for the Direct Mail Association of the Associated Advertisers' Clubs of the World, argued that if any increases were to be made this class should stay the brunt of the boost.

Chairman Moses called the committee into session again for tomorrow when hearings will be resumed in an effort to get the bill before the senate by next Monday when Coolidge's veto of the postal salary increase bill comes up for debate.

John H. Wright, New York magazine publisher and representing the Mail Advertisers' Association, told the committee "this is not the moment for increases if you want American industry to go on and prosper.

Cranston Williams, manager of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' association, declared the proposed increase in second class rates represents the difference between profit and loss to publishers of the smaller papers. Asking more time to consider the cost ascertainment report compiled by the postoffice department, Mr. Williams said the organization was willing to pay for its share of postoffice expenses.

Richard H. Lee, speaking for the Direct Mail Association, in insisting that the bulk of any increases should be placed on second class mail, if they are necessary, declared the cost ascertainment report showed this class now resulted in a loss of $75,000,000 annually to the government and that it should be made to pay more than $10,000,000 of the $68,000,000 proposed to be raised by the bill.

Rapid progress was made with consideration of the bill which is the largest peace-time supply measure ever before congress, carrying nearly three-quarters of a billion dollars. Taken up under an agreement limiting debate to three hours, general discussion was completed after little more than half of the text had been read.

Prohibition enforcement was assailed during the debate. Representative Hill, republican, Maryland, complaining about the cost, which he declared would exceed $28,000,000 during the coming fiscal year, while Representative Luguardia, republican, New York, declared three or four times as much money as is now being spent must be made available for enforcement activities if the federal government is to get anywhere in its effort.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS STUDYING GERMAN NOTE

Geneva, Dec. 29.—(By the A. P.)—Further study of the German note requesting the competent authorities of the league to take up and consider Germany's desire to be allowed to determine for herself what military sanctions, if any, she should participate in against any aggressor state in the event of Germany joining the league of nations has given league officials here the impression that what Germany really seeks is neutrality, such as is enjoyed by Switzerland under the league covenant, and that she wishes to join the league within in any way endangering her friendly relations with Russia.

It is believed here that any action by the league members will be linked up with the future action of the great powers on the report of the inter-allied board concerning the present armament situation in Germany.

STAFF GAVE DINNER TO GOVERNOR TEMPLETON

Waterbury, Dec. 29.—All the members of the governor's staff with the exception of Colonel and Governor-elect John H. Trumbull, gave a dinner to Governor C. A. Templeton at the Waterbury club tonight, as a farewell to their chief who goes out of office next month.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT $11,000,000 IN P. O. BILL FOR

Bill With That Provision Was Approved by the House—Carries $783,120 More Than the Budget Estimates—Also Voted Without Amendment an Allotment of $20,597,835 For Coast Guard Activities, Part of Which Would Be Used to Combat Rum Runners — This Amount Exceeds by $11,753,706 the Total Appropriated For This Year.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Provision in the treasury post office appropriation bill for expenditure of $11,000 for prohibition enforcement during the coming fiscal year was approved today by the house.

No effort was made to alter the amount which is $341,770 less than the amount available this year but $783,120 more than budget estimates.

The house also approved without amendment an allotment of $20,597,835 for coast guard activities, part of which would be available for curbing rum running. This amount is $11,753,706 more than the total appropriated for this year.

Mr. Laguardia, advocating vigorous enforcement of the Volstead law so long as it is on the statute books, contended there was imperative need for a radical shakeup in the prohibition enforcement force and of a change in policy.

ACTIVITY RENEWED IN NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

New York, Dec. 29.—Trading in stocks was galvanized into renewed activity today as the market entered upon its final lap of the year. Prices, however, fluctuated in highly erratic fashion, an outburst of profit-taking checking an early advance which had lifted more than three score issues to new peak prices for the year. For the first time in ten days, sales exceeded 2,000,000 shares.

General Electric crossed 300 to the highest point since 1902 and closed slightly below this figure for a net gain of 5 1-8 points. Factors which contributed to the sensational rise of more than 100 points in the stock this year have been the enormous appreciation in the quoted value of its holdings of public utility securities, valued at close to $78,000,000 at the end of 1923, and reports that an impending splitup of the stock might take form at a special meeting this week.

Fisher Body mounted nearly 18 points to 240, the highest price in its history. Simms Petroleum established a new high price at 24 on an initial turnover of 10,000 shares.

Thirteen of the day's new high records were established by copper stocks, including Anaconda, Chile, Inspiration and Cerro De Pasco.

U. S. Steel common sold at 121, the highest since 1917, following publication of Chairman E. H. Gary's optimist predictions for 1925 business.

HAS CONFIDENCE IN JURORS FOR RUM CASES

Washington, Dec. 29.—The department of justice, after further conferences today on the Weehawken rum cases, announced it had confidence in such jurors as would be drawn from Hudson County, N. J., for trial of the rum cases there.

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general, announced that she had gone over the whole Weehawken situation with Col. George Y. Vickers, special prosecutor of the Weehawken cases.

Declarations by some groups in New Jersey that the probability of obtaining a "wet" jury in Hudson county was great, was met by Mrs. Willebrandt with the assertion that "a reputed antagonism to the prohibition law has never been, within the experience of the department of justice, by reason to discount the probity and adherence to duty on the part of jurors to whom evidence is presented of official corruption."

TWO BANDITS CONTINUE TO OPERATE IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Dec. 29.—Two identified men, armed with revolvers, held up an automobile delivery wagon of the Meat Company in the Morris Cove section late today and took $15, the [illegible] collections, from the driver, Jacob Schwatz, according to the story he told to the police.

Schwatz said that one of the men jumped onto the running board of the machine and holding his gun close to the driver's face, compelled him to stop the car. The men then demanded the money and after securing the $15 dashed away and soon had disappeared. The driver returned to the laundry and reported the theft to his employer.

This was the third attempt made to rob Schwatz in four weeks. On the first two occasions he succeeded in getting away from the hold-up men. He has been in the employ of the laundry company for 12 years.

ACTION TAKEN BY STATE TUBERCULOSIS COMMISSION

Hartford, Dec. 29.—The state tuberculosis commission today accepted the new receiving building at the Meriden state tuberculosis sanatorium which was recently completed at a cost of approximately $39,000. The acceptance followed inspection by the commission accompanied by the architect and contractor. The new building has two 15-bed wards besides several rooms which will be used for laboratories and isolation wards. The total cost of erection was about $3,000 less than the state appropriation. Walter T. Arnold, of Meriden was the architect and Lewis Miller, of Meriden, the contractor. The commission also inspected the Gaylord sanatorium at Wallingford today.

TEN MORE ARRESTS FOR SIR LEE STACK MURDER

Cairo, Dec. 29.—Ten more persons, arrested in connection with the murder of Sir Lee Stack, the Egyptian sirdar, were liberated today. Among those given their freedom were Sheikh Ghayati, a deputy and [illegible] of the Wafd, and Hassan Yassin, also a deputy and leader of the so-called student army whose activities have been a conspicuous feature of the Zaghoul movement.

STATEMENT BY LEADER OF REVOLT IN MOROCCO

Gibraltar, Dec. 29 (By the A. P.)—Abd-Al-Krim, leader of the rebellious Moroccan tribesmen against whom Spain for some time has been waging war, today issued a proclamation to his forces summarizing the existing situation, from the Moroccan standpoint, and declaring that "the future could not appear brighter for us nor blacker for Spain if she insists upon remaining in our territory."

"Our enemies have been spreading reports of peace negotiations between Spain and the Riff republic," the proclamation stated. "This is not the exact truth. Since the formulation of the existing government of this nation a year ago, Spain has not ceased sending emissaries to treat with us. But we have repelled them with contempt, telling the government and nation with whom we are fighting that we cannot deal with them on equal terms since we are the victors and they are the vanquished.

"Therefore, we Islamite warriors must impose conditions which, in the event they are not accepted, will mean a continuance of the war until not an inch of Moroccan territory is profaned by Spanish feet and we have thrown the Spaniards back to the shores of Andalusia. The conditions we impose upon the vanquished and humiliated nation, thanks to your valor and constancy and the protection of Allah, are those decided by you in the meeting of the tribal chieftains. We will not change these conditions. They are:

"Recognition of the republic of the Riff whose frontiers will be formed by the mouth of the river Kert and the river Martil, in which territory not a single Spanish position may remain nor warships of the vanquished nation exercise vigilance along the coast; Spain must agree not to engage Mussulman troops, transferring those in the service here to the orders of the government of the Riff republic; delivery of all Moroccan prisoners without ransom, at the same time paying a heavy sum for the ransom of Spanish prisoners we captured during the last glorious campaign in which our traditional enemy lost more men and materials and suffered more humiliations than three years ago.

"The Riff republic is in reality being talked about in the entire world's press. It possesses more than 50,000 warriors and a profusion of rifles, while shortly it will possess several millions for ransoms. In addition, it will have materials of every kind taken from Spain, besides money paid by that country for permission to evacuate numerous possessions in Jebala. With these resources we shall acquire anti-aircraft guns, more motor boats and other elements."

NEW EVIDENCE ABOUT DEATH OF MRS. SCHMIDT

Middletown, Dec. 29.—Police investigating the death of Mrs. Casper Schmidt, who was shot and almost instantly killed when a gun exploded in the Schmidt home Christmas eve, reported late today that new evidence in the case had been discovered: They refused to disclose the ture of the evidence, declaring that more time was needed in which to investigate it. Casper Schmidt, photographer and husband of Mrs. Schmidt was arrested shortly after the death of Mrs. Schmidt on a charge of manslaughter and was given his freedom under bonds of $5,000.

Because of the request of the police for further time in which to investigate the case, Coroner L. A. Smith announced today that he would not hold his inquest before Friday. He expects to have 20 witnesses when the inquest is held.

SAYS THE "EVERGREEN THIEF" IS DISAPPEARING

Hartford, Dec. 29.—The "evergreen thief" is rapidly disappearing, Edison Stocking, patrolman for the Talcc Mountain Protective association, declared today at the office of State Forester Austin F. Hawes. Only one arrest and prosecution was made during the pre-Christmas season in his territory for stealing of evergreens and young fir trees. He said that in previous years from five to 25 arrests had been made for this offense. A more general knowledge of the law concerning the purloining of the greens is advanced as the reason for the decline in thefts. The one person arrested this year pleaded ignorance of the law.

ARTURO TOSCANINI TO COMPLETE UNFINISHED OPERA

Milan, Dec. 29.—Arturo Toscanini, formerly musical director of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and former director of the orchestra at La Scala here, has promised to complete the unfinished opera, "Turandot" of the late Giacomo Puccini. The opera will be finished next season and will be produced at La Scala.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
Willimantic Office, 771 Main Street
Telephone 1131
Office Hours: 9:30 to 12 m.; 1:30 to 6 p. m.

The cases of George N. Beardow of Taftville and Thomas A. Butler of Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs, were taken up in the police court here Monday morning. Both men were charged with reckless driving, in connection with a collision of cars owned by them at the corner of Walnut and Valley streets Saturday afternoon. Prosecuting Attorney Samuel B. Harvey, who was a witness to the accident, stated that he was entitled to have the cases nolled on the payment of the costs of the court, and this was agreeable to Judge Frank H. Foss. The men paid $5.15 each and agreed to a settlement of the damages to their machines.

In the death of John Colling, 75, Willimantic suffered the loss of one of its most respected and widely known residents. As stated in Monday's Bulletin death occurred at the family home, 107 Main street, Sunday after an illness of several months. Mr. Collins was born in Brewer, N. H., Aug. 12, 1849, a son of John and Julia Lane Collins. He leaves besides his wife, Mrs. Lydia Collins, three daughters, Mrs. Joseph Mango of Springfield, Mass., Mrs. R. Lowell Meads and Miss Edith Collins of this city, and two sons, John L. and Sylvester L. Collins, also of Willimantic. Mr. Collins had been employed by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company for a number of a century and during that time worked in the bridge and building construction department. He was formerly superintendent of the city sewer department for nineteen years during that time he supervised the construction of the present pavement on Main street.

Noting the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Worden of Canterbury, thirty-five relatives and friends gathered at their home Sunday for a turkey dinner and reception in the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Worden were presented a purse of $100 in gold from relatives and intimate friends and received other valuable gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Worden were both born in the Berkshires and were married in Lee, Mass., in 1874. They came to this city and Mr. Worden found employment with the old Willimantic Linen company and later was a member of the Willimantic power department which it was conducted under the borough system. At times they resided in Lee, Taftville and South Windham, eventually returning here, and for the past four years have lived in Conantville. They have two sons Rutherford H. Worden of this city and Harry A. Worden of Providence, and a daughter, Mrs. Edna Bussiere of Pittsfield, and four grandchildren, Margaret and James Ryan of Pittsfield and Theodore and Caroline Worden of this city.

Rev. Andrew S. Muirhead united in marriage last Wednesday evening at the Methodist parsonage Miss Leona E. Bullock of 10 Pearl street and Louis J. Stimpson, also of this city. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Paulson. A reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Walker followed the wedding and was attended by relatives and intimate friends. The newlyweds are both employed at the American Thread company plant here. After Jan. 1 they will reside at 10 Pearl street.

Lydia, 75, widow of James French, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John H. Norton, 4 East Main street, South Farms, Middletown, Sunday noon. Surviving her are four sons, Ernest E., Harry A. and George E. of Meriden and Walter A. French of Boston, and four daughters, Mrs. Edward E. Mitchell of West Springfield, Mrs. Herbert Beauchamp of Meriden, Mrs. John H. Noble of Middletown and Mrs. Oliver Beauchamp of this city.

After continuance a number of times the case of Frederick Costello, charged with reckless driving of an automobile in the accident of Nov. 29 when the machine struck a wagon and severely injured the driver, E. Abraham Kusnetz, Coventry, was resumed in the Mansfield town court Saturday. A plea of nolo contendere was entered for the defense by Attorney King, and Justice of the Peace George H. Andrews imposed a minimum fine of $25 and costs after finding Costello guilty. The assessment of $39 was paid. No evidence was heard during the trial. Kusnetz sustained three fractured ribs and minor abrasions about the body, necessitating his confinement to St. Joseph's hospital for several days.

Dancing to music by a high class orchestra, special vaudeville acts and a buffet luncheon supplemented with a number of pleasant surprises for all will make the annual New Year's frolic by Willimantic lodge, No. 1311, B. P. O. E., New Year's eve at the Alcove Theatre. The affair will be limited to members and their guests. Drawing the plans for the dance are committee headed by Exalted Ruler Edward Congdon, Gilbert L. Bowen, Michael Jongson, J. Z. Marion and Donald E. Crane.

Rev. Frederick F. Foshay, pastor of the South Windham church, left a broken collar bone and a Christmas eve while on his way to St. Paul's church to attend the midnight services. Rev. Mr. Foshay continued to the services and ministered the pain, when a physician was summoned and the break in the bone was discovered.

RESINOL

Injuries were caused to two men, and three others in the party were shaken up, late Saturday night in Somers when the car in which they were riding skidded and overturned on the highway. The men were officials of the manufacturing department of the local plant of the American Thread company and were returning from a business trip to Holyoke, Mass. Albert N. Caufield sustained the most serious results, his suffering being in the form of a shock from being pinned under the machine. David Moxon was also pinned under the car, and William Martin sustained a cut on the head. The other members of the party were Theodore Morrisette and Timothy J. Connelly.

A New Year's greeting card was received at the Chamber of Commerce rooms Monday morning from Mrs. Mary Frances White of Wauna, Washington. Mrs. White was a teacher in the First district and Natchaug schools from 1866 to 1875, and a few of the older residents hereabouts remember her with favor.

An attendance of dance and music lovers which crowded the Al-Pierre Tabarin Saturday evening heard the White Fleet orchestra, late of the S. S. Leviathan, of twelve musicians. The calibre of the music was such that upon general request a return engagement was arranged for the orchestra. The midweek dance Wednesday night will be omitted due to the annual Elks' Frolic at the hall.

"DRY" AGENTS WILL STOP NEW YEAR LIQUOR PARTIES

That co-operation between federal, state and town and city authorities and the state's attorney's office is greater today than ever before in the enforcement of the prohibition law was the statement made by Federal Prohibition Enforcement Chief Wheeler of Hartford Friday. He pointed out that the chiefs of police in the various cities and the state police department, under the supervision of Robert T. Hurley, are ready to do all they can at any time to stop the manufacture and sale of liquor in Connecticut.

The statement was made by the federal officer while he was speaking of Christmas and New Year's celebrations. All the road houses and hotels will be covered on New Year's eve, he said. In co-operation with the federal men, local police forces and state policemen will work as they have been doing in the past year. Every effort is being made by them to prevent the "wet" parties which have been characteristic of this time of year.

Not only is the coast guard keeping a close watch on boats, but the state police and federal agents also are keeping a careful outlook for vehicles bearing the liquor along the state highways. Every important road over which liquor might be brought will be watched.

Police in cities and towns are co-operating with other officials to the greatest possible extent. They have plans in operation for stopping the liquor traffic within their respective limits. With such co-operation, Mr. Wheeler believes a long step has been taken toward enforcement of prohibition. He called attention to the New Year's present awaiting bootleggers who may attempt to defy the law in the state—a penalty of as much as two years in the state's prison and a fine as high as $2,000.

One of the prohibition officials said that no one is safe today in taking a drink of liquor unless he knows for a certainty that that particular stuff has been in his home before prohibition. He showed some examples of counterfeit labels and revenue stamps and foil caps taken in a raid in a Connecticut town recently. He told of what wholesale counterfeiting bootleggers are doing to fool their patrons. In one particular case a bottle of alleged whiskey with the mark of a certain famous brand was taken. It bore the label of a distillery in Scotland. Also government protection, a label bearing the license of the distillery, number, rights, and other data and a perfect imitation foil cap. Indeed, the bottle would make most anyone believe that it was "real, pre-war stuff." The officer had several such bottles of various shapes and sizes, only examples for evidence taken from large lots. The particular case here mentioned was whiskey made in Connecticut from denatured alcohol through a process of re-distilling.

LIEUT. LESLIE ARNOLD, WORLD-FLIER IN NEW LONDON FOR WELCOME TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Dec. 29.—Lieut. Leslie Arnold, U. S. A., one of the army fliers, who gained fame on the world flight several months ago, and who will be tendered a rousing welcome by his townspeople at the Lyceum theatre tomorrow night, has arrived in New London and is the guest of Dr. Joseph M. Ganey, of Williams street.

Announcement is made of the wedding of Albert Paulhus, of Steward street, and Miss May Brutzman, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Brutzman, 33 Williams street. The marriage took place Dec. 16th and at the Church of the Assumption, at Providence. Mr. Paulhus is employed in Providence and he and his bride will make their home in that city.

Miss Loretta Rowley, 16 Linden street, is in Philadelphia, where she will remain over New Year's.

William F. Cushman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Cushman, 78 Washington street, and Miss Helen Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Williams, Portland, Me., were married at the rectory of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church last Friday night. John P. Cushman, a brother of the groom, was best man, and Miss Catherine L. Cushman, sister of the groom, attended the bride. Mr. Cushman is employed in New York, in which city they will reside.

Louis Anello and Ambrose Cassara have purchased the dwelling, 263 Montauk avenue, owned by Mrs. Anna Mueller Seyfried. The price paid was $10,000

Miss Fannie P. Gleason died this morning at the residence of her sister, Mrs. John Coast, 335 Broad street. Miss Gleason is survived by a sister, Mrs. Patrick A. Sheridan, other than by Mrs. Coast, and by a brother, John Gleason, of Lawrence, Mass.

J. C. Reade of Springfield, Mass., has returned to his home, having visited his sister, Miss Ida M. Reade, principal of the school of nursing of the Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital.

A. C. Josselyn, 17 Home street, was in the police court this morning, charged with operating his automobile while under the influence of liquor. The case was continued until tomorrow morning. Josselyn furnished bond of $100 for appearance. Josselyn was operating his automobile on Bank street late Sunday night and encountered a commercial truck, owned and operated by Frederick Walsh, 50 High street. Mystic, near the corner of Howard street. The machines came together with a crash, both cars being damaged. Josselyn plainly showed evidence of having been drinking and was taken into custody.

Miss Katherine M. Brindiville, the superintendent of Lawrence hospital, has returned to the institution, having visited with her brother, J. J. Prindiville, at Framingham, Mass.

Catherupo Bruno, known also as Charlie O'Brien, gave the police court a most persistent game of talk this morning when he was presented on a charge of intoxication. Bruno was drunk when arrested Saturday night and he was still under the influence of liquor when the court convened today, for he had been at liberty on a bail bond since Sunday. Bruno was found in a struggle with a Chinese laundryman when Sergeant Howard passed John street, Saturday night. The laundry man was telling him he would kill him, but Bruno continued a conversation about everything but the cause of the conflict with the man of duds and suds. Finally the pair separated and then it was seen that Bruno could not navigate. In court this morning he pleaded not guilty and started right into talk until Judge Prince could silence him only by imposing a penalty. He made it thirty days in jail. That silenced Bruno as if he had been hit with a club.

The Learned Mission will vacate its building on Bradley street Thursday and will retire from a possession it has held for more than half a century. Santa Claus will guide the mission Sunday school children away and take them to the new home of the mission, on Main street at Federal, where the deed of transfer will be presented with some ceremony. The children are to gather at the old mission building at 2 p. m. and after a brief ceremonial there they will quit the place forever. The new home will be used for the Christmas celebration by the Sunday school and the children will be given their gifts from a tree. The new home is to be well managed and be made attractive for all who visit it and receive its good offices. When the new home is occupied the Main street property will be devoted to religious and associated work, but the mission will have a new place for conducting its weekly work.

The Marcus building, next south of the former mission chapel, in North Bank street, is being converted in the second story to be a place that will serve exceedingly well for the care of the homeless and the shiftless who wander in frequently for food and shelter. Beds are to be placed along the entire west side of the second story, a kitchen is to be established there and it is likely that baths will be a part of the equipment for the wanderers. The room is now being sealed and painted and the walls finished in plaster. Supt. Mansfield is anticipating a great year's work for the mission.

Nicholas Johnson, of the U. S. S. Downes; Mrs. Carl Hurlburt and infant daughter, Gales Ferry; Mrs. Merle Chandler and infant daughter, Nameaug avenue; Lawrence Chappell, Jr., West street; Thomas Sheffield, Ocean avenue; Miss Dorothy Landgraff, Mystic, and Dennis Mahoney, Potter street, patients at the Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

Miss Gladys Siswick, of Hope Valley, R. I., daughter of J. P. Siswick, today completed her course of training at the Lawrence hospital. Miss Siswick, who attained the highest average of the six students of the hospital who passed the recent state examination for nurses, will engage in district nursing in this city.

Jessie Dean, wife of Henry Small, of Niantic died Sunday at Lawrence hospital, in which institution she had been under treatment for about ten days. Besides her husband, Mrs. Small is survived by two sons, Grenville and Reginald Small, of Philadelphia.

At 5 o'clock this afternoon children of the public schools had Christmas exercises at a Community Christmas tree on the Mercer lot, corner of Meridian and Church streets. The children sang Christmas carols and their entertainment was enjoyed by a large group of men and women and several city officials.

The case of Emilio Scussel, of Ledyard avenue, Groton, was nolled by Judge Cornelius C. Costello in the Groton town court this morning on the grounds of insufficient evidence of a charge of reckless driving. Scussel's car was in collision with a machine owned and operated by Mesolmeno Subillo, of Thames street, Groton, on the night of the 18th inst. Scussel was taken into custody by State Police Officer W. W. Wood from Groton barracks.

George Bishop, a sailor stationed at the Submarine Base was charged with operating a naval truck that was not equipped with lights. The minimum fine of $1 and costs was imposed and the case was continued a week to permit Bishop to secure the money to pay his penalization. Lieut. Carlyle Craig appeared in court in defense of Bishop and declared that Bishop was acting under orders to operate the truck when arrested. When the truck was held up by State Police Officer Henry Albright, on the night of the 22nd inst., Bishop explained the failure of the truck to carry lights to the fact that the lights had just become extinguished. When the officer examined the lights it was found that no lights were in the sockets.

Miss Margaret Ahearn, 34 Prest street, is visiting friends in Greenwich.

John Sullivan, Union street, is a medical patient at Lawrence hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Daley and children have returned to their home in Boston, having spent several days as guests of Mrs. Daley's father, Thomas Haney, of Faire Harbour place.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome J. Collins quietly celebrated the 40th anniversary of their marriage this afternoon and evening at their abode, 44 Alger place. Mr. and Mrs. Collins were married by Rev. Michael H. May, of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, the nuptial ceremony being the first that the priest performed following his ordination. Rev. Father May is now rector of St. Patrick's church, Norwich.

Automobile thieves continue to operate in New Haven, stealing machines that are left parked in the streets. Tonight the police of that city requested the New London authorities to be on the alert for a Chrysler sedan that was stolen. The car bears Connecticut registration 6633.

The funeral of James Young, well known resident of Fishers Island, was held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Union chapel, Fishers Island and was attended by a large number of mourners, including a delegation of members of New London lodge of Elks, of which order Mr. Young was a member. The services were conducted by Rev. G. M. Cook. Burial was in Fishers Island cemetery.

Miss Doris Blaisdell has returned to New York where she is employed by the Rockefeller Foundation, having spent several days as the guest of Mrs. Theresa Hopkins, Broad street.

Robert J. Sisk, owner of the three story business and residence structure corner of Meridian and Church streets, which was damaged by fire early Sunday morning, today deeded Frank Zeka, an occupant of the building and employed as chef at the Y. M. C. A. cafeteria, who discovered the fire, $10.

Councilor Lucius E. Whiton has returned to his home, Pequot avenue, having spent several days with his daughter, Mrs. Harry Grumley, Lowell, Mass.

Miss Margaret Boyle, is in New York for several days, the guest of her sister, Mrs. John Herdt.

The city council was in session a brief half hour this evening, for there were only routine matters before it and these were disposed of in short order and without any hitch. Councilor Murray was absent. There were but three applications for building permits and these were for minor structures and alterations. They were granted at once. The city manager asked for permission to install metal fences about the old town mill pond, at Williams Memorial park where trespassers on adjoining property had become a nuisance and at Lake Konomoc where an enclosure is badly needed. The whole fencing required is of 3,600 feet. The council authorized bids for the same which will be asked for to cover all the work and for the different jobs. The required permission was granted.

The committee on the entertainment of Lieut. Leslie Arnold, the world round flier, reported through Mayor Clark that all arrangements for the welcome were complete. He said that at New Haven, where Lieut. Arnold spoke the hall accommodated but about 3,000 persons, while 7,000 or 8,000 sought admission. The New London committee had distributed tickets for the Lyceum and had arranged to give 450 of them to those who called for them.

It was voted to lay a sewer on the lower Boulevard and to assess the cost against property benefitted. The sewer will cost about $1,250. There was one application for an electric sign to be placed on Bank street. The application was referred to the city manager, with power.

Lieut. Leslie Arnold, the world flier, when he drove into town Monday occupied a new Packard car, a gift to him from the city of Chicago. Lieut. Arnold was in the plane Chicago all the way around the world and he came back in it safely. He is proud of the gift which represents a considerable sum of money and shows the appreciation of the people of Chicago. The lieutenant has met many boyhood friends here.

Mr and Mrs. Thomas Kane, married last week, have returned from their wedding trip and are at home to friends in this city.

A gang of men worked all night at the state pier anticipating a storm. They accomplished a lot of work and are prepared for any sort of weather that may come.

It is likely that if a heavy fall of snow comes Mayor Clark will be asked to set apart certain streets for the use of coasters. That practice has been followed in other cities.

The New London troop of Boy Scouts had a great time at the First Baptist church this evening where they had a Christmas tree and listened to addresses and talks by older persons. The evening was thoroughly enjoyable.

A RELIABLE COUGH REMEDY

Why experiment with unknown remedies for that cough or cold when you can secure Foley's Honey and Tar Compound? It is a safe and reliable remedy for the relief of coughs, colds, hoarseness. Equally beneficial for young and old. Mrs. Anna Cornell, Bridgeton, N. J. states: "I bought Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for my cold and find it great." Insist upon the genuine. Refuse substitutes. Few of the golden opportunities offered us will stand the acid test.

MISSING MARY FAVIO WAS MARRIED MONDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Dec. 29.—Miss Mary Favio, 4 High street, Groton, until a few days ago employed by the Tracey Chemical company, this city, and who was reported by her mother to the Groton and New London police, Saturday, as being missing from home, was married this afternoon by a justice of the peace at the town hall, Pequonoc. Her husband is Frederick Peltier, of this city. This forenoon the girl and her father, accompanied by Peltier, visited the New London police station, as a result of reading in the newspapers of the girl's disappearance from home. The couple then stated that they would be married during the day and they kept their promise.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

Police activities Sunday resulted in several arrests, four charged with breach of the peace and one summoned to appear in borough court, charged with failing to give the right of way to a machine, which resulted in a collision of two cars in Haymarket square.

Harry Needham of Gold street was summoned by Officer Henry Heinold after an investigation of an accident near the Warren Memorial town hall Sunday afternoon in which Needham's machine and one operated by John Michalec, also of this town, were both damaged. Michalec was making the turn to the left, after going to the right of the silent policeman in the square, and Needham was proceeding toward River street from Furnace avenue. There were no personal injuries. Needham was charged with failing to give Michalec the right of way.

Officer Hulburt made the arrests in the cases of breach of the peace.

John DaDalt of Willington avenue, John DaDalt of Prospect street, Alfred DaDalt of Center street and Frank Cancini, also of the borough, were taken into custody by Officer Hulburt for creating a disturbance at the corner of High and Church streets in which, according to statements made to the police, the men exchanged blows. Each was released later in bonds of $25 for appearance in borough court.

Harry Webster of Stafford, a taxi driver, escaped serious injury early Monday morning when his machine, a Buick sedan, skidded in front of the office of the Warren Woolen company's plant on Furnace avenue, striking a tree and the iron railing leading to the office entrance. The machine was badly damaged, and after Chief of Police Hayes was notified it was taken to a local garage for repairs. Webster was returning from Glenville, after taking a resident of that section to his home, when the accident occurred. The icy street in front of the office, which forms a bend in the highway, was responsible for the mishap, as Webster was driving without chains.

Thomas Baxter of Somers, until recently a resident of this town, making his home with Howard Palmer in the Rocky Dundee section, was arrested by Officer Hulburt Sunday and held in the borough lockup pending a hearing in the justice court in Somers on charges of operating an automobile which under the influence of liquor, and without proper registration. He was taken to Somers Monday evening by Officer Hulburt.

The St. Jean Baptist society plans a New Year's eve dance which will feature old-fashioned dancing.

Alphee Soucy of New Haven, fined $100 and costs on a charge of operating a machine while under the influence of liquor, was taken to Tolland county jail Friday night when he was unable to pay the sum, totaling $123.50. He was arrested Christmas day by Officer Hulburt. Soucy had come here from New Haven to see his wife, formerly Miss Eldie Edwards of this town.

Charles H. Moore has been appointed to fill the vacancy in the board of selectmen caused by the appointment of Burt T. Eaton as first selectman. Mr. Eaton was appointed to fill the unexpired term of William R. Preble, who died recently at his home at Orcutts after serving as first selectman since 1914. Both appointments were made by the board of selectmen, although the office is elective and might have been filled by a special election.

HOPKINTON

The First Baptist church and the Second S. D. B. church joined in a Christmas exercise Sunday evening, Dec. 21st, at which a collection was taken for Near East relief.

The ground was thinly covered with snow, just enough to insure a white Christmas.

Christmas eve a pageant, White Gifts for the King, was given in the First Hopkinton S. D. B. church in Ashaway. Although the attendance was not large, an offering to the amount of $60.85 was received for relief work in China.

Among the visitors from out of town at their parents' home Christmas were Miss Dorothy Wheeler of Stafford, Conn., Miss Clara MacDonald of Flushing, L. I., Miss Dorothy Wells of Rockaway, N. J., Miss Helen Hill, Miss Ines Jordan, Miss Clara Hoxie of R. I. College of Education, Marcus Crandall and Donald Burdick.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cross and Miss Bessie Cross of Charlestown spent Christmas at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Welch.

George Jordan and family are occupying their new bungalow.

Mrs. Sarah F. B. Hood and Mrs. George A. Crandall have so far recovered from recent illness as to be about the house.

Lewis F Randolph has discontinued work for the Bradford Dyeing association and has gone into business for himself at Hopkinton City.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

With the close of the year at hand, another new record in building was established in 1924. More permits were issued during 1924 than in any previous year, but the total valuation on the new property falls far below the record of 1923. This is due largely to the few large buildings that have been erected in the city. There were more permits issued for new dwelling houses than ever before, but they were largely of the $5,000 and $6,000 type rather than of the more expensive kind. In the town, however, the valuation was greater than a year ago, as there has been a large amount of building just over the city line.

During the past quarter there were 78 permits issued for new buildings within the city limits by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton. The total valuation placed on the new buildings is $286,605, the largest item being the East Side school, which is valued at $100,000. The permits issued were:

New frame houses	18
New frame garages	36
New brick garages	3
New concrete garage	1
New brick schoolhouse	1
New brick voting booths	2
New frame shed	1
New frame store	1
Frame alterations and additions	13
Brick alterations and additions	1
Totals	78

Despite the extreme weather of the past week, good progress has been made on local building. At the Norwich state hospital work has continued to go on unhindered by the cold weather and it is expected that within several weeks the contractors will have finished and be ready to start on the third building, which is to be constructed as soon as arrangements can be made. There has been a noticeable increase in building in the West Side section, especially near Dunham street, on West Main street, where eight new dwellings have been erected and completed within the past few weeks.

The work on the new block for Peter Sellas on Franklin square is progressing as well as the weather will permit. It has been found that it will be necessary to put in new foundations, as the old walls were found to be incapable of holding the new structure.

Other projects have been rushed along with good speed during the past week and from all appearances the new year will get off to a good start.

New London

Extensive alterations are to be made to the former Home Memorial Hospital building, on Pequot avenue, which was purchased by H. E. Griswold & Son, 181 Connecticut ave. The house, familiarly known as The Moorings, will be remodeled with new electric wiring, new floors throughout, changed partitions and a new roof. When the proposed work is completed the building will be fitted for and used as a modern residence.

The permit has been issued to Benjamin A. Armstrong, 200 Hempstead street, for a garage on Howard street. The building will be of hollow tile and steel construction, 49x100 feet, one story high. The estimated cost is $10,00.

Alterations are being made to the store building on Bank street, of Max Abrams. One side of the store will be torn out and reconstructed of cement and stucco. The floor and ceiling will be raised and a new front erected. There will be a new plate glass show window and other improvements.

The permit has been issued to John Mondelci, 210 Shaw street, for a store building on Colman street. The building will be 20x26 feet, of frame construction, one story high. The cost will be about $1,500.

The cellar has been started for a house at the corner of Colman and Fuller streets for Harris Carnoroli. From private plans, the house will be of frame construction, 24x44 feet, arranged bungalow style, for one family. The cost is estimated at $4,000.

Joseph Mondelci, 272 Jefferson avenue has staked out ground on Ashcraft road extension for a frame dwelling which he is to build for himself. The house will contain two five-room flats. It will be 24x46 feet, with steam heat, hardwood finish and all conveniences.

Joseph A. St. Germain, 980 Bank street, is starting to develop property owned by him on Montauk avenue. Mr. St. Germain has prepared plans for a dwelling which he will build on the site. The house will be of frame construction, with all modern improvements.

Building Permits

Thomas F. Moran, frame dwelling, 899 Bank street, $6,000.

Arthur G. Burr, store, Willets avenue, $1,500.

Joseph Mondelci, frame dwelling, Ashcraft extension $5,000.

John Mondelci, store building, corner Colman and Fuller streets $4,000.

Max Abrams, alterations, Bank street, $1,500.

B. A. Armstrong, hollow tile garage, Howard street, $10,000.

Rosario Palizzi, concrete garage, Jefferson avenue, $400.

Number of permits issued for the week, 8; estimated cost of buildings, $29,900.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

There were 18 sales of real estate in Norwich during the past week exactly three times as many sales as for the corresponding week in 1923. The mortgage loans were $48,497 and $33,605.

In New London there were 5 sales of real estate as compared to 11 for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $27,400. and $36,750.

Record of Building Permits

The record of building permits issued in the leading Connecticut towns for the week show a slight gain over the figures of the like week of last year, while falling off from the figures of 1922. During the week 216 permits were issued for buildings costing $805,538, while in the similar week of 1923, 206 permits were issued for buildings costing $707,876, and in the corresponding week of 1922 there were 80 permits granted for buildings costing $1,192,073.

Building Will Show Increase

Building operations in the United States for the past year will exceed the figures for 1923 by about 4 1-2 per cent., according to the estimates of S. W. Straus & Co., based on official reports from 350 cities and towns. The figures given by the Straus Company show that the total cost of construction operations for which permits were issued and plans filed will be about $5,750,000,000. "Last year," says the company's statement, "the volume was $5,500,000,000, but aggregate operations this year, based on the amount of plans filed and building permits issued in the 350 leading centers, exceeds the 1923 total by about 4 1-2 per cent. In 1923 the gain over the previous year was 24 per cent. Inasmuch as building operations averaged about 3 per cent less in 1924 than in 1923, the gain in actual construction work was correspondingly larger than the increased financial outlay would indicate. During most of the year, building operations gained steadily and in considerable volume in the east and south, while there have been almost continual losses, though of small volume, in the far west and central states. The year closes with a building shortage of considerable magnitude confronting the industry. In the cities of more than 10,000 population alone this shortage is in excess of $4,000,000 with a very apparent shortage in places of less than 10,000 population. In addition about three-quarters of a billion dollars is to be expended during the next two years for churches, hospitals, charitable and educational institutions. These prospective operations are not included in the shortage figures." Whether or not the figures given above can be translated at the end of 1925 in terms of finished construction is a matter of some conjecture. Suffice to say that the outlook for the building trade for next year is encouraging with indications that the totals will be in excess of the past twelve months.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND NEVER SUSPECT IT

APPLICANTS FOR INSURANCE OFTEN REJECTED

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Of general interest to everyone who has the welfare of this section of eastern Connecticut at heart is the fact that the First National bank of Plainfield is to increase its surplus from $25,000 to $50,000 on January 1. Here is evidence of prosperity and growth based on excellent service to a public that is appreciative. Incidentally, this bank's savings department has grown tremendously during the past few years and is now several times larger than a decade ago. Samuel T. Butterworth is president of the First National of Plainfield and Benjamin Dawson, formerly with the Danielson Trust company, is its treasurer. With the increase of the surplus to $50,000 that fund will equal the capital stock.

The Sisters of St. Joseph's convent and in charge of St. James' school have expressed their thanks to the members of the Women's Catholic Welfare Council for gifts that made possible a Christmas party for the pupils at the end of the term just completed. The Christmas spirit had full sway at the school. There were appropriate exercises, both in English and in French, in all of the grades and each grade had a Christmas party. The lower grades enjoyed candy, popcorn and fruit arranged in dainty baskets, these given by the Welfare Council. The officers of the council are Mrs. L. E. Kennedy, president; Mrs. Clara Nadeau, vice president; Mrs. Katherine McCormack, secretary; Miss Elizabeth Grennon, treasurer; Mrs. A. Caron, charity committee.

The attention of fishermen who may not recall the fact is directed to the expiration of their fishing licenses tomorrow (Wednesday) at midnight. Up to 4 o'clock Monday afternoon only two fishing licenses for 1925 had been issued by Town Clerk Frank T. Preston. This would seem to indicate that many fishermen who are resident in Killingly have forgotten about getting their licenses, which they will need if they wish to fish on and after the first of the new year and escape being brought to court if caught fishing by game officials. This being the ice fishing season, there should be a rush for licenses today and tomorrow. Incidentally, all the hunters' licenses expire at midnight Wednesday and up to Monday afternoon only three such licenses had been issued by Town Clerk Preston. No great number of hunting licenses are issued during the winter season, but there are some who make a practice of taking them out in late December or early in January each year.

Monday morning at 11 o'clock, funeral services for William Whaley were held at his farm home near the Dorrance school house in the town of Foster. Rev. Harry St. John Fuller officiating. Numbers of relatives and friends attended the service. Burial was in the Lime Store cemetery. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Manufacturing concerns in Killingly will be closed Thursday in observance of the New Year's holiday. Thursday also will be a holiday for the store forces in establishments where a practice is made of closing on holidays. Excepting for some dances, the usual theater entertainments and housewarmings there will be no special observance of the holiday in Danielson as merry-makers are accustomed to celebrate in many communities.

At their final meeting of the year, held Monday morning, the directors of the Danielson Trust company voted the usual semi-annual dividend of three per cent and an extra dividend of 1 per cent, making a total of 7 per cent to the stockholders of the institution for 1924. The directors also voted to carry a substantial amount to surplus and to charge off a generous amount on the furniture and fixture account. Treasurer Clifford H. Starkweather said Monday afternoon that 1924 has been an exceptionally prosperous one for the bank in all its departments. Incidentally, its savings accounts will at the close of business tomorrow night show an increase of between $275,000 and $300,000 for 1924, a nice fortune in itself one might think if presented as a New Year's gift. Here is evidence that many prudent people were putting aside something for the future during 12 months that for many were not so productive of funds as other recent years.

Looking back over 1924, one finds that Danielson was engaged with various improvements tending to make the place more attractive and to bring benefits of various kinds to those who live and labor here and to those who make the place a trading center. Outstanding among the public improvements was the installation of a series of more powerful street lights in the business section and increasing the power of the lights in residential sections of the borough. A start was made also on what eventually is going to be an extensive sidewalk building campaign, a worthwhile project that has been advocated for several years. No large structures were built here during 1924, though men in the building trades were constantly busy on the construction of dwellings, on minor works, repairs and extensions. In the closing weeks of 1924 a start has been made on a new business and apartment block in the business section, this to be built for Augustus Longo. It is possible other business blocks will be projected in 1925, at least that is a matter under consideration. As an impressive an improvement as has been made in the business district was that carried out by the Standard Filling Station in erecting a property at the corner of Main and Academy streets. Another boost was given the central section of the borough by Myer Goldwater in developing as an attractive filling station, now under lease, of what was known as the Darbie property on Main street, opposite the Evans block.

Over at the county jail in Brooklyn, a number of bound-over prisoners are counting the days that intervene before their appearance in the superior court for Windham county in the early days of January. The criminal list for the January term will be a lengthy one and will enumerate various crimes with which prisoners, or those out under bond, will be charged in court. In the meantime a New Year holiday will intervene, though it may not be a very happy one for those held in custody awaiting presentation on more or less serious charges against the state.

King George Jacques, of East Killingly, is very busy these winter days, but he finds the time for successful hunts after white rabbits in territory not distant from his home.

Tomorrow night, the eve of New Year's, will find many Danielson people in nearby cities where it is forecasted, there will be much doing.

Having reigned quite supreme for the past ten days, Jack Frost has made it possible for skaters to get onto the Assawaga river and the larger lakes in this territory.

First strings of pickerel for this winter season have been taken from the ponds near East Killingly by men fishing through the ice. Ice fishermen will also be on Alexander's lake, where the ice was reported as at seven inches, today.

The usual schedule of service for holidays will be followed at the postoffice on New Year's day. There will be no deliveries either by city or rural carriers. The money order division will be closed. The office will close at 10 a. m. for the day, though the lobby will be open until 6.30. Mails will be received and despatched as usual.

Scores of loads of dirt taken from the excavations for the new Longo block have been used in grading the grounds fronting the School street school. The filling-in process there has been underway for several years, but no such impetus has been given the undertaking as the recent one and the locality will eventually look much the better for the change.

Tomorrow will be the last day on which the 1924 automobile markers may be used in Connecticut—their usefulness expiring at midnight Wednesday. Some belated applicants for 1925 plates will make trips from Danielson to Hartford or New London today or tomorrow, that their machines may not have to go out of commission.

Miss Gertrude Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Reynolds, has returned from a visit at Central Village with Miss Dolores Lagare.

Schools throughout the town will open Monday next for the winter term.

The first real prospect of an ice crop for Danielson is evident. Only a few more days of cold weather would allow of cutting to begin. Ice harvesting already is underway on some small ponds from which farmers take their supply of ice for the year.

Confronted by an armed and masked man in St. Mary's rectory, Winchendon, Mass., during the absence of the pastor, Rev. John P. Hockett and assistants, Mrs. Rachel St. Peter, the housekeeper, fought the intruder until she fell exhausted refusing to obey his command to divulge where the day's collection was kept.

PUTNAM

Members of the activities committee for the Grosvenordale post, American Legion, have been announced by Commander Philip Duhamel as follows: Patrick Molloy, Edward Rawson, John E. O'Clare, Victor Blanchard, Frank A. Pelletier, Philip Croteau, Anastasios Naum, N. Verne Rawson, Edward McKeon, John F. Reardon, Jr.

Residents of Putnam and the surrounding section shivered all day Monday the temperature ranging from four to fourteen below zero at an early morning hour to around zero, mostly above, at six o'clock in the evening. There was no wind which made the extreme cold more endurable.

The members of the Headquarters company of the 43rd division, National Guard, are doing everything possible to make their first ball a success. The committee in charge consists of First Lieutenant Rosario J. Beausoliel; Second Lieut. Owen J. White, Sergeants George W. Child and James J. Charron, Corporal A. J. Auger and Private S. W. Beausoliel.

The January criminal term of the superior court will begin its sessions in Putnam Tuesday, Jan. 6th, with Judge Newell H. Jennings of Bristol presiding. There are about 40 cases on the docket, but few of them very serious charges. The cases that will arounse the greatest interest ar those of the New Haven railroad men, Engineer Joseph C. Bartlett, and Conductor Joseph B. Noyes, charged with manslaughter, as the result of the death of Engineer William B. Carpenter in the collision at Mechanicsville on October 24th. The coroner's finding is the same in both cases, reading: "The undersigned coroner, within and for the county of Windham, having received notice of the death of William S. Carpenter of Putnam at the Day Kimball hospital on the 25th day of October, 1924, I viewed the body of said deceased and on the 30th day of October, 1924, at my office in Danielson, Conn., and on the 8th day of November, 1924, at Day Kimball hospital I held an inquest as to the cause and manner of said death. From the testimony taken at said inquest I find that William S. Carpenter died at Putnam, October 25th, 1924, from injuries received in a railroad collision on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad at Putnam on October 24th, 1924, and I further find that said death was caused by the criminal act and carelessness of Joseph C. Bartlett, the engineer, and Joseph B. Noyes, conductor of the freight train, involved in said collision.

The two trainmen were arrested directly after the inquest on the charge of manslaughter and released in bonds of $2,000 each.

At the meeting of the directors of the chamber of commerce at the Inn Monday noon the resignation of Daniel J. Byrne as treasurer was presented. Mr. Byrne told the directors that he had served in the capacity of treasurer for seven years, that his business duties—he is treasurer of the Putnam Savings bank—were taking more of his time, and that he felt that he was justified in asking that he be relieved. A vote of thanks for his faithful and efficient services was ordered placed on the record, and action on his resignation was deferred until the next meeting.

Miss Ella M. Boult of Pomfret spent Monday in Boston. Many friends of Miss Boult will take more than ordinary interest in the full page letter in the Book Review of the New York Times of Dec. 28 by Mrs. Laura Stedman Gould, wife of the late Dr. Gould, and daughter of Edmund Clarence Stedman, once a resident of Norwich. Mrs. Gould has been a frequent guest of Miss Boult, who was her father's secretary and associate editor of Stedman's American Anthology.

Miss Helene Wulf, a member of the faculty of the Burr and Burton Seminary, Manchester, Vt., is spending Christmas vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto E. Wulf, formerly of Norwich.

Funeral services for Eugene T. Williams, the colored Civil war veteran who died Christmas day, were held at his home in Harrisville, just across the Woodstock line, Sunday afternoon, Rev. N. B. Burton of the Methodist church officiating. The funeral was largely attended, Mr. William having made and held many friends during his long residence in Putnam. All of his children were present, George H. Williams of Providence, Alonzo H. Williams of Putnam, Eugene P. Williams of Danielson, Mrs. Mary E. Woodson of West Groton, Mass., and Mrs. Selia E. Woodson of Danielson. Mrs. Louisa Munroe of Boston, the only surviving sister of the deceased was also at the service.

The bearers were Floyd Scott, Edward Williams, Daniel Washington of Boston, and Joseph Woodson of Danielson. Burial at Grove Street cemetery.

At the request of the state authorities the hearing of the fourteen residents of Putnam arrested Thursday charged with violation of the liquor laws was postponed until this (Tuesday) morning at nine o'clock. The hearing was to have been Monday morning and the city court room in the municipal building was crowded. The defendants, eleven men and the wives of three of them, were a small assemblage in themselves. Their friends and interested spectators swelled the number to large proportions. Judge Geissler announced that the hearing would be continued until Tuesday morning and that the bonds of the defendants would be continued for another day. Attorney Irving H. Miron represents twelve of the fourteen.

WESTERLY

The funeral Monday at 8.30 o'clock of Mrs. Patrick Nestor, was held from her home, 51 Summer street. In the solemn requiem mass at the church of the Immaculate Conception at 9 o'clock, Rev. P. J. Clune of Plainfield, N. J., was celebrant, Rev. Francis McShane, O. P., of Washington, D. C., was deacon, Rev. Henry Bruno, S. M., subdeacon and Rev. Daniel F. Sullivan, S. M., master of ceremonies. In the sanctuary were Rev. Austin O'Toole and Rev. John Dunn of Providence and Rev. David I. Quinn of Wakefield.

The services were attended by a large number of relatives and friends of the deceased, who was a well known resident of Westerly for the past fifty years.

Burial was in St. Michael's new cemetery. The bearers were Richard J. Butler, James G. Butler, Dr. M. H. Scanlon, William Dolan, Philip Quinn and Mark Sullivan.

In Westerly the record for the sale of Christmas seals were broken this year, according to the final report made by the Westerly committee. All reports from workers are in and the total sales were $1,080. More than $800 of this will be used in Westerly for local work against tuberculosis. Mrs. Calvert B. Cottrell was in charge of the drive this year. The report summary follows: Schools, $524.26, of which Elm Street school led with $142.66; factories and industries, $230, of which C. B. Cottrell & Sons led with $50; stores, $140.87, women's clubs $91.50. The remainder came from theatres, library, post office and booth sales.

Councilman Louis J. Rossi of Westerly was a business caller in Providence Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis L. Burdick returned to their home in Westerly Sunday night, after passing the Christmas holidays with their daughter in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Morris Stralsin was a Pawcatuck business visitor in Boston Monday.

Jerome O'Connell is with his mother, Mrs. Michael O'Connell, on Beach street for the holiday vacation.

George Moore returned to his home in Port Chester, N. Y., Saturday by automobile, after being the guest Christmas of his brothers, James and Raymond, in Pawcatuck. He was accompanied on his return by his sister, Miss Mae Moore and by Mrs. Perry Clarke of Pawcatuck, who is to be the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Albert G. Tucker, in New Haven.

STONINGTON

The Second Congregational church of Stonington, one of the oldest of the town and state, is to be without a regular pastor shortly, as Rev. Dwight C. Stone, pastor for the past 20 years, has resigned. This church is one of the daughters of the original church, the First, or Road church, so called, of Stonington, having stood for the past 91 years, making it one of the oldest churches in the country. The mother church, being the oldest in the state, celebrated its 250th anniversary of its organization Sunday, Aug. 31st, last. This organization can boast of three daughters—the Second Congregational church, the Congregational church, Pawcatuck and Mystic Bridge Congregational church. It was organized Sept. 28, 1833, with 45 members. The first pastor was Rev. John C. Nichols, a native of Westbrook, who was installed May 15, 1834. The present structure was built soon afterwards and was dedicated April 12, 1835. The Rev. Mr. Nicholls closed his pastorate with the church April 20, 1839. Following are the next pastors of the church in order: Rev. Jonathan Erskine Edwards of Hartford, from April 7, 1840, to April 13, 1842; Rev. William Cliff, a native of Griswold, Conn., pastor from 1844 to 1864, being here the longest term in the history of the church. Rev. Edward Whiting Gilman, a native of Norwich, graduate of Yale in 1843, was next called. He served from Sept. 14, 1864, till 1866. During his stay the present parsonage was purchased at a cost of $5,000. The present chapel was built and dedicated Dec. 29, 1869. A fine tone organ was purchased in December, 1870, and is being used now by the organist, Mrs. Joseph Hammond, who has served 25 years. The fifth minister called was Rev. Henry Atherton Wales of Attleboro, Mass.; he served from Aug. 13, 1871, till Aug. 2, 1874. Rev. Henry Barnes Elliot, a native of Woodstock, N. Y., served from Aug. 15, 1874, till April 1, 1880. Rev. Henry Burnham Mead, of Littleton, N. H., served next, from March 3, 1880. He declined to be installed but served as pastor-elect. In 1883 the church was remodelled and re-decorated at an expense of over $4,000. Mr. Mead closed his work here July 23, 1884. Rev. Charles Jenkins Hill of Portland, Me., served from 1885 till 1897, being installed by council. Rev. William Curtis States, born in Stoneham, Me., was installed as pastor in 1897, remaining until 1901. From that time until July 1904, the pulpit was supplied, for the most part by students from Yale Divinity school.

Rev. Dwight C. Stone supplied the pulpit during the month of August 1903, and later in July, 1904, came here upon a six months' engagement. At the end of the year at the annual meeting of the church he was engaged for one year. The same vote has been taken at each annual meeting, since, until he has rounded out a term of 20 years. The church membership when Rev. Mr. Stone took charge was 139 with 56 absent and benevolences amounted to $56. The church had a debt of $1,000. During Rev. Mr. Stone's first ten years here the debt was cleared up, the property brought into good condition, the ecclesiastical society abolished, the church incorporated, and the benevolent offerings increased.

The last year book gives the membership at 140 with 35 absent, and offerings $967; 104 additions to the membership, 55 christenings and baptisms; 218 marriages, 330 funerals and interments.

Mr. Stone has received calls to other churches—one as associate pastor in one of New England's largest cities, one a growing metropolis in the south, one a missionary church in Florida, and another in a Connecticut village. Vacations have been taken at intervals and a leave of absence was granted him after his marriage with Miss Fannie Storrs Barrows of Norwich Town. They visited Egypt and the Holy Land, as well as Europe and Great Britain, being gone four months.

Rev. Mr. Stone is a native of Bethlehem, Conn., and a graduate of Rockland college in 1883, and Yale Divinity school in 1887. He was ordained and installed pastor of the Pilgrim Congregation church at Canaan in 1888, and was there five years as pastor. In 1895-96 he took a postgraduate course at Yale Divinity school and gave two terms of special lectures at Mansfield college, Oxford, 1903.

Mr. Stone preached his last sermon at his church Sunday. The "Parsonage-by-the-Sea" has been offered to Mr. and Mrs. Stone, the use of which they may have until spring, if they so desire. They have received many farewell gifts from Stonington friends.

ARE YOU FAT? JUST TRY THIS

Thousands of overfat people have become slender by following the advice of doctors who recommend Marmola Prescription Tablets. These little fat reducers are made from the same formula as the famous Marmola Prescription. If too fat, don't wait—go to your druggist now and for one dollar (the same price the world over) procure a box of these tablets. If you prefer you may secure them direct by sending price to the Marmola Co., General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich. They reduce steadily and easily. No need for tiresome exercise or starvation diet and no unpleasant effects.

The neighborhood was greatly stirred up last Tuesday when A. H. Beebe's home was burned to the ground. The furniture on the ground floor was saved. The neighbors and friends all have expressed sympathy with Mr. and Mrs. Beebe in their loss.

PLAINFIELD

Alfred Lacourse and J. W. Kelley narrowly escaped being seriously injured when the chimney of the Evans wet wash plant toppled over on the truck in which they were riding. Lacourse, who was driving, steered the car into a cable which steadied the chimney, causing the stock to fall. The Ford truck was completed demolished. The boys escaped with slight injuries.

John J. Sullivan, who has been visiting Mrs. John Doyle, of Plainfield, left Sunday night for New York, where he will board a ship for Honolulu. Mr. Sullivan is in the government service and will be on duty for six months in the islands.

Three young men from New Bedford, while assisting an autoist to repair a punctured tire were picked up by the police on the state highway outside the village of Moosup. The boys stated that they were minding their own business and had plenty of money in their possession. After being question the two were allowed to proceed on their journey to Newark, N. J.

The past three days of zero weather certainly caused the stranded autoist to pray and wish for puncture-proof tires. It is no joke to change tires in this weather.

Very few complaints about the electricity in Plainfield has been registered lately as the electric company has had a crew working the past month on the village lines. Nearly all the poles have been replaced and the old poles removed as soon as weather permits. The townsmen shiver when they stand and watch the linemen on the poles stringing new wires with a forty-mile gale blowing.

Sixteen new radios were installed in homes in the village of Plainfield last week, porof that Santa wishes to keep in touch with the little ones all next year.

THE HEADLIGHT TESTS.

Much is to be said in commendation of the arrangement made by the state police for the testing of automobile headlights to insure the proper focusing of the lamps, but not much can be said in a favorable vein concerning the time of year selected for it, or the failure to give consideration to public convenience. The accommodations are even more inadequate than those for the distribution of registrations and markers.

The importance of having the auto lights properly focused and properly lifted, so that the highway can be lighted for the required distance without throwing a glaring light into the eyes of those going in the opposite direction, is perfectly understood by all users of the highways. Ever since special lenses have been required this added means of throwing the light where it is needed and keeping it from bothering other drivers has been recognized.

The idea of having the state police test the lights for the auto owners is an excellent one, but with such a force at the service of the state it is difficult to understand why such service should not be extended to the various communities of the county instead of being confined to one, or why for instance there should not be a certain period for tests in this city for the thousands of auto owners in Norwich and vicinity without requiring auto owners to go by the thousands to Groton and wait around in zero weather for this service.

Inasmuch as state police are engaged in the enforcement of the laws concerning lights it is desirable that their endorsement or advice regarding them should be obtained. Many will avail themselves of the opportunity afforded and there is no gainsaying the fact that the idea is a good one, but the selection of midwinter and only one place in the county for the rendition of such service means not only an injustice to thousands of auto owners and taxpayers of the state, but that it will be far less fruitful than it should be.

PLANTING MORE TREES.

We have been told much about the need of reforestation until there exists a pretty thorough conviction that it is genuine, but we hear less about what is actually being accomplished as the result of the disclosure about the conditions that prevail.

One glimpse is furnished, however, in the report of the conservation commission of New York state which maintains nurseries for the purpose of supplying trees for reforestation work. This commission shows that there was an increase of 137 per cent in the receipts for sale of trees from its nurseries and points out the need of more nurseries to meet the demands. It requires several years to get the trees in condition to transplant but the New York state effort has resulted in an increase from seven sales aggregating 25,000 trees in 1908 to 1453 shipments in 1924 aggregating 9,347,000 trees. This represents not only a healthy growth but a recognition of the need of planting trees if the inroads into the timber supply of the country is going to be checked in the exhaustion of the forests is to be prevented.

Connecticut is gradually acquiring wooded areas and there are a number of instances where excellent results have been obtained in reforestation work. It furnishes evidence of not only what can be done but what should be done for the purpose of getting a better return from the land and of growing a larger proportion of the timber required in the state.

For a quarter of a century there has been an effort made to get increased attention for the forestry problems of this country. It can hardly be said that there is even now full appreciation of the situation from the standpoint of those dependent upon the timber supply for industrial activities, or those who have an opportunity to plan and meet the situation for their own benefit. A growing interest is manifesting nevertheless, and with the larger growing states responding to the situation the way New York is the way of timber exhaustion will certainly be pushed into the more distant future.

MEETING POSTAL DEFICITS.

There have been intimations that no hearing on the bill providing for increased postal rates was to be hastened through and that slight consideration would be given to the protests which have been made against the schedule of rate increases as planned. Time will tell as to that. The haste cannot be imagined is for the purpose of speeding up the legislation and putting it into effect by action at the present session of congress, even though a careful investigation into the facts has to be slighted.

Postmaster General New expresses his confidence in the figures which have been submitted by the department in behalf of the proposed changes. Equal confidence is displayed by the American Newspaper Publishers' association concerning the discrepancies and oversights to which it has called attention in the department's figures.

In connection with the department's defeat for the fiscal year of 1924 the publishers call attention to the large expense that is involved in the handling of the congressional and departmental mail out of Washington and point to the fact that in their belief this is responsible for the loss the department sustains. Certainly this represents a large sum of money.

When the postmaster general refers to the fact that the second class mail is heavily subsidized, it must be noted also that the rural free delivery is also heavily subsidized and that the parcel post comes far from producing an adequate return for the service rendered.

From the representations it is evident that there are two sides to the question involved in the proposed postal rate increase. If there is to be a fair adjustment there should be no doubt about the justification for the proposed changes. Till they can be cleared up and the discrepancies and oversights which have been pointed out can be fully answered there should be no unwarranted haste in rushing through the legislation.

UNDELIVERABLE CHRISTMAS MAIL.

Postmaster Taylor of Hartford announces that there are 50,000 letters, most of them containing Christmas cards, held at his office because of improper addresses.

This means that if it is one cent mail that $500 in postage alone is involved in this undeliverable mail matter, and $1,000 if it is two cent mail. The added cost of the cards, even if the lower average of three for five is taken means more than $286. Some of these may be "guessed" by the postal employes but in all probability the most of them will go to the dead letter office.

The result of carelessness in writing addresses, in trusting to the mind reading ability of the postoffice clerks and carriers and in writing distinctly in this particular instance is the throwing away of $1325 to $1825 or more without accomplishing anything, except the bother that has been given to the postoffice employes and the additional work that will devolve upon the dead-letter office.

But Hartford is not the only city where just such carelessness and waste is to be found among the users of the mail. It would unquestionably make a tidy sum if it were known just what the total of undeliverable Christmas mail amounted to throughout the country. It has happened so often and so frequently that the large number of such cases ought to make an impression upon the careless, but apparently the number is so large and the job of decreasing it so great that all that can be hoped for is that education in behalf of a little more care will prevent the number from getting any larger. That of course would be something.

If those letters are worth sending they ought to be worth spending that bit of additional time on that would help them to reach their intended destination.

AUTO BANDITS.

Four towns about Boston have organized for the purpose of making war upon the automobile bandits which have been terrorizing those communities, where 50 successful holdups have taken place in the past two months, or nearly one a day.

Apparently the people realize that it is time to take matters into their own hands when they seek permission to arm themselves in anticipation of further visitations, and they cannot be blamed for feeling that the time has come for dealing with such conditions in a manner that will convince those responsible that safety lies in abandoning their practices.

When the bandits get to the point in their desperation that they shoot policemen, it is no wonder that the people consider the time ripe for drastic action. Evidently they are determined to put an end to such lawlessness, under the realization that such is necessary or else the holdup men will soon establish a tax collecting agency to satisfy their demands.

But are these communities in any way to blame for the leniency with which violators of the law have been treated in the past? Has lax enforcement and failure to fix deserved penalties convinced the bandits that they have nothing to fear? There are too many communities which fail to place the blame where it belongs until there is a long list of crime before it. The reputation of being "easy" doesn't offer much in the way of discouragement, and none understands it better than crooks and auto bandits, and the latter class especially offer no small problem to contend with.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

Washington, D. C. Dec. 29th.—Mrs. Coolidge, on whom the Boston university conferred an academic degree is the first wife of a president to be selected for such an honor. In fact, Mrs. Coolidge is the only wife of a president who is a college graduate, though some of the White House ladies had received so called higher education in certain branches.

Mrs. Taft is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, the first wife of President Wilson was the daughter of a Georgia clergyman and received home teaching; his second wife likewise received either home or private school instruction; Mrs. Harding was also a private school pupil, and Mrs. Cleveland was a Wells college girl, but married President Cleveland before graduation, thus leaving college without a diploma from the college she was attending. Mrs. Hughes, wife of the secretary of state was a classmate of Mrs. Cleveland at Wells.

It is interesting to note how some of the wives of recent presidents utilized the public school of private training they received. Mrs. Taft taught music in the conservatory from which she graduated and one of her most cherished possessions is a set of silver presented to her by the famous Cincinnati orchestra, of which she was one of the founders.

The first Mrs. Wilson devoted much time to water color painting and also had a brief career as a writer; the second Mrs. Wilson showed great business capacity both in the management of the affairs of her first husband's business, as member of the jewelry firm of Galt & Co., and later as the power in the White House during the president's long and critical illness, when he lay unconscious and entirely disabled for months.

Mrs. Harding was a business woman of high ability, and not only a leader in the political affairs of Mr. Harding but his helpmeet, home mate advisor and inspiration throughout his successful career as a newspaper man and in political life.

Mrs. Cleveland lived a quiet domestic life raising a delightful family, and later married a second time. During the Cleveland presidential term Mrs. Cleveland proved one of the most charming hostesses the White House has ever known and a devoted wife and mother. From a social viewpoint the first Mrs. Wilson seemed retiring, the second Mrs. Wilson was entirely unaccustomed to official society and somewhat restrained when presiding at the White House, but was always courteous.

Mrs. Harding was full of pep that did not in the least detract from her dignity, and presided with grace over the Harding establishment whether it was as wife of the publisher, wife of the lieutenant governor of Ohio, wife of the senator from Ohio or wife of the president of the United States.

And Mrs. Coolidge? Well she belongs in a class entirely by herself. Mrs. Coolidge graduated from college, taught school successfully for a while, then married and raised a family in the simple wholesome manner of a small New England city. She was and is a devoted wife and mother. When Calvin Coolidge became governor of the great state of Massachusetts, Mrs. Coolidge continued to live simply, and hang out the red card for the baker and the yellow card for ice just as is the custom up in those towns. She met whatever social obligations were hers with a quiet dignity. We did not hear much about her but what we did hear were words of praise.

Then Calvin Coolidge became vice president, and Mrs. Coolidge bloomed into popular favor just as a flower blooms in the sunlight. And now as wife of the president Mrs. Coolidge knows no let-up in domestic interest and affection but at the same time takes to the duties and activities of that high social station as naturally as a duck takes to water. No sign of weariness over routine, no sign of affectation or snobbishness is ever shown by the present mistress of the White House. Her tact would be amazing were it not a genuine part of her make-up. Mrs. Coolidge charms alike the president's political friends and foes; she recognizes no difference between those who sit in the seats of the mighty and the rank and file of people she meets through her official rank. The fairy god-mother that is supposed to preside over the cradle of new born babies, bestowed on her poise, good breeding, a sunny smile and a happy heart.

Senator Fernald of Maine, commenting on the lack of market for Maine and other New England raised potatoes, said today: "It reminds me of the story we tell down in Maine, of old William Jackson, familiarly and affectionately known up in Aroostook county, as Uncle Bill. Before the Bangor & Aroostook railroad was running old Bill Jackson was one of the big potatoe raisers, and always took his crop to market down in Bangor, 160 miles away. He drove an ox team down and back. But Bill raised four fine sons in addition to potatoes and when the railroad was put through after the Jackson boys had grown up and made good in western states, one of them came home and said to his father, "You have never seen a railroad train. We will go over to Presque Isle, and you'll see an engine pull out a train of 30 cars, each car loaded with 600 bushels of potatoes." "Don't believe it," said the old man, but one day he drove over from Grindstone to Presque Isle. "There is the engine and there are the cars; now you'll see them start," said the son. The old man took one good look then said, "By heck, they'll never start her!" Just then the engine puffed and along started the train. "By heck!" exclaimed the old man, "they'll never stop her!"

And when Senator Fernald heard the returns of the Connecticut election, when "support Coolidge" gave the senate a staunch party man in the person of Bingham to succeed Brandegee, he smiled broadly and said, "I feel like quoting Bill; and saying, By heck, they'll never stop us."

Practically all of the Connecticut delegation went home for the holiday recess. Congressman Tilson, however, whose family is spending the winter in France, went to Georgia to visit his brother who lives in Atlanta.

It looks as if "widow" candidates would become a habit in the elections to fill out unexpired terms. When John Nolan of California died, Mrs. Nolan was elected to fill his seat, when "Billy" Mason of Illinois died, it was his daughter Mrs. Huck, who was elected to fill his unexpired term; now Congressman Kahn of California has just died, and statements from that state are to the effect that Mrs. Kahn may be selected to fill the unexpired term of her late husband, and in this case it might also be a full term of two years, as Mr. Kahn was reelected overwhelmingly last November and his present term would expire March 4th.

Joseph Weil, "the yellow kid", was arrested in a cabaret in Chicago in connection with the swindling of H. J. Kutter, Hamilton, Ohio, manufacturer of $35,000.

THE BARBARIAN

"In the first place," said the south side hostess to the north shore cousin, who had come for luncheon, "I have absolutely no inferiority complex about this part of the city. I consider myself every bit as good as if I lived out north."

"Of course you do," agreed the north shore cousin.

"Of course I do," stressing the pronoun. "There's a typical northshore answer for you. Edna Ferber expressed you perfectly when she said, 'In Chicago one simply does not live on the north side. One goes north.' "

"Precisely. One does. So when are you coming?"

"When! After the Midway and the University and Jackson park and the old art palace and all the beautiful south shore have been swallowed by an earthquake. In fact, I began to tell you that I decided yesterday, when I left the Allards' in Highland Park, never to make even so much as a short call on the north shore again.

"The Allards? Yes, they used to live in this block, you know, and Mrs. Allard was always so friendly when we met on the street or anywhere that I really missed her after they moved. I always felt a little guilty, too, about seeming unneighborly when they lived here, so when I ran across her downtown the other day I said impulsively that I was coming to Highland Park Friday and might look in on her. She had told me before they left that they were putting up a little shack of their own out on the north shore.

"A shack!"

"Oh, you know the place? Well, so do I now. I made an effort and went. Wonderful house isn't it? And a regular park around it. The maid that opened the door didn't quite match, though. Her manner lacked the proper chill. She almost fell on my neck, trying to be cordial enough to make up for a lack of English. All she could say was: 'Come, come! Mrs. Allard say come!' At the same time she took my hand and fairly dragged me in and up the stairs.

"I had a bewildered thought that Mrs. Allard must be ill and receiving me in bed. But no, in the lovely bedroom, where a grate fire was burning, there wasn't a soul in sight. Then I realized that the maid was repeating, while she coaxed off my wraps; 'Mrs. Allard sorry. She back soon. Mrs. Allard say you come long way—you tired!' And before I knew it there I was seated before that fire with a gorgeous tea tray at my elbow.

"Well, that tea did look good. I had walked a lot. And you know it quite touched me that Mrs. Allard had made such preparations for my coming.

"I was just reflecting, as I sipped my tea, that they must be housecleaning downstairs, so that there was no place to sit when I heard the front door and a flutter of voices up the stairs. Then into the room came Mrs. Allard, followed by a tall woman, and after them dashed that maid, chattering hysterically.

"I jumped up—rather effusively, as I remember it—but Mrs. Allard stood there petrified. The maid began to fly around, snatching my wraps from some closet, catching up the tray and saying to me, 'Come! I take you—come!'

"She was pulling my sleeve, and I was feeling that it was all some queer nightmare when Mrs. Allard came to life and introduced me to her tall visitor, just arrived from England. She said she had been uncertain whether her guest would come from Chicago by motor or railway, so, when she went to meet the train she had instructed the maid what to do in case—yes, yes, if I would be seated downstairs she would be with me directly. All of which would have been well enough if I hadn't overheard the perfectly terrible thing she said about me as I went out of the room."

"And what was that?" quavered the north shore cousin, wiping her eyes.

"Just because you're relishing this so, I've two minds not to tell you! She gave me what you would consider the worst slam ever invented. First the Englishwoman said, 'How extraord'n'ry!' A neighbor of yours?' And Mrs. Allard answered, 'Oh, no! She's from the south side.' "—Chicago News.

Stories That Recall Others

Personal Solicitation.

Because her father and mother were going to take her to see her grandmother for Christmas, Alice age six, had her father call Santa Claus and tell him that she was going away to spend Christmas and that she was afraid that Santa would find no one home and would not leave her toys, which she hoped would include a doll blackboard, set of glass dishes, some paint to paint other toys, which ran "naked," a box of chalk some doll clothes, a couple of dolls for her sister and several other presents which she thought Santa had in store for her. "Tell Santa not to forget to stop at our house tonight," she said.

Not a Bit Particular.

A real old time hobo went into one of the lunch rooms one day last week and ordered a cup of coffee. It was a cold gray day and the old man looked very sad. He probably had just enough money to pay for his scanty order.

Two more men were sitting at the next table. One asked the old man how he would like some griddle cakes.

"Why, yes, I'll eat yours, if you're not going to eat them," replied the man. At this an order for a "large stack of wheats" was placed.

White Started at the Bottom Again.

If Edson White wanted to follow in his father's footsteps and when his parent changed his plans, he had to hustle to keep to the path, but later found that he should start over at the beginning.

In Peori, Ill., the elder White bought cattle on a commission basis for an eastern concern. There, in his native city, Edson often drove cattle for his father and believed that some day he would succeed him in his business.

After attending grammar school he took a four months' course in a commercial school. His father sold out his business and Edson, then 17, decided quickly that he wanted to remain in the business. Obtaining a job in the retail department of a small packing concern in Peoria, he studied the wholesale end, and soon was made city salesman.

Made manager of the Western Meat Company of San Francisco, the father took Edson and his brother with him. Within two years, Edson then in his early twenties, was a prominent figure in the Pacific Coast meat business and was receiving a salary of $150 a month.

Deciding that the field was not large enough, and disregarding the admonition of his friends that Greeley had said "Go West, young man" and the maxim that it is better to be a big toad in a little puddle, he resigned his position and went to Chicago to hunt a job.

Obtaining work as checker in the car route department of Armour & Company, meat packers, he started over again in the industry at $18 a week. Six months later he was placed in the dressed beef department.

Tall, square shouldered and genial he soon became known as "Ed," and within a short time was placed in charge of the lamb department. Then J. Ogden Armour, the president, said he could handle more work, and placed him in charge of the wool department. After a sixteen-year climb White was made a director in the company. Two years later he was elected vice president and last year he was chosen president of the largest packing concern in the world.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Rudyard Kipling, who today enters upon his 60th year, is one of the foremost of living English authors. Though he now writes at infrequent intervals, his sales are ten times as great as they were a few years ago. If a further proof of Mr. Kipling's fame were needed it could be found in the fact that a number of places have been named after him. In America we have half a dozen towns called Kipling, both in Canada and the United States, as well as Rudyards in Montana, Michigan, and Mississippi. Mr. Kipling was born in India, of English parentage, and it was there that he first tried his hand at authorship. His experience widened by travel in China, Japan, Australia, America and Africa, he embodied the habits and customs of these countries in his writings, and gave to the world a wealth of prose and poetry in "The Jungle Book," "Captains Courageous," "Kim," "Soldiers Three," and other well known works.

Today's Anniversaries

1784—Stephen H. Long, the first American engineer to apply the rectangular trussed frame to railroad bridges, born at Hopkinton, N. H., died at Alton, Ill., Sept. 4, 1864.

1802—Francis Lewis, one of the oldest signers of the Declaration of Independence, died in New York. Born in Wales in 1713.

1356—British steamer "Thistle" from Canton to Hong Kong, seized by Chinese pirates and all, on board murdered.

1392—Two United States deputy marshals and three desperadoes were killed in a fight in Wyoming.

1594—Idaho reported a mineral output for the year of $1,879,000 in gold, $2,359,000 in silver, and $3,404,000 in lead.

1903—Nearly 600 persons, mostly women and children, perished in the burning of the Iroquois theatre in Chicago.

1916—Berlin announced that Field Marshal von Mackensen was in supreme command of the forces operating in the Balkans.

1923—The appointment of Sir Esme Howard as British ambassador to the United States was announced in London.

Rudyard Kipling, regarded by many as the foremost of present day English authors, born in Bombay, India, 59 years ago today.

Dr. William H. Park, president of the American Public Health Association, born in New York city, 61 years ago today.

Stephen Leacock of McGill University, widely celebrated as a humorous writer, born in England, 55 years ago today.

Alfred E. Smith, who is about to enter upon another term as governor of New York, born in New York city, 51 years ago today.

CONN FARMERS GET LITTLE FROM FEDERAL AID

Farmers in this section and throughout the state in general are considerably interested in the outcome of the recommendation of President Coolidge that less money be spent in federal aid projects.

With the exception of New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Michigan, Pennsylvania and North Carolina, the citizens of Connecticut receive less return from such expenditures than those of any other state New York has the lowest rate of return, approximately one-half of 1 per cent.

On the basis of appropriations for the 1924 fiscal year the United States treasury paid out in New York as federal aid slightly less than 1 1-2 per cent. of the tax payments, whereas other states received proportionately higher returns, up to 16 per cent. in the case of Nevada. Connecticut paid in federal taxes $37,006,606 and received in federal aid $538,000 or 1.45 per cent.

Money paid to states for combating the European corn borer, gypsy moth and white pine rust brings the total of federal aid in 1924 to $145,000,000. Allowance for contributions to the states include highway construction, $62,875,000; forest roads and trails, $80,000,000; support of agricultural colleges, $2,550,000; experimental stations, $1,440,000; co-operative extension work for agriculture $5,850,000; industrial rehabilitation, $5,185,000; forest fire prevention, $1,748,000; maternity and infant hygiene, $367,000, controlling venereal diseases, $93,000; state funds under mineral leasing act, $2,787,000; state fund under national forest act, $1,331,000; state fund from sale of public lands, $18,000; state fund under water power act, $2,063; National Guard, $19,368,389, a total of $144,284,373.

Prospects of an alignment of administration and anti-administration forces, together with a wet and dry issue, faced members of the 1925 general assembly in Harrisburg, Pa.

Meeting the Folks

Did you read yesterday's story, little boy and little girl? Because if you didn't you'll wonder why Grandaddy Bullfrog suddenly looked into the little bunny's anxious face and said:

"Yes sir. Tadpoles and camels are somethings alike." Goodness gracious it does seem queer that a tiny tadpole is even anything like a great big camel that travels over the sandy deserts. Well, that's just it. If he didn't travel over the great waste spaces of sand he wouldn't have any use for more than one stomach in which to store up a supply of water. And if the tiny tadpole as he grows into a frog had not further use for his tail he wouldn't be able to use it for nourishment until it disappeared altogether when he turns into a tod or frog.

"I left my umbrella at home"

As Granddaddy Bullfrog finished explaining all this to the curious little bunny boy, that wise old fellow wiped his spectacles on a lilypad and smoothed his waistcoat. Then winking his great big eyes, he gulped down another fly.

"Do you know anything more?" asked the little rabbit.

"Not just at the moment,' cautiously answered Granddaddy Bullfrog, not wishing to tell all he knew at once.

So the little bunny hopped away, up the Old Cow Path to the big farmyard where all day long and all night through when Billy Breeze whistled or loudly blew, the weathercock turned on his gilded toe to show which way the wind would blow.

"Good morning," he shouted from the roof of the big red barn, flapping his bright gold wings. "Fine day if it doesn't rain."

"Will it?" asked the little bunny anxiously. "I left my umbrella at home."

"Guess not," replied the pretty gilt rooster. "Billy Breeze is blowing from the west and Mr. Merry Sun is shining so we'll have good weather today."

"That's nice,' answered the little rabbit. "Lady Love, my good little mother is washing clothes. She'll soon be hanging them out on the line. She likes sunshiny days."

Just then Old Sic'em, the kind farmer's watch dog looked out of his wooden bungalow by the fence. "Good morning, little bunny," he barked softly, you know, so as not to make the kind Farmer think there might be a tramp coming up the road. "How's the rheumatism in your left hind leg?" inquired the bunny boy, politely.

"Better, thank you," answered the old dog, stretching himself and yawning. "How are all the folks at home?"

"Uncle Lucky's very well,
And hops up with the rising bell.
Missy Mousie's very sweet
And keeps his little house so neat.
And Mother's like a red, red rose.
Scattering sweetness where she goes" sang the little bunny in poetry as he hopped into the next story.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germ that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

WEDDINGS.

Butler—Maloney.

James Butler, Jr., son of James and Louisa Pile Butler of Canterbury and Margaret Jane Maloney, daughter of Edward and Margaret Lynch Maloney of 326 Prospect street, Norwich, were united in marriage Monday morning at 7 o'clock at St. Mary's church, the ceremony being performed by Rev. William A. Meefe, rector of the church.

The couple were attended by George Maloney, brother of the bride and Miss Helen M. Drescher. The bride was gowned in pendre blue charmeuse with hat to match and her bridal bouquet was of white roses. Her maid wore gray canton crepe with hat to match and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The bride received many beautiful gifts of cut glass, silver, linen, checks and household articles. Following a wedding tour to Hartford, Pittsfield and other places the couple will make their home in a newly constructed and furnished bungalow in Preston. They will be at home to their many friends in this city after January 4th.

MISSISSIPPI UNUSED

The great Mississippi river, in proportion to its size and length, is used far less than the St. Lawrence, the Rhine or the Yangtse river of China. Only when this country begins to trade in a much larger way than now with South America and the Orient by way of the Panama Canal will "the Father of Waters" really become one of the world's main inland waterways.

FINDS PIGMY RACE

A race of pigmies living in slavery and dominated by a race of negroes has been discovered in the Kongo by Dr. Lean Hollander, an explorer, who reached Johannesburg after a ten month journey through the heart of Africa from Cairo. He also discovered a white rhinoceros, which he shot dead as it charged him. Dr. Hollander has 40 yards of the skin in his possession.

WILL PETITION COUNCIL FOR NEW FIRE STATION ON WEST SIDE

Some 350 residents of the West Side have signed a petition to the court of common council asking for a new fire station to take the place of the present fire station on West Main street. The petition is being circulated through the efforts of the West End Community association and will be presented to the common council at its January meeting.

Paul A. Brown, president of the association, said Monday evening that a crew of men was at work during the day cleaning up the debris and bushes around the new skating pond at East Great Plain. Although there are now four or five inches of ice on the pond it will be flooded again today (Tuesday) as the ice is a little too rough for comfortable skating. Flooding the pond today will allow time enough for it to freeze over by Thursday, when the formal opening of the pond will take place.

Entries for the sporting events on the ice are not coming in as rapidly as the committee had hoped for. Mr. Brown stated Monday night that those who wish to enter for the events should send their names at once to Samuel Slosberg of West Main street. Electric lights are being strung around the edge of the pond, which will provide illumination for skating at night. Extra trolley service will be provided by the Connecticut company Thursday afternoon. The committee in charge of the program for the afternoon expect to complete arrangements for a band concert. The program will be opened with a grand march, to be followed by the athletic events.

G. AND S. RAILWAY FACES BIG MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE

Foreclosure of a mortgage of $375,000, secured by all property of the company, has been brought by State Treasurer Anson T. McCook against the Groton and Stonington Street Railway and Traction companies, in a bill in equity returnable before the superior court on Tuesday, January 6. The papers in the case have been filed with the clerk of the superior court in this city.

The action was precipitated by a vote of a majority of holders of the first mortgage gold bonds, secured by the mortgage, which was executed July 8, 1904, transferring title to all property to Henry H. Gallup, then state treasurer, as trustee for the bondholders.

As trustee for the owners of the bonds, Treasurer McCook claims that the mortgage should be foreclosed, that the same be decreed a valid lien on all property of the company, and upon the earnings, profits, etc., resulting from operation.

The trustee further asks that all fares, tolls, earnings, etc., be segregated and sequestered for the benefit of the plaintiff as trustee, and applied only to such uses as are legally and properly involved in operation of the road; that there be found due the plaintiff and the respective bondholders, such sums as may be necessary to satisfy such charges, expenses and advance as were made in pursuance of the mortgage, together with the principal sum and interest due; that the defendants be decreed to pay to the plaintiffs the amount of the principal and interest and all moneys now due, or that may become due, together with the costs involved in the foreclosure action.

In case the defendant companies default in payment of the various sums that may be decreed by the court and thereby redeem their properties, alternative relief is asked in a decree barring the defendants and all claiming under them from further claims upon the properties by a judgment of foreclosure and order of sale at public auction.

The trustee further asks that proceeds from the sale be applied as follows: to pay costs of the action, with reasonable compensation for counsel, etc., payment of trustee of amounts due for services, expenses, fees, etc., payment of the principal sum and interest on outstanding bonds; and that the balance be paid to such persons as the court may direct.

The court is asked to appoint a receiver to take entire charge of the railway properties, and other and further relief at law, or in equity, granted.

TAFTVILLE MAN KILLED BY FALLING TREE

William Nolan, 35, of 95 Merchants avenue, Taftville, was instantly killed Monday afternoon at two o'clock, when a tree he was cutting near Canterbury turnpike, fell and struck him on the head crushing his skull.

Mr. Nolan with his brother were cutting the tree when it fell crushing Mr. Nolan to the ground. Word was immediately sent for Dr. E. J. Brophy, but upon his arrival he found Mr. Nolan dead, death in his judgment being instantaneous. Medical Examiner Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve was summoned and after viewing the body gave permission for its removal by Undertaker George G. Grant.

William Nolan was the son of John D. Nolan, well known old time track runner and for a number of years was a fruit and vegetable dealer. He is survived by his wife and one child. News of his death came as a shock to his many friends and his family has the sympathy of all in their time of sorrow.

SUIT TO COLLECT PAYMENT ON STORE

Frank Wyrod, formerly of this city, now of New London, has filed with the clerk of the superior court in this city an action against the World Fire and Marine Insurance company, the Safeguard Insurance company and Peter Ducharme and Eugene Monast. The latter two were formerly of this city but are now in Holyoke.

The plaintiff claims that Ducharme and Monast bought from him a store at No. 25 West Main street. The store was burned out June 10 last. At that time the defendants still owed him $2,200 in payment for the store. The insurance companies appraised the damage by fire at $2,200, which is the amount the plaintiff claims is owed to him in payment for the store. The insurance companies have declined to pay the $2,200 to him and he has brought action in the court to secure the payment.

MERCIER ASSEMBLY MUSICAL CLUB HOLDS WHIST

Twenty tables of bridge and whist were played at T. A. B. hall Monday night at the card party given under the auspices of the Musical club of Mercier Assembly, and a good sum was realized for the club treasury.

Prizes were won as follows: Whist, first, Miss Bessie McVeigh; second, Miss Marguerite Shoehy; bridge, first Mrs. John Lyons; second, Mrs. James McNerny; special prize, book ends, Mrs. Chester Wright.

The committee in charge of the party was as follows: Misses Margaret Daly, Katherine Murphy, Irene Wholey, Agnes Brennahan, Loretta Lash, Minnie Mingo, Mazie Maloney, Jennie McVeigh, Nora McCrohan, Mrs. Julia Sweeney and Mrs. Ella Bowne.

DEALERS GETTING READY TO HARVEST ICE

Local ice dealers are planning to begin their annual harvest within a few days, provided ice making weather continues. At present ice on local ponds varies in thickness from 5 to 7 inches but it is not customary to cut ice until it has reached a thickness of about 9 inches. Gangs of men are now busy putting the ice houses in shape and the first of the year should see the harvesting started.

WORTHLESS MINING STOCK IN BRANDEGEE'S ESTATE

The personal property of the late Senator Frank B. Brandegee in Washington and at his farm in Maryland is worth $18,751.30 according to the official appraisement made at the order of the court. The detailed appraisement will be filed in probate court for the district of New London by Wednesday, it is expected. All but about $600 worth of the property is at the late senator's home at 17th and I streets, Washington.

All this property will be sold at auction next Monday. Today (Tuesday) an appraisal of the stock held by Mr. Brandegee will be made. Outside of the stock of the Pequot hotel of New London most of the stock is in western mining companies and is said to be about worthless.

In the appraisement of his personal property some interesting items occur. An autographed photograph of General Grant is valued at $7.50. A photograph of Theodore Roosevelt at $2, and a letter of Millard Fillmore, at $5.

His costly collection of paintings, furniture, mirrors and Oriental bric-a-brac is not given high value in the appraisement. Some of the largest items follow: Sheraton mahogany sideboard, $35; portrait of Mrs. Joseph Hopkins, said to be by Thomas Sully, $1,500; portrait of a lady, signed T. S., $200; oil painting of John Paul Jones, $209; India rug, $125; 9x12 Serapi rug, $250; Serapi rug, $150; banjo clock, $75; satinwood inlay twin sheraton beds, box springs, mattresses and bedding, chiffonier and vanity dresser, $458; oil painting of Lafayette and oil painting of Daniel Webster, $150; five oil paintings by Max Weyl, $150; two Mahal rugs, $200.

The hall and stair carpet is valued at $20; a leopard skin rug at $3.50; a Bari kari knife at $5. A miscellaneous lot of books is put at $100; 22 pieces of oliosonne, satsuma, hammered brass, Japanese enamel and bronze, $126; a miscellaneous lot of pictures at $5.

An echo of pre-prohibition times is found in the following items: Twenty-four highball glasses, 12 cocktail glasses, 89 champagne glasses, 20 small wine glasses, 20 goblets, 10 sherry glasses, 10 water glasses, 10 water tumblers, 38 ice cream cups, 41 finger bowls, 11 glass plates, 44 large wine glasses, 27 punch glasses, $200.

FOOD CHEAP BUT RENTS HIGH IN ARGENTINE

Business conditions in Argentine are gradually becoming better but the living question is worse than in the states, was the opinion given by A. Prentice Chase, who has been in that South American country for the past three years with T. M. Duche & Sons, Ltd., exporters and importers, and who is now enjoying a vacation at his home on Sachem terrace. Mr. Chase arrived in this country Tuesday of last week on the S. S. Southern Cross of the Munson line, after a trip of 12 days up the coast of the western hemisphere, to New York city.

People of Argentine, said Mr. Chase, are just beginning to have faith again in some American exporters, this being due to conditions during the war when they received the worst end of many bargains, but it will take some years yet to restore their full confidence in the better class of exporters that do business in America. Before the war England, France and Germany were the countries from which Argentine imported most of her goods and practically all of her automobiles. With the war the country began to buy from American exporters and now Ford has a big assembling plant in Argentine and General Motors are soon to put up a big assembling plant in Buenos Aires. Practically all automobiles of American standard makes are being bought there now.

The value of the peso has had much to do with Argentine trade with America, according to Mr. Chase. Since the exchange rate has become a little more favorable to Argentine, business with American exporters has picked up, but the fluctuation of the peso is sometimes as much as 13 per cent in some months and this has a tendency to stop buying. Some merchants buy on the present market while others gamble on the market, making or taking gains or losses as the market goes. Argentine has just finished her exporting of the grain crop, the best in many years and this has made the exchange favor her. Thus buying is speeded up but soon it will begin to swing against her and must be offset by gold shipments, which now are being made, a recent change from the Argentine policy of holding back her gold.

The First National Bank of Boston has just finished putting up a 15,000,000 peso bank in Buenos Aires, in the best location in the city and this has aided American business in that country.

The big trouble with Argentine has been that the land has been held by a few wealthy land owners. Now the country, like our country did, is buying up this land and allowing settlers to take up sections, most of the settlers coming from southern Italy.

Argentine, however, still favors England and France, but America is getting in and future years will see Argentine looking to America for most of her exports if the currency difference is narrowed down to par 102 Argentine gold to 100 American gold.

Food is cheap in Argentine, said Mr. Chase, fine meals with cocktails, wine and cordials being only $2.50 a plate, but rents average $100 a month for the new American type bungalows that are going up rapidly and clothing is high. Taxis are cheap and look more like private cars, no colored taxis being seen in the city.

Touching on sports in Argentine, Mr. Chase said that there are nearly a score of golf clubs within a half hour's trip from Buenos Aires and that golf is getting to be the big game there. Winter is the favorite season for golf in Argentine, he said, because winter brings only rains and they bring grass, while the hot summer hardens the ground and spoils good golfing.

Rivalry between Argentine and Uruguay is exceptionally keen and when the Olympic championship soccer team of Uruguay came to Argentine to play the team of that country the crowds couldn't be held back and a fight followed. The Argentine, speaking of the masses, is a poor sport, but the better class people are fine sports and good losers.

Firpo was the idol of Argentine when he came to America to fight Dempsey and when he was beaten the people fairly cried they felt it so keenly. Now Firpo is extremely unpopular, the Argentine public have little use for him for they call him "dirty" and a poor sport. Firpo is done in Argentine.

Speaking of Norwich people he had met while in Argentine, Mr. Chase mentioned meeting Rutherford C. Plaut and Julius Cadden while they were on their world tour, meeting Mr. and Mrs. Francis Elwell, formerly of Norwich, and of seeing the late Everard Thompson, formerly telegraph operator for the Associated Press on The Bulletin, who was taking a trip for his health.

The trip to Buenos Aires is a beautiful one, said Mr. Chase. I have taken the trip several times and can say that if anyone wants to take a fine sea voyage this trip should be considered. The first two days out of New York and the first two days out of Buenos Aires are liable to be bad, but on the trips I have made the other 35 days have been ideal days with wonderful sailing. After leaving New York the first stop is Rio De Janeiro, the city noted the world over for its beautiful scenery and buildings. Then there is a two days' stop at Santos, the great coffee port of South America where as high as 30,000 bags of coffee are loaded in a day. The stop here allows one to take a trip to Sao Paulo, the coffee manufacturing center of South America. This trip up the cog railroad through eight tunnels is one never to be forgotten. Next are stops at Montevideo, Uruguay and then Buenos Aires. The trip down takes 19 days and the return trip 13 days, but boats every two weeks provide passage for stopovers.

Argentine and all South America is a wonderful country in the opinion of Mr. Chase, and after one learns the language and becomes acquainted with the people it is a fine country to reside in. But for all things the United States is the best place and living here is the cheapest after all in spite of talk of high prices for there are met with wherever one bestows these days.

INTERESTING TUNNELS

The following is from a paper by Lester S. Grant, Dean of the Colorado School of Mines, read before the Teknik Club of Denver: "In 1530 Agricola, a German mineralogist, recorded that the gold and silver mines of Schemnitz, Hungary, had then been worked for 800 years; the lead mines of Goslar, Germany, for 600 years, and the silver mines of Freiberg, Saxony, for 400 years. Subsequent working of these mines necessitated the driving of drainage tunnels of lengths as yet unequaled in the history of mining. The Tiefe Georg tunnel, in Saxony, driven between 1777 and 1799, is 34,529 feet long, with branches amounting to 25,319 feet more. This was driven entirely by hand to obtain a drainage depth of only 460 feet. The Joseph II. Tunnel of Schemnitz was started in 1782 but not completed until 1878. It is 10 1-4 miles long. The Rothschenberger Tunnel at Freiberg, driven between 1844 and 1877, totals over 26,149 feet, the main tunnel being 46,862 feet. These tunnels were all driven by hand, using black powder."

OLD BELIEFS ABOUT GEMS

According to an old ancient tradition, the laws given to Moses on the mount were inscribed on tablets of sapphire.

A fourteenth century authority says that turquoise protected horses from the ill effects resulting from drinking cold water when they were overheated. It is said that the Turks often attached these precious stones to the bridles and frontlets of their horses as amulets.

Beautiful blond maidens of the Middle Ages valued nothing more highly than a necklace of opals. Wearing of these ornaments was supposed to keep their hair from losing its wonderful color.

The first large diamond discovered in South Africa is said to have been found in the leather bag of a sorcerer. Several authorities state that in the early days in South Africa highly valuable diamonds were frequently the playthings of the Boer children.

FOUR IMPORTANT CHANGES MADE TO FOOTBALL RULES BY COACHES

New York, Dec. 29.—(By The A. P.)—Four important changes in the football playing code for 1925 were recommended today by the Football Coaches' Association of America, which at the same time went on record as opposed to any radical shakeup in the game or "tinkering" with the forward pass.

The expected controversy over the aerial game, whose growth in the past few seasons had been characterized by several coaches as a "menace," failed to materialize but the coaches, at the conclusion of their annual session, announced agreement on four suggested alterations, which will be put before the football rules committee for final consideration.

These changes are: (1) Abolition of giving first down on offside penalty unless penalty gives offensive team ball beyond point to be gained; (2) restoration of kickoff to kickers' forty-yard line, instead of midfield, with permission to use tee of not more than four inches in height; (3) fixing responsibility for watching for roughness against kicker upon head linesman, instead of referee; (4) abolition of giving first down on blocked kick behind the line of scrimmage if recovered by kickers' side, unless ball is recovered at or beyond point to be gained. It was pointed out that the fourth change does not apply to kicks partially blocked which cross the line of scrimmage.

A fifth recommendation, providing for the elimination of a run after recovery of a fumble, was rejected by the association as a whole by an overwhelming vote after it had been endorsed by the rules suggestion committee, headed by Hugo Bezdek, of Penn State.

The forward pass was entirely ignored in the list of suggested changes, in spite of the widespread agitation prior to the meeting. Harold M. Gore, Massachusetts Aggies coach who was among the outstanding critics of the aerial game, did not press his demands for its curtailment, including his suggestion that a touchdown from a pass be allowed only three points. Pre-convention issue proposals that the point from try after touchdown be abolished also were shelved.

The change relating to blocked kicks was adopted only after considerable discussion and a re-drafting of the original proposal by Clarence W. Spears, West Virginia coach.

The election of officers developed a spirited contest for the presidency in which Robert C. Zuppke, Illinois, defeated a western conference rival, Hielding H. Yost, Michigan. Zuppke succeeds John W. Heisman, of Rice Institute, Texas.

Other officers for 1925 are: First vice president, Gilmour Dobie, Cornell; second vice president, W. H. Cowell, New Hampshire State; secretary-treasurer, R. John W. Wilce, Ohio State; trustees, E. N. Robinson, Brown, one year; Michael J. Donohue, Louisiana State, two years; Hugo Bezdek, Penn State, three years; George Clark, University of Kansas, four years. A third vice president will be named later by the Pacific Coast Coaches' conference.

Tribute was paid by the coaches to the memory of two associates who died "in the molesking" during the past season—Percy Haughton of Columbia, creator of "the Harvard system," and Dana M. Evans of Northwestern—when the convention suspended its business for a minute while those in attendance stood with bowed heads in silence.

Commercialism has not crept into college football, despite accusations to the contrary, Brig. Gen. Palmer E. Pierce, president of the National A. A., told the coaches in praising the game's influence. A. A. Stagg, veteran Chicago mentor, John F. (Chick) Meehan, Syracuse; Michael J. Donahue, Louisiana State; and Hugo Bezdek, Penn State, spoke on topics of special interest to the coaches.

Among a notable gathering of more than 100 coaches, athletic directors and other gridiron figures in attendance were "Bo" McMillan, former Centre star who since has coached Centenary college, Louisiana; Eddie Mahan and Eddie Casey, former Harvard backfield aces, the latter now coaching at Tufts; and Elmer Oliphant, former Army star, now athletics director at Union.

Nine district chairmen were announced as follows: New England, Tom Keady of Vermont; Middle Atlantic states, Ed Thorp, New York University; South Central Atlantic, H. C. Byrd, University of Maryland; South, Wallace Wade, Alabama; Illinois-Ohio-Indiana-Minnesota, William Spaulding, University of Minnesota; North Central states, S. S. Williamson, Ames; Southwest, F. Bridges, Baylor; Colorado-Utah-Wyoming-New Mexico, E. L. Romney, University of Utah; Pacific coast, Glenn Warner, Stanford.

The session closed with a dinner at the Astor tonight.

FORFEITS POSTED FOR HOPPE-CANNEFAX MATCH

New York, Dec. 29.—Arrangements for the three-cushion billiard match between Willie Hoppe, world's balkline cue king and Robert Cannefax, three-cushion titleholder, were completed today when the rivals posted forfeits of $2,500 each, an amount which sets a record for special matches in which no title is involved. This money represents a side wager which will go to the winner in addition to 65 per cent. of the gate receipts. The remaining 35 per cent. will go to the loser.

The match will be played here the week of January 19 with 66-point blocks afternoon and evening, the best six out of eleven blocks to decide the winner. The loser will have the right to challenge immediately for a return encounter and name the conditions under which it shall be played.

COLLINS ASSUMES ACTIVE MANAGEMENT OF WHITE SOX

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Eddie Collins, newly appointed manager of the Chicago White Sox assumed active charge of the team today after a conference with President Charles A. Comiskey. Collins said he was negotiating for an assistant, a one time major league star whose name would be announced shortly.

The first squad, comprising battery men, will report at the Shreveport, La., training camp, March 2, and the other players will arrive a week later, Colins said.

FAVORITES IN JUNIOR TENNIS REACH THE SEMI-FINALS

New York, Dec. 29.—The group of eight "seeded" players battling for the junior single title in the National indoor Tennis tournament today survived the third round successfully and will oppose each other tomorrow in the round before the semi-finals.

The octet, in the order in which they will meet, are Kenneth Appel, Mercersburg Academy, the champion; John Millen, Newton, Mass., High school; R. L. Johnson, Newton Academy, Waban, Mass.; Wood Ivins, Hoboken, N. J.; Horace Orser, Styvesant high, New York; Robert Raymond, Lehigh University; Malcolm K. Hill, Newton Academy, 1923 boys' champion; and H. H. Murphy, Jr., Hastings, N. Y.

Appel and Orser, who gained their fourth round brackets yesterday, are favored to reach the finals, but each faces together this pair in bidding for the junior doubles crown and today swept through two matches. After eliminating Duncan Thomas and John H. Pitman, of Hill school, Pottstown, Pa., 6-4, 6-3, Orser and Appel disposed of Seyman Dribben, Jr., Taft school Watertown, Conn., and Robert Kaufman, New York, 6-0, 6-2.

In the six junior singles matches today, Raymond was the only player excluded. He finally pulled out his match against John Hene, New York, 7-5, 6-4, 7-5. In the other five contests, Millen disposed of George Becker, New York, 6-1, 6-4; Johnson conquered Harold Sluiter, Flushing, N. Y., 6-3, 6-3; Ivins disposed of Edward Jenkins, New York, 6-4, 6-4; Hill eliminated Edward Burns, Glenbrook, N. Y., 6-0, 6-1; and Murphy beat Jack Meyers, New York, 6-1, 6-1.

Four survivors emerged from the boys' singles and will meet in the semi-finals tomorrow. Despite his fractured hand, E. H. McCauliff, Fordham, staged an uphill fight to defeat Joseph Defina, Brooklyn, 1-6, 6-3, 6-6, and will meet tomorrow Frank Shields, Silver Meach, N. Y., who today defeated Myron Raymond, New York, 6-1, 6-4.

ELKS' BOWLING LEAGUE OPENS WITH A BANG

The Elks' bowling league opened Monday evening with a spirited match between the Centrals and the West Siders in which the Central boys took three straight games from the boys from the Hardscrabble district. The first string was a nip and tuck affair the Centrals winning out by the scant margin of three pins. Inspired by this close victory the Centrals opened up and the other two matches were easy for them but the enthusiasm ran high until the last ball was sent spinning down the alley.

Combies of the Centrals was the star performer of the evening, getting high single, with 107 and high total with 312. Benny Mandell was off form and received the consolation prize. The scores:

TO BECOME HEAD CONN. ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

Providence, R. I., Dec. 29.—Dr. Ernest V. Claypool, superintendent of the Rhode Island Anti-Saloon League, has resigned and will become head of the Connecticut league, it was announced today. His resignation has been accepted, to take effect January 1.

Dr. Claypool, in his last address, as superintendent of the league, claimed its work has been successful. He urged however, that the heavier penalties be provided for the enforcement of the state prohibition law.

Dr. Claypool's successor has not been appointed.

AUTO CLUB OF NEW HAVEN HAS MEMBERSHIP OF 3,000

New Haven, Dec. 29.—The Automobile Club of New Haven, which has members in many towns of the state and in practically every town in New Haven county, has gone over the top in its campaign to reach a 3,000 membership mark before the end of the year. The club now has 3,011 members and is the largest numerically in New England. The total shows a net gain of 880 during the past year. The annual meeting and election of officers will be held on January 13.

THREE CHILDREN DEAD FROM GAS POSONING

New York, Dec. 29.—Three children at home from school for the Christmas holidays were found dead from gas poisoning today, and three men died from gas poisoning in various parts of the city, bringing the week end gas death toll here to twenty.

King Solomon's Plane

There is some reason to believe that some one fabricated an airship which Solomon gave to the son of the Queen of Sheba. Of course, there was no motor—possibly it was a glider. The secretary of the Royal Aeronautical Society in the preface to "Bibliotheca Aeronautica," states that Solomon gave to the Queen of Sheba "a vessel wherein one could traverse the air for wind, which Solomon had made by the wisdom that God had gave unto him." There are other reference to flight in Abyssinian sacred writings, and there is a long description of the miraculous way in which the Queen of Sheba's son Menelek left Solomon, journeying to his mother's country. "No man hauled his wagon, and whether it was men or horses or mules or loaded camels, each was raised above the ground, to a height of a cubit." A cubit according to the ancient Egyptians, measured about 20 inches, but elsewhere it is recorded that over the Red Sea they were lifted up 3 cubits, "and every one traveled in the wagons like an eagle when his body glideth above the wind."

TRADE UNION FORMED BY RUSSIAN PRINCES

The numerous Russian princes, princesses and other members of the old Russian aristocracy now playing in Paris cabarets in order to earn their board and lodging are taking steps to found a Russian aristocrats' union to protect themselves from German and other "turns" passing themselves off as real blue-blooded Russians.

One Russian cabaret in Montmartre has a cast of 62 Russian refugees, including five princes. Some are dancers, others juggle with knives and one is a sword swallower. Four dollars a night is the maximum wage.

PRECIOUS STONES IN PLANTS

One of the last places in the world in which one would expect to find precious stones, says the Scientific American, would be in the stems of plants. Yet now and again substances which closely resemble opals and pearls are discovered in certain plants. The giant tropical bamboos grow in large clumps to the height of 100 feet. In the young stages of growth the hollow stems of the bamboos filled with a jelly-like substance. As time goes on this dries up and an interesting mineral deposit known as tabasheer is formed. Some of this plays a part in making the bamboo stems stiff and strong, but now and again there is an excess of the mineral which settles in more or less rounded lumps at the joints of the stem. These are pale blue or white in color, and on being heated become brightly phosphorescent. There is a close chemical connection between the lumps of tabasheer in the bamboo and an opal and the general color and the manner of light reflection are much the same.

Stones are now and again met with when sawing up trunks of teak, rosewood and certain other trees. These masses are embedded toward the center of the stem, and it has sometimes been thought that they got into their position when the tree was young and as time went on having become inclosed in the growing wood. Of course, such things do happen in the life of trees, for not only stones, but pieces of iron and other metals have been found. The stones under consideration, however, are produced by the tree itself and are closely similar in their formation to pearls. These vegetable pearls are almost entirely carbonate of lime.

Engineering Survey

The relationship of engineering schools to the various aspects of national life in some of the leading European countries is being studied in connection with the survey of engineering colleges in the United States by W. E. Wickenden, director of investigation of the society for the Promotion of Engineering Education.

This survey, which involves the study of all phases of engineering education, is expected to be one of the most comprehensive pieces of work of this kind ever undertaken in the United States.

WALTER CAMP PICKS HIS MYTHICAL ALL-AMERICAN FOOTBALL ELEVEN

New York, Dec. 29.—(By The A. P.)—The 1924 All - American football eleven picked by Walter Camp, dean of gridiron authorities, is notable chiefly for the selection of no more than one star from any eleven in the country and its failure to place on the first team any representative of the "Big Three"—Harvard, Yale and Princeton.

The easts famous triumvirate, ancient strongholds of the game, is ignored on the first team for the first time in the thirty-five years Camp's selections have been made and regarded as the barometer by which all other mythical combinations are judges. It marks, too, a climax in the widespread development of playing standards since 1889 and 1890, when Camp picked his first two All-American teams entirely from the squads of the "Big Three," then dominant in the game but now forced to yield their ancient supremacy to other and ever-increasing rivals.

Harvard is not represented at all in Camps selections for the first time, the Crimson failing to place a man on either the second or third teams which he also picks. Previously, Harvard had failed only in the war year of 1918 to have an entry on the first eleven. Yale, although it finished its second straight season without defeat and captured the "Big Three" crown once more, is recognized only on the second team, with Captain Lovejoy at center and Dicky Pond in the backfield. Princeton is on even basis in this respect, the Tigers having Beattie at guard and Slagle at quarterback on the second string combination.

Geographically, the 1924 selections are well distributed, for on the first team, the east has six representatives, the middle west five and the far west one. Among the thirty-three players included in the three combinations, the east leads with sixteen, the middle west has ten, the far west six and the south one.

Three players are recognized on the first team for the second time ,they are Harold (Red) Grange, famous Illinois back and outstanding individual star of the year; Ed Garbisch, Army center who returns to the post he held in 1922; and Homer Hazel ,Rutgers, who was picked as an end in 1923 and fullback this season.

Hazel's shift from the line to the backfield has few parallels. Back in 1901, Bunker of West Point was chosen as a tackle and the following year he gained a place as halfback. Walter Eckersall of Chicago was an end on the 1904 eleven but shifted to quarterback where he gained his greatest name, in 1905 and 1906.

Horrell of California also is out of position, although he previously has not been on Camp's first eleven. He is at guard on the 1924 list but is regular post is center.

Six captains are included in the first team. Besides Horrell and Garbisch, they are Bjorkman of Dartmouth and Berry of Lafayette, ends; Weir of Nebraska, tackle, and Walter Koppisch, three-time Columbia leader and backfield star, the first Columbia player to gain a place on the first team since 1906.

Camp's choice vary radically with the opinions of numberless other gridiron critics whose all-star selections already have been published. He selects Bjorkman and Berry, two easterners, for first string ends, whereas a majority of eastern critics rated this pair below Luman of Yale, who is not mentioned at all by Camp, and Mahaney, of Holy Cross, who is placed on the third team.

Slaughter of Michigan, placed at guard, also was overlooked in most published selections, while Diehl of Dartmouth and Farwick of West Point, generally chosen by other critics, as all-eastern guards, find no place in Camp's array.

Notre Dame, despite its recognition as the country's outstanding eleven, fares poorly in the selection. Harry Stuhldreher, field marshal of the famous "Four Horsemen," as the Notre Dame backfield was known, is the only hoosier on the first team. One of his running mates, Jimmy Crowley, is on the second outfit, while Adam Walsh, captain and widely selected as first all-American center by others, is on the third combination. Elmer Layden, Notre Dame fullback and also chosen for first honors in other quarters, is not mentioned.

Harold Shidler, University of Washington back who led the Pacific coast scorers, and Heinie Denkert, Rutgers star who topped the eastern scoring array, also are unmentioned in the Camp list.

The line ups of the three teams selected by Camp and published in Collier's follows:

Broadway Theater

A very enjoyable program was enjoyed by a capacity crowd at the Broadway theater yesterday. It's B. F. Keith vaudeville and the only theater in town playing this vaudeville, the world's best.

The Murray Bros., the bounding bouncers opened the program with sensational stunts that was coated with comedy.

Miss Marcelle followed with Southern Syncopated Songs, with a voice to put over any songs.

A Meritorious Snappy Farce comedy with Harry Stewart, Miss Maxie Berto, and Minnie Desmond in Some Party was in third spot. Its a comedy of distinction.

James Reynolds is a loose leaf from the legend of laughs. He is a monologist whose patter is bright, breezy and original.

Danny Duggan, society dancer, winner of over 100 tournaments, with his latest partner Ann Aker and the Six Hammer Xylophone King Freddie Sanborn topped off this wonderful vaudeville combination.

Tongues of Flame, Thomas Meighan's newest Paramount starring picture which opened yesterday at the Broadway theater, is that kind of a production that sends one out of the theater with the conviction that all's well in the movie world after all—so far as Tom's concerned, at least.

Broadway Theater

There is hardly a man, woman or child in the land who doesn't know and love Peter Pan, the boy who wouldn't grow up.

For the past twenty years this J. M. Barrie play has been nothing short of a sensation on the legitimate stage. It has become an institution, in fact—an institution that shows no sign of decay.

Peter Pan, which opens next Sunday at the Broadway theatre is a scene for scene picturisation of the story as the author wrote it.

Herbert Bernon was selected to direct the picture because he was the producer of the first two fantasies the screen ever knew. Roy Pomeroy, who handled the technical end of the Cecil B. DeMille super-production, The Ten Commandments, which stood the entire industry on end, is responsible for the many weird effects in Peter Pan.

Esther Ralston, George AM. Mary Brian, Philippe de Lacey and Jack Murphy complete the cast of players. Peter Pan was adapted for the screen by Willis Goldbeck.

Breed Theater

Aileen Pringle, the heroine of Three Weeks, Elinor Glyns film production which has had such a successful run all over the country, and John Gilbert, the young leading man whom the English author selected as her ideal of a lover, have the chief roles in Mrs. Glyn's newest version of one of her romantic novels. His Hour is the feature attraction at the Breed theatre today and tomorrow.

Miss Pringle has come into popular favor with astounding rapidity since her appearance in Three Weeks, and later, in True as Steel. Gilbert first won fame in the title role of The Count of Monts Cristo, but has started an entirely new ascendency in popularity, since coming under the guidance of Mrs. Glyn.

Others in the large cast include Emily Fitzroy, Bertram Grassby, Dale Fuller, Mario Carillo, Laurence Grant, Jacqueline Gadson and David Mir.

His Hour, which was directed by King Vidor, is a Metro-Goldwyn picture, presented by Louis B. Mayer.

The Pathe News, Felix the Cat, and a roaring two part comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

A New Steel Process

It is stated that an important discovery in steel production has been made by a Swedish engineer named Flodin which saves 50 per cent of production costs. Tests are now being carried out at the large Uddeholm Steel Works, the practical results of which are said to be very promising.

In the matter of John Lynn Speaks, Bankrupt. In Bankruptcy No. 7063.
Upon Petition for Discharge.
Notice is hereby given that John Lynn Speaks of Waterford, in the County of New London and State of Connecticut, has filed his application, dated Dec. 29th, A. D. 1924, for a discharge from all his debts in bankruptcy, and that all his creditors and other persons interested objecting to such discharge may attend before Thomas M. Shields, Special Master, at his office in Norwich, Conn., on the 21st day of January, 1925, at 2 o'clock p. m., then and there to examine the bankrupt, and to show cause, if any they have, why such discharge should not be granted, and to determine whether or not to authorize the trustee to interpose objections to such discharge.
THOMAS M. SHIELDS,
Special Master.
Norwich, Conn., Dec. 29th, 1924.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR

New York, Dec. 29.—Stock prices developed considerable irregularity toward the close of today's market after an early period of strength, during which more than three score issues were elevated to new high levels for the year. Both the rail and industrial averages showed net declines on the day. Total sales exceeded two millions shares for the first time since December 19.

Lowering of the renewal rate on call money to 4 per cent., establishment of the highest quotation in five years for sterling exchange, the unexpected post-holiday demand for stocks and encouraging week end trade advices, were factors influencing the early rise. Considerable short covering was in evidence during the morning, but subsequent stiffening of money rates caused a temporary abandonment of pool operations in several issues and a renewal of profit taking and bear selling, several issues reacting 1 to 2 points from their early highs.

Fisher Body soared nearly 18 points to 240, the highest price in its history, in anticipation of the stockholders' approval of the proposed change in capitalization, which was announced after the market closed. General Electric jumped more than six points to 301, the highest price since 1902, on reports of high current earnings and a substantial increase in the quoted value of securities held by the company. United States Steel touched 121 for the first time since 1917, in reflection of Chairman Gary's optimistic business forecast for 1925.

With copper producers all asking 15 cents a pound delivered for the red metal, thirteen issues in that group, including Anaconda, Chile, Inspiration and Cerro De Pasco, smashed their previous 1924 high prices. Oils continued to show signs of strength, Simms Petroleum standing out with an extreme gain of four points. Barnsdall A, General Asphalt and Shell Transport also sold at the year's best prices.

Radio Corporation common stock was the spectacular individual performer, soaring 7 1-4 points to 58 3-4, a record top. This stock has more than doubled in value in the last eight weeks.

Sterling exchange resumed its march toward parity, touching $4.75, the highest price since March, 1919, when J. P. Morgan and company announced that they would cease to support British currency at the war time peg points. Swiss francs touched a new high at 19.46 cents and marked strength was shown by the South American currencies, Argentine pesos recording a new high level at 40 cents.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent. and then advanced, successively, to 4 1-2, 5 and 5 1-2 the highest quotation reached since April of last year. Time money and commercial paper rates held steady.

BOND MARKET

New York, Dec. 29.—Bond prices turned reactionary today under the pressure of general selling and profit taking induced by stiffening money rates and the unsettlement in the stock market.

Liquidation of European government obligations was attributed to the uneasiness caused by the refusal of the allies to evacuate the Cologne area in Germany at the scheduled date following reported arms discoveries. In addition rench bonds were adversely affected by the uncertainty over France's position on funding her debt to the United States and the recent expiration of syndicate which floated the $100,000,000 French loan. The new sevens sold as low as 91 1-4, as compared with an offering price of 94, and the Soissons sixes lost 1 3-4 points. Some of the other issues recovered after an early decline. German 7's were fractionally lower.

TAFTVILLE

George Kinder, Jr., of North Third avenue shot his seventh fox for this season. The animal is on exhibition in the window of the store of George W. Weller.

The Community Sewing Class held its regular weekly meeting Monday evening in the Red Cross rooms in the Ponemah Building.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Pingree and daughter of Saylesville, R. I., has returned home after spending the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Pingree and family of North Third avenue.

Denny Murphy, star of the Vernon, Cal., baseball team, who is spending a short vacation with his parents, Postmaster and Mrs. Dennis C. Murphy of South A street, is a daily visitor at the gymnasium of the Army and Navy club on Dion street, where he is keeping in trim for the coming baseball season opening.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Casavant of Bolduc Lane, gave a dinner party of 21 covers, Saturday evening, in honor of Mrs. Casavant's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Woodworth of Windsor Locks. Music and games were enjoyed later in the evening. Mrs. Casavant was assisted by Mrs. Sarah Charpentier and Miss Eva Casavant.

Miss Helen C. Aberg of North Third avenue is spending a few days with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Pingree and family of Saylesville, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Emile Dubeau and daughter, Miss Rose Dubeau were week end guests at the home of Mrs. Dubeau's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lambert and family of North D street.

NORWICH BOY SCOUT COUNCIL ELECTS E. V. ROSS PRESIDENT

At the annual meeting of the Norwich Council, Boy Scouts of America, held Monday night in the scout headquarters in the Shannon building, Edwin V. Ross was elected president of the council to succeed George L. Ingalls, who has held office for the past year. Various reports were made and a discussion of scout policies for the coming year took up the major part of the meeting.

The meeting was called to order at 7.30 o'clock by President Ingalls and the annual report of Secretary Harry W. Cardwell was read and accepted. Treasurer Arthur E. Story then made his report which was accepted as follows:

Receipts and Expenditures.

Receipts—Balance on hand December 27, 1923 $285.42, payments account pledges 1923 $19, cash payments and redemption of pledges, drive of 1924 $3,835.24, received on account store sales $40, New London County Agricultural society $25, camp returns $35.40, miscellaneous receipts $14.86, total $4,254.93.

Expenditures—Paid executive salary $2,497.65, paid office salary $200, paid rent, light, heat and telephone $292.17, paid office equipment $2.75, paid office supplies $72.43, paid camp, hikes, etc., $283.67, paid scout leader, training and confer., $11.70, paid rallies, field day and demonstration $13.70, paid publicity and propaganda $148.10, paid National Council fees $100, paid store purchases $136.66, paid transportation $26.04, paid miscellaneous $12.35, total, $3,797.22.

Balance on hand and on deposit Merchants National bank, December 29, 1924, $471.71, total $4,254.93.

One hundred and thirty bills, approved by three members of the executive committee constitute the expenditures as above designated. There are no outstanding debts to my knowledge.

The amount of unpaid pledges for the years 1923 and 1924 is represented by 37 cards for a total of $217. Payments have been promised the early part of next month in most instances.

The nominating committee then retired and later submitted the following names for officers, all being elected as follows:

President, Edwin V. Ross; vice presidents, Max Hanover, John B. Stanton, Henry D. Johnson and J. Lincoln Crawford; treasurer, Arthur E. Story; secretary, Harry W. Campbell; representative on National Council, Nathan A. Gibbs. New members elected to the general council were Donald Bullard, Norwich; George T. Briggs and George R. Edwards, Voluntown; A. L. Stebbins and L. W. Carpenter, Jewett City; John P. Corcoran, David Gordon, Earl W. Stamm, Thomas Sisk and Peter Sellas, Norwich; Flood E. Reed, North Stonington; Robert O. Branch, Willimantic; Rev. G. F. Goodenough, Ledyard Center; James E. Town, Canterbury; Charles A. Phillips, Plainfield. One additional member of the council is to be named to represent Plainfield.

A vote of thanks was tendered retiring President Ingalls for his work during the past year; also to George T. Briggs of Voluntown for the loan of a site for the Norwich Scout camp. Votes of appreciation were also given The Norwich Bulletin and The Norwich Record for their publicity to Scout work during the past year.

It was voted that a page be set apart in the records of the council in memory of Rev. Richard R. Graham, deceased, member of the council who died during the past year.

Scout Executive F. A. Benton reported that 25 patrol leaders desired to attend the conference to be held at Middletown, Friday and Saturday of this week. Means of transportation were discussed and it was voted that the treasurer advance the $60 necessary for transportation and that the money be returned to the treasurer by subscription from the members of the Scout Council.

Mention was made of securing prominent national scout workers for Norwich addresses in the near future and this matter with that of securing laymen to speak on scout work was left to the executive committee.

Plans for the annual scout drive were discussed to take place during scout anniversary week in February.

The final business of the evening was the report of Scout Executive Benton which was most complete. In accepting the report the council noted the vast amount of work done during the past year, the increase in scout membership, organization of new troops and the interest in scouting by members of all troops. The report which was accepted with a vote of appreciation of Scout Executive Benton's work was in part as follows:

Scout Executive's Report.

The annual report of Scout Executive F. A. Benton follows:

On Jan. 1, 1924, there were 16 troops, 16 scout masters, 15 assistant scout masters, and 325 scouts.

Nov. 12—Troop No. 4 paraded at Taftville for the Red Cross drive.

Nov. 14—Scouts distributed Red Cross stickers to auto owners.

Dec. 5—Detail of scouts, Troop No. 1, gave a demonstration of scouting at Voluntown.

Many good turns were performed by troops and individual scouts, which have not been reported to headquarters.

Forest Fire Warden and Forest Guides

Forty scouts have been appointed Connecticut forest guides by the state forester. These guides act in conjunction with the scout executive and three scout masters, who are also forest fire wardens. They have been quite efficient in putting out forest fires in the vicinity of Norwich. Observation stations and auxiliary lookouts have been established on the hills surrounding the city, where notice is telephoned to the nearest warden, when a fire is seen.

In addition to fighting fires, the guides have posted fire warnings, patrolled forest lands during the fire hazard season, and warned violators of the forestry laws. Their timely work has saved the young white plantations in Mohegan park from destruction.

In consequence of their good work, fewer fires occur, and less loss of property results. This is a kind of activity directly in line with scouting principles.

The scout executive addressed scouts at Bridgeport, Shelton and Naugatuck on the subject of forestry, and aided in forming forest guides in these councils.

Camp Tippecan

Camp committee: Chairman, Harry E. Prentice.

The Norwich council camp at Beach Pond was set up July 5 and closed August 4th. The camp staff consisted of F. A. Benton, director, Victor A. Davis, assistant; Thomas Baldwin, Jr. and Louis Weltin, buglers; Lee Talbot, Alfred Haring, Albert Rodgers, John Jenke, cook and helper; Harry Jordan, Maine guide; and Capt. Guy Winkjer, Red Cross life saving instructor; eleven men with an average of eight men per week. Fifty-four Scouts were in camp, average of two weeks, or 94 boy weeks, and with the staff totalled 65 campers for the season. Overnight hikes, day hikes, and constructive work occupied the time. The campers built a log cabin, made bows and arrows, a totem pole, cleared the parade ground of rocks, placed trail signs and repaired boats and rafts.

Under the life saving instructor several boys learned to swim, and a scout master and three scouts qualified as Red Cross life saving instructors.

Four scouts qualified for first class, three for 2nd and three for tenderfoot. Thirty-one merit badges were earned, mostly outdoor subjects.

Sixty-five scouts were passed, 697 points in the point system, seven scouts won first year camp letters, five the second year, three the third and three the 4th. Two scouts earned the life star badge.

Camp Tippecan's fourth season was the most successful one so far, the conscientious adherence to the scout programme from reveille at 6.30 to taps at 9.30 gave the scouts a busy day and supplied a training that each scout can look back to with feelings of satisfaction and pleasure. The good menu, unexcelled by any camp in the country, kept the boys in the best of health during the season, there being no sickness noted in camp. The Maine guide expressed satisfaction with Camp Tippecan and expressed a desire to return next summer.

Work will be continued on the cabin from time to time with the plan of fitting it for week end and winter camping. The large stone fireplace was inclosed in the structure, and will furnish comfort for the cold weather.

The national department of camping awarded Tippecan a standard camp certificate for conformity with the standard requirements of camping. George T. Briggs extended many courtesies to the camp during the season.

Sports and Activities

Committee: Chairman, J. Nelson Weymouth.

Jan. 12—Hike to Trading Cove.

Feb. 8—Scout bugle and drum corps paraded in Taftville.

Feb. 9—Twenty-four scouts ran a relay to Willimantic with a message from Mayor Waters to Mayor Dion. This message was relayed to Governor Templeton at Hartford, 73 scouts participating.

Scout Masters Round Table

Leadership and training committee: Chairman, Major Charles A. Hagberg.

Held five scout masters round table meetings at headquarters. Advised full adoption of patrol system at troop meetings. Scout masters instructed in method of conducting troop by patrol method.

A committee of patrol leaders met at Hartford, and formulated a program for the patrol leaders conference at Middletown, Jan. 2-3, 1925. This conference of 200 scouts from 4 councils will be a training school for patrol leaders in the conduct of their scout meetings.

Publicity

During the budget week in February four meetings and suppers were held at the Elks club, Buckingham Memorial, and Community house. 500 letters were sent out at this time. Feb. 7-8-9 boy scout movie run at Palace theatre.

Oct. 8—Insect and bee keeping exhibit placed for week in Eaton-Chase's window.

The Norwich Bulletin and the Norwich Evening Record gave a total of many columns of local and scout news during the year. The Hartford Courant pictorial section published pictures of the historical hike and the scout relay, Norwich to Hartford.

New London County Extension

The scout executive has visited the following places to form troops: Canterbury 2, Plainfield 3, Voluntown 1, Taftville 3, Preston 1, Willimantic 2, Jewett City 2.

Addresses have been given at Shelton, Naugatuck and Bridgeport to form and interest forest guides in the preservation of the forests.

Addresses on scouting have been given by the executive at the following places: St. James' church, New London; Norwich Fish and Game association, Rotary club, Lions' club, fire wardens' conference, New London; camp conference, Springfield; Trinity M. GAVE SHOP TALK ON STAR OF THE EAST

The subject of the noon hour address given Monday at the plant of the Richmond Radiator company by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church, was The Star in the East. It was the same message Rev. Mr. Ricketts gave in his church Sunday morning and at the Sheltering Arms in the afternoon.

The following is a brief digest of his thought: Before our Lord's advent there was a general feeling that something extraordinary was about to happen. This impression was not confined to the Holy Land, so-called, but was shared by all the known world. There was nothing like agreement as to what this event was to be. It was a dim and misty belief that the present order of things was to be rudely shaken.

But some more intelligently believed that the event would be connected with some great personality soon to be born. And at this point the speaker referred to the growth of prophecy relating to the Messiah's advent, stressing the words of Isaiah: "Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us."

Among those who believed intelligently were the wise men of the east, probably Parthia. They were descendants from Abraham and were acquainted with the Hebrew scriptures. They knew that a star was to come out of Jacob. About this time it is known that two planets were in conjunction, and here the speaker gave the habits of planets in conjunction that would explain the statement given in Matthew of the motion of the star which led the Magi to Jerusalem and Bethlehem.

Three lessons were drawn from this story of the star. 1. In how many ways does God speak to us! How many are the voices that call us from darkness to light! How various are the lights that illumine our pathway from the midnight to dawn! God gives a light to every man that comes into the world. In the language of another, "the Universal Father sooner or later during our brief period of existence here has a word, a star, for all of us."

2. To make the star effective we must follow it. If we are to get the truth we must go after it. We must follow the star from Parthia to Bethlehem. The wise men had a little stock of knowledge and they made the most of it. "They studied till they saw the star." They kept at it till they actually found. And the reward of their preseverance was the Christ-child. "To him that hath shall be given."

3. The real object of this searching was worship. "We have seen his star in the east and are come to worship Him." We build our churches for the purpose of worship. The main object of church going is worship. There is no such thing as cultivating the religious nature apart from worship. This whole Christmas season is a failure if it has not inspired us to a more intensive worship of Him.

NORWICH TOWN

The Young People's Christian Endeavor society of the First Methodist Episcopal church, held a business meeting Friday evening, at which time officers were elected for the next six months as follows: President, Lewis Aldrich; vice president, LeRoy Miner; secretary, Miss Hazel Cruthers; treasurer, Edward Howe; also the following committees: Missionary, Mrs. William Weaver; prayer meeting, [illegible] Miner; [illegible] Hubert Rudd; music, Mrs. Lewis Irish; flower, Miss Grace Mitchell; [illegible] Effie Ladd; social, Miss Florence M. Brown.

At the First M. E. church Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich, preached from James 1:17 "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights with Whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

The evening preaching service was combined with the Young People's C. E. service, Joseph Olsen, leader. The topic was, The Old Year and the New, with several Scripture reference [illegible].

At the Methodist church this (Tuesday) evening, the fourth quarterly conference is to be held, by the district superintendent, Rev. William H. Bath.

Wednesday evening at the Methodist church, there is to be a union watch night service with the following churches uniting: Norwich Town Congregational, Bozrah Congregational, and Fitchville Baptist. The service is to commence at 8 o'clock.

In his Sunday morning sermon at the First Congregational church, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey spoke from Zechariah, 14-7. But it shall be one day which shall be known to the Lord, not day nor night; but it shall come to pass, that at evening time it shall be light.

Arthur Avery was the leader of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service in the evening, treating the topic, The Old Year and the New. The mid-week prayer service of the Congregational church, scheduled for Thursday evening is to be omitted this week, due to other activities of the church. At this church the annual New Year's programme is to be carried out Thursday. The church meeting for members of the parish only, is to take place at 3.30 o'clock in the church auditorium. This will be followed by the 44th annual organ recital by the organist, Herbert L. Yerrington, an event looked forward to with interest by Mr. Yerrington's friends and acquaintances. The recital will begin at 5 o'clock. At 6 o'clock the parish supper will take place in the chapel.

District Agent Frederick H. Wyant, was in Hartford Monday, on business in the interest of the Connecticut Humane society.

MRS. S. O. PRENTICE'S ESTATE BEING APPRAISED IN N. Y.

At New York during the week, Michael F. Loughran, of the state tax commission, was appointed by Surrogate John P. O'Brien, transfer tax state appraiser of the New York estates left by Anne Combe Post Prentice, late wife of Samuel O. Prentice, a native of North Stonington and former chief justice of the supreme court of Connecticut, since deceased for the purpose of assessing whatever taxes may be due to the state, under the inheritance tax laws.

The action of the surrogate was based upon a petition filed by the Hartford-Connecticut Trust company [illegible] of the estate. Mrs. Prentice died July 1, at the home of her mother, Mrs. Andrew J. Post of Englewood, N. J.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

Reports of the death of Her Majesty Queen Adelaide were received from England in 1849, along with reports that another expedition is soon to leave for the Behring Straits in search of Sir John Franklin.

Items from California and the usual messages from Washington were eagerly awaited by Norwich people and the items, in part, taken from the files of The Norwich Courier of 1849, are as follows:

Tuesday, Dec. 25, 1849.—The annual distribution of pictures, etc., of the American Art union took place in New York on Friday evening last. Among the subscribers who drew a prize was George Bliss, Esq., of this city. It was a "View near Scheveningen," Holland.

We learn that Capt. Stephen Rogers has been appointed inspector of the customs at New London; Capt. Daniel Havens (formerly commander of the Oliver Ellsworth on the Connecticut river), inspector at Norwich; Daniel Stoddard, do, at Allyn's Point, in place of Messrs. Douglass, Porter and Williams.

The immense new engine, Oregon, on the Georgia railroad, weighing 20 tons, crashed through a bridge in Georgia recently, sending the engine and five cars into the chasm 50 feet below, instantly killing the engineer.

Valuable buildings and hotels, mostly on Broadway, New York, have the annexed valuation given them by the assessor: Astor house, $400,000; Irving house, $140,000; New York hotel, $135,000; French's hotel, $130,000; Howard house, $110,000; Stewart's Marble store, $110,000; bonded warehouse, $200,000.

The message of the president recommends a revision of the tariff, also the reduction of single letter postage to the uniform rate of five cents.

Thursday, Dec. 27, 1849.—Sixty-four ballots have been taken for speaker of the house and the last vote showed Winthrop, whig, to have 100 votes and Cobb, democrat, to have 102 votes. As 113 votes are necessary for a choice, the speakership still remains in doubt.

The steamship Empire City arrived in New York Tuesday morning from the isthmus with $500,000 in gold and 250 passengers, transferred across the isthmus from Panama. Gwinn and Fremont are reported to be safe choices for the U. S. senate from California and it is believed that Peter H. Burnett has been elected governor of the state.

C. H. Hinckley and H. A. Frink have opened offices in Coit's building, corner of Main and Shetucket streets, for the purpose of teaching mono-chromatic, isometrical prespective and pure perspective drawing. Lessons are to be given to ladies and gentlemen at their residences if it is desired.

Julius Webb & Co. and John Barnes propose to visit local houses on Fridays and Mondays to distribute yeast which comes by rail in six hours from Warehouse Point. This yeast will be found to raise bread in from 15 to 45 minutes and women are asked to be ready when the men arrive at their homes.

The catalogue of Yale college for the year shows students from every state in the Union except Arkansas.

Saturday, Dec. 29, 1849.—We understand that two or three of our Norwich adventurers have returned from California. One, a Mr. Phillips of the Falls, has brought back $3,000 with him, but a friend, a Mr. Prince, formerly second mate on the New York boat, was robbed of $4,000 while on the Empire City. We understand that he is to return to California to try his luck.

Another fatal accident occurred on the New London and Willimantic railroad yesterday when a brakemen, Z. Elliott of New London, was killed at Yantic. We understand that he went to the top of the car for his overcoat and was knocked off the car when it passed under the bridge.

The steamship Isaac Newton brought $127,000 at the sale in the exchange yesterday. Eight other steamships sold at from $8,000 to $36,000. A sale of local interest, in bonds, was that of 2,274 shares of stock in the Norwich and New London Steamboat Co., par value $25, which brought from 48 to 54 per cent.

Capt. John VanPelt, formerly commander of one of our Norwich and New York boats, is now in command of the steamer Senator, which is doing a great business in Sacramento.

The southern men did not like President Taylor's message, claiming that if it meant anything, it meant the Wilmot proviso.

A. M. E. ZION SUNDAY SCHOOL GAVE PROGRAM

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. Dixon A. Brown, the adult members of the A. M. E. Zion Sunday school arranged an impromptu programme Sunday evening which proved very successful. Members of the congregation expressed surprise at the extraordinary talen posseased by the Sunday school. The programme follows:

Processional, Joy to the World; Scripture reading, Speed Evans; prayer, Henry Reeves; reading, William Fields; solo, Miss Irene V. Gwathmey; reading, Miss Edna King; hymn, It Came Upon the Midnight Clear; reading, Mrs. Matilda McKnight; hymn, Silent Night; duet, violin and cornet, R. H. Johnson, Jr., and Mrs. Irene Crawford; reading, Mrs. Ida Belle Parker; duet, Mrs. R. H. Johnson and Miss Irene V. Gwathmey; prayer, Speed Evans. R. H. Johnson, Sr., was master of ceremonies.

POETRY

THE DAY AFTER CHRISTMAS.

'Twas the day after Christmas, and all through the house
Not a creature was happy, not even a mouse.

The stockings were mixed in childish despair—
Red leg and blue leg, each wore a queer pair.

The toys were all broken, unseen in the dark
The baby had swallowed one-half the Noah's Ark.

The doctor had come, with horse on the jump,
To extract the green bear with his great stomach pump.

The daughter, fair Emily, shuddered with woe;
'Twas another girl's name on the gift from her beau.

The father had said, the long and the short,
If Christmas should come again—Bankruptcy Court.

Mother smiled on all kindly and said, full of cheer,
"It's lucky for us Christmas comes once a year."

And remarked to her husband, "Oh, be not distressed, You've twelve months still left you in which you may rest."

All hushed was the house, save in the front porch,
Where for seven long hours Tom wound his watch.

His money all spent, no presents to fear,
The father wished all of them Happy New Year.

—Edward W. Hazewell.

THE QUIET LIFE.

What pleasure have great princes
More dainty to their choice
Than herdsmen wild, who careless
In quiet life rejoice,
And fortune's fate not fearing
Sing sweet in summer morning?

Their dealings plain and rightful
Are void of deceit;
They never know how spiteful
It is to kneel and wait
On favorite, presumptuous;
Whose pride is vain and sumptuous.

All day their flocks each tendeth;
At night they take their rest;
More quiet than who sendeth
His ship unto the East,
Where gold and pearl are plenty;
But getting very dainty.

For lawyers and their pleading,
They 'steem it now a straw;
They think that honest meaning
Is of itself a law;
Whence conscience judgeth plainly,
They spend no money vainly.

O happy who thus liveth!
Not caring much for gold:
With clothing which sufficeth
To keep him from the cold.
Though poor and plain his diet,
Yet merry it is, and quiet.

—William Byrd.

FRANCE NOT CONSIDERING REPUDIATION OF WAR DEBT

Misunderstanding Has Arisen Over Balance Sheet Prepared by M. Clementel, French Minister of Finance—President Coolidge is of the Opinion That Discussions of Report Has Not Reached a Stage Where They Justified Official Consideration—Conference of Allied Finance Ministers is to Meet Next Week in Paris—War Debts May Be Discussed at That Time.

Washington, Dec. 30.—Developments in the American-French debt funding situation were continued today to White House quarters where it was announced that President Coolidge had not, as a result of the general discussions current in Paris and Washington of possible repudiation of the debt by France, reached any definite conclusions of his own nor had he received any reports that such discussions had reached a stage where they justified official consideration.

At the same time, however, it was made clear that the president was keeping fully advised regarding all phases of debt funding and that it was not improbable but that he would, in event discussions of repudiation developed to the point where official recognition became necessary see fit to influence the attitude of the Washington government regarding the floating of loans for foreign governments by private agencies in the United States.

Statements from Paris officials and from French embassy quarters here that M. Clementel, French minister of finance, had not ignored the debt that government owes the United States when he failed to include the debt total on the balance sheet he prepared and that France recognized its obligations to pay were noted by Washington officials but provoked no comment.

As the situation rested tonight it was explained that the French authorities have not suggested that they ever considered such a move as repudiation of obligations to the United States. No French authority, with the exception of Ambassador Jusserand, who was said to have acted entirely on his own initiative in taking up the question with Secretary Mellon, has communicated to any representatives of this government any word whatever regarding the debt situation.

On the other hand, it was pointed out the attitude of the American government has been made clear on several occasions in official pronouncements to the allied and associated powers.

Inquiry at the state department late today revealed that so far as known here Ambassador Herrick had received no explanation of the Clementel balance sheet incident. Had any member of the French foreign office seen fit to inform this government of the circumstances attending the publication of the Clementel report, in an effort to prevent possible misunderstanding in the United States, Mr. Herrick would have communicated at once any such report to the state department. Neither has any word reached the state department from the French embassy here regarding any of the many phases of the debt funding situation.

It was made known at the state department, however, that the Washington government had been informed of the subjects to be discussed at the forthcoming meeting of the allied and associated finance ministers. While no definite agenda has been prepared, it was said that the questions to be dealt with would relate to the definite allocation of the proceeds the various governments represented will receive from Germany under the Dawes plan.

The allied and associated governments have been informed that Col. James A. Logan, American reparations expert, will attend the gathering of the finance ministers as the American representative and notification of his selection has been received by the various powers with expressions of satisfaction.

ALLIED FINANCIAL MINISTERS TO MEET IN PARIS NEXT WEEK

Paris, Dec. 30.—(By The A. P.)—The conference of allied finance ministers here next week with James A. Logan, Jr., American representative with the reparation commission, who will represent the United States, is expected by close observers to be a far more important event than the original agenda indicated.

The conference, it is understood, will be called upon not only to establish a basis for sharing the proceeds of the Dawes reparation plan, but will be asked to revise the percentages of distribution of reparations among the allies as fixed at Spa. The French delegate to the conference will raise these questions.

Whether war debts will also be discussed at the meeting depends, it is stated, upon the plans of Winston Churchill, the British chancellor of the exchequer, who is credited here with the intention of bringing this much talked of matter up in some form. Both reparations and war debts are now regarded in French political circles as having reached a point where they cannot longer remain without solution.

French business men are particularly anxious to get the debt question out of the way since they declare it is now the only element that prevents the final stabilization of the international financial situation.

CONFUSED PRICE MOVEMENT IN NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

New York, Dec. 30 (By the A. P.)—Widespread shifting of speculative accounts brought about a very confused price movement in today's stock market. Both the rail and industrial averages losing ground, although 32 individual issues soared to new peak prices for the year.

One of the most erratic movements of the day took place in General Electric, which has been the subject of countless rumors regarding dividend and recapitalization plans. When it was announced just before the market closed that the company would segregate its electric board of share holdings through the formation of a new company whose stock would be distributed to General Electric stockholders, the stock broke from 307 1-2, the highest price reached since 1902, to 286, closing at 297 for a net loss of nearly 3 points on the day.

This break precipitated a sharp decline in many other active issues, losses of one to nine points being scattered throughout the list, with Motors recording the largest decline.

The list of new highs included Famous Players common and preferred, General Asphalt common and preferred, Shell Union common and preferred, Barnsdall A, Radio Corporation, American Express, International Telephone, Beechnut Packing, California Packing, Postum Cereal, S. S. Kresge, American Metal, U. S. Smelting preferred, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Continental Can, Wrigley, Tobacco Products and U. S. Industrial Alcohol. Ginter company and Durham Hosiery preferred broke to new low prices for the year.

Demand sterling touched another new high above $4.73 1-2.

DIVED WITH PLANE IN AN EFFORT TO CURE DEAFNESS

Mitchel Field, N. Y., Dec. 30.—Although physicians warned that the experiment was doomed to failure, Joseph Kling took a 5,000 foot plunge today in an effort to shake off the deafness which for ten years had kept him out of the United States army.

The plunge, made in an airplane at Mitchel field, was unsuccessful, as forecast. Army doctors said Kling's deafness was chronic and that airplane diving, reputed to have cured some such cases, would not avail except where the deafness was the result of shock or of hysterical tendencies.

Kling, a garment worker, has conversed by lip-and-finger language since scarlet fever and diphtheria left him, nineteen years ago, with thickened eardrums.

NOW 12 STATE POLICEMEN, AT WESTPORT BARRACKS

Hartford, Dec. 30.—State police barracks in other parts of the state are being stripped of all except necessary men in order to increase the force on duty at the newly established Westport barracks, center of the epidemic of burglaries which have terrorized Westport, Fairfield, Southport and Green Farms, Superintendent Robert T. Hurley of the state police admitted tonight. There are now 12 state officers on duty at Westport.

WITNESSES BLAME HYLAN FOR TRANSIT CONDITIONS

New York, Dec. 30.—Two more Rapid Transit company officials, veterans in the business of providing daily transportation for millions, today told Supreme Court Justice McAvoy, Governor Smith's investigator of New York's involved transit troubles, that Mayor Hylan's administration was to blame for the situation.

Frank Hedley, president and general manager of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, and his assistant, James S. Doyle, informed the investigator that the tangle, so far as the Interborough was concerned, was due to the inadequacy of sewer and inspection facilities; and that they testified, was directly due to the city's inaction inasmuch as the municipality, under the dual contracts of almost 12 years ago, obligated itself to construct them.

Their testimony was in large part a corroboration of that of State Transit Commissioners McAneny and Harkness and William J. Melden, president of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Rapid Transit Corporation, which shares the bulk of the greater city's transportation burden with the I. R. T.

WOOD RESIGNS AS HEAD OF AMERICAN WOOLEN CO.

Boston, Dec. 30.—William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen company, this afternoon submitted his resignation to the board of directors, it was said here tonight by Attorney Wheaton Kitteridge, a director.

New Bedford, Mass., Dec. 30.—Andrew G. Pierce, Jr., tonight confirmed the report of his election as head of the American Woolen company.

Shawsheen Village, Mass., Dec. 30.—The board of directors of the American Woolen company held a meeting here today which lasted for several hours. No announcements were made at the conclusion but tonight rumors became current that William M. Wood had resigned from the presidency.

HEARING ON WEEHAWKEN LIQUOR CASES FRIDAY

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 30.—The Hudson county grand jury adjourned today until Friday without hearing further testimony regarding the Weehawken liquor charges. Both Rocco Peretta and Jeremiah Sullivan, who were scheduled to testify as to the alleged payment of money to David J. Allen and John J. Coyle for the release of liquor in a New York warehouse, failed to appear.

Peretta, in a telephone conversation from his home in Schenectady, N. Y., with Assistant Prosecutor McMahon, said he was too ill to appear before the grand jury but promised to do so as soon as he had recovered.

FIRE ON JAPANESE LINER BROUGHT UNDER CONTROL

Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 30 (By the A. P.).—The fire on the Japanese liner Ginyo Maru, burning off the coast of Central Mexico, is under control and nearly extinguished, according to a radio message from the Union oil tanker Santa Maria to the Federal Telegraph company here.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Russia Orders 100 Airplanes.

London, Dec. 30.—The Russian soviet government, it was announced here today, has ordered 100 passenger airplanes from Fokker, the famous airplane builder. The machines are to be built in Holland and fitted with British engines.

McLEAN INTRODUCES BILL AND PETITIONS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 30.—Senator George P. McLean of Connecticut, introduced the following bill and petitions in the United States senate Monday:

Bill, to authorize the reduction of and to fix the rate of interest to be paid by carriers upon notes or other evidences of indebtedness heretofore issued under the provisions of Section 207 of the transportation act, 1920, or section 210 of said act, as amended by an act approved June 5, 1920.

Petitions of each district republican club of Bridgeport; War Mothers' Association No. 1, of New Haven; The Lions' club of New Haven; National Circle, Daughters of Isabella, Russell Circle, No. 1, Daughters of Isabella, of New Haven and Branch No. 895, National Association of Letter Carriers of Putnam, all in the state of Connecticut, urging the enactment of legislation increasing the salaries of postal employes.

Petitions of Connecticut Women's Christian Temperance Union of Hartford and Women's Christian Temperance Union of Winsted, Connecticut, urging the enactment of H. R. 6645, proposing to amend the national prohibition act; to establish a bureau of prohibition in the treasury department and to place its personnel under the civil service act.

Petitions of Women's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church at Ansonia and Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church at Forestville Connecticut, requesting a reconsideration of the Japanese exclusion act with a view to elimination of race discrimination and reestablishment of the bonds of friendship between the United States and Japan.

Petition from the Connecticut Fish & Game Protective Association of New Haven, Connecticut, favoring the enactment of senate bill No. 2913 known as the game refuge-public shooting ground bill.

Petition from Local No. 72, Journeymen Barbers International Union of America at Hartford, Connecticut, favoring the enactment of Senate Bill No. 3218, by Mr. Jones, providing for the compulsory observance of Sunday as a day of rest.

Petition from Woman's Club of Killingly, Connecticut, favoring the passage of senate joint resolution, No. 98, providing for an appropriation to defray the expense of the Quinquennial meeting of the International Council of Women.

MORE PROTESTS AGAINST POSTAL RATES INCREASES

Washington, Dec. 30.—Protests from business, publishing and other national organizations against the proposed increases in postal rates were made before the joint congressional sub-committee today as it practically concluded hearings on the administration bill providing for increased rates to meet the cost of proposed postal salary advancements.

Chairman Moses announced tonight the hearings would be finished tomorrow morning and that the senate sub-committee would be asked immediately to consider the bill with a view to getting it before the full post office committee and reported to the senate by Monday. At that time, the senate is scheduled to take up President Coolidge's veto of the postal pay bill.

While representatives of various organizations were declaring before the sub-committee today that the proposed increases threatened the future of their business, J. L. Suter, representing the National One-Cent Letter league, urged the committee to consider a reduction in first mail rates.

Wallace O'Dell, of the National Editorial Association, in a statement read by William L. Daley, informer the committee that an increase in second class rates would imperil the existence of 12,000 weekly and small daily newspapers.

The American Farm Bureau Federation in a statement placed in the record by E. B. Bird, its Washington representative, protested vigorously against the proposed advance in parcel post rates.

The increases in second class rates would boost the postal bills of the National Geographic society, the American Medical Association, and the National Education Association by 445 per cent., Dr. Hilbert Grosvenor, president of the Geographic society, declared in a statement read to the committee. He urged, however, that if the increases were approved, sufficient time be given for the magazines to rearrange their advertising contracts to help meet the added cost.

William R. Denny, executive assistant to the postmaster general, explained the care used in working out the cost ascertainment report on the cost of handling each class of mail to show that nothing but actual service be given by the department was charged against any class of mail users in compilation of the report. Joseph Stewart, who was in charge of preparing the report, will appear before the sub-committee tomorrow in defense of the report.

EXPRESS MESSENGER WAS KILLED IN TRAIN HOLD-UP

Chicago, Dec. 30.—An express messenger was shot and killed by one or more robbers who attempted to hold up Chicago & Northwestern passenger train No. 402 as it neared Chicago tonight.

Early reports did not indicate whether the robbers obtained any loot. The express messenger who was killed was named Dickey and is said to live at Milwaukee.

One of the robbers left the train at Winnetka, a suburb, and holding up a taxi driver at the point of a pistol, forced the driver to take him to Evanston, where he escaped.

According to first reports, three hold-up men boarded the train at Lake Forest and proceeded to the rear coach, an express car, where they attempted to hold up the messengers.

Several shots were fired and during the shooting Dickey was killed. The train, running between Minneapolis and Chicago, was due here at 9.10 p. m.

Search has begun in Detroit, Mich., and New York city for William Tarbox of East Hampton, who left for the western city October 27th and has not been heard from since.

DEEMS W. J. BRYAN'S VIEWS AS DANGEROUS TO RELIGION

Washington, Dec. 30.—Advances in psychology, medicine, biology, chemistry and physics were disclosed in hundreds of papers read today before the fifteen sections of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the 76th annual meeting of which is now in full swing.

Thirty-nine hundred members were registered during the day and a flurry of interest was caused by a report that William J. Bryan would arrive in time to listen to a criticism of his views on evolution, but he failed to appear.

Dr. Edward L. Rice, professor of zoology, at Ohio Wesleyan university, a Methodist institution, choosing "Darwin and Bryan," as his text, characterized the views of Mr. Bryan on evolution as "dogmatic," and "dangerous to religion," and urged more unprejudiced co-operation in scientific and religious studies.

Mr. Bryan's arguments, he said, were deduced "from the assumption of the literary accuracy of the Bible in general, and of the first two chapters of Genesis in particular. "This assumption was "not Biblical" nor was it "accepted by leading Bible schools of today." Darwin's work on the contrary was represented as having been based upon a hypothesis "followed by the most complete verification and leading to a degree of probability amounting to practical certainty."

Members of the association and their guests will be received by President Coolidge at the White House tomorrow.

BINGHAM CAMPAIGN COST THE REP. PARTY $39,158.38

Hartford, Dec. 30.—In the campaign to elect Col. Hiram Bingham to the United States senate the republican state central committee spent $39,158.38, according to a financial statement filed with the secretary of state today by Chairman J. Henry Roraback. The democrats spent approximately 25 per cent. of that amount in the effort to elect Hamilton Holt, but the democratic statement has not yet been filed.

The republicans came out of the campaign with a balance on hand of $9,174.73, the receipts aggregating $48,333.11, and so far as can be learned the democrats barely kept within their receipts. Having a balance of $34,558.52 left after the campaign preceding the general election of November, the republicans raised only $13,-773.59 during the special senatorial campaign. The republican state ways and means committee, of which Morgan B. Braided is treasurer, raised $3,160 of that amount, and the remainder was contributed directly to Chairman Roraback.

PRESIDENT OF OWNERS OF RAILROAD SECURITIES

New York, Dec. 30.—Milton W. Harrison, a banker, was elected president of the National Association of Owners of Railroad securities at a meeting of the executive committee today to succeed S. Davies Warfield, resigned.

Mr. Warfield, whose resignation was said to have been accepted at his urgent request, will continue to serve on various committees of the organization. The committee adopted a resolution expressing to the retiring president "the lasting obligations" of the association membership for his services, and the hope that "he will continue to stand by with his counsel and assistance in connection with any existing or future formulations of public policy or emergency affecting the railways and the owners of these securities."

Past Year Has Been Windy, Cold And Dry

Statistics of Remarkable Weather Given by Government Meteorologist in New York.

New York, Dec. 30 (By the A. P.).—The year 1924 has brought to New York city some remarkable things in the way of weather, James H. Scarr, government meteorologist, said today.

It has been a windy year and cold year and, according to Mr. Scarr, a dry one—a year in which a bona fide waterspout took occasion to frolic with a shipload of feather pillows in the harbor; and a year when the record snowfall of eight inches was registered on April Fool's day.

For instance, the average temperature throughout 1924 has been 51 degrees, Fahrenheit, which, up to tonight and remembering that it's leap year, means that a total loss of 396 degrees from the average has been piled up in 363 days.

Each day, therefore, has been 1.1 degrees colder than the average day in the average year of the last century. Or, for that matter, colder than history has recorded as an average since white men took up residence upon the isle of Manhattan, according to Mr. Scarr.

The coldest day of 1924 was on last Jan. 22d, when the mercury sunk to 4 degrees above zero. The warmest day was last Aug. 7, when the fingers, mechanical and human, which compile these statistics, wrote that it was 93 in whatever shade there was at the weather bureau.

Records of the century were, respectively, 13 below zero in December, 1917, and 102 1-2 in the shade on Aug. 7, 1918.

Despite the eight-inch snowfall and the ensuing thunderstorm which ushered in last April, the total precipitation for the year has been 37.72 inches as compared with the normal 44.6. Even so, it was slightly wetter than were 1923 or 1921, or even 1916, when only 33.17 inches of rainfall were recorded.

The record wind velocity was 77 miles per hour, spun by the bureau's anemometer last Nov. 16. There were, however, a dozen other days when 69 to 74 mile gales were registered.

Mr. Scarr is not making any forecasts for next year. He believes every one must be his own long-distance prognosticator until science determines whether, and, if so, how much, the earth's general temperature and corresponding rainfall, winds, fogs, etc., are affected by sun spots, volcanic eruptions, earth and sea lifts, or variations in the tilt of the earth's axis and in the form of its ecclipse.

Therefore, the weather bureau will continue next year to confine its forecastings to periods ranging from 24 hours, regionally, to a week, generally.

For Permanent Court Of Internat'l Justice

Joint Letter Written by 28 Prominent Republicans Made Public by Senator Borah.

New York, Dec. 30.—Asking him to urge action upon the senate committee on foreign relations in support of the permanent court of international justice, 28 prominent republicans have written a joint letter made public here today to Senator William Borah of Idaho, chairman of the committee.

The letter says that failure of the senate to act in this matter would repudiate President Coolidge and oppose the will of the republican party.

Those who signed the letter are: George W. Wickersham, former attorney general in the cabinet of President Taft; Governor Percival P. Baxter, Maine; Congressman Frederick W. Ballinger, of Massachusetts; Ex-Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas; Ex-Governor Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri, now chancellor of Washington university, St. Louis; A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard university; Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, Bishop of Massachusetts Protestant Episcopal church; Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, New York; Gilbert Bettman, of Cincinnati, former commander of the American Legion of Ohio, and former vice-mayor; Leonard S. Horner, of New Haven, former chief of staff, bureau aircraft production, during the World war; Mrs. Everett Colby, delegate-at-large to the republican national convention from New Jersey; V. Everet Macy, of New York, former chairman shipbuilding adjustment board, and umpire of Washington Labor board during the World war; John T. Pratt, of New York, chairman national budget commission; acting Mayor John C. Lodge, of Detroit; William Jay Schieffelin, of New York, president Serbian Children's Welfare Society of America; Adelbert Moot, Buffalo, ex-president of New York State Bar Association; George A. Plimpton, New York, ex-president of the board of trustees of Amherst college; Oscar S. Straus, of New York, former ambassador to Turkey; Henry Goddard Leach, editor, New York; Rush C. Butler, Chicago, former counsel interstate commerce commission; Thomas C Day, Indianapolis; Isaac Ullman, of New Haven; Daniel Willard, railroad president; Edward W. Decker, banker, Minneapolis; Samuel Mather, Cleveland, Ohio; Edwin G. Merrill, banker, New York; Mrs. Henry Phipps, New York; Edwin S. Webster, Boston, engineer.

C. S. JACKSON ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF LARCENY

Boston, Dec. 30.—Caleb S. Jackson, whose alleged peculations as treasurer of the Eastern Mutual Insurance Company were placed at $48,590 in the report of state examiners today, was discharged an hour or two after the report was made, from the hospital where he had been recovering from two attempts at suicide. He was then arrested and arraigned, charged with larceny of that amount. Still weak from his sickness, he was released on $10,000 bail, with his case continued until Jan. 13.

The insurance examiner's report showed that there were no bonds to represent Jackson's announced investment of the company's funds in securities of the Dressler Oil Company of Oklahoma; and that instead demand notes had apparently been made out for the amounts just before the examination began. These notes bore Jackson's signature as treasurer of the oil company. It was charged also that false entries were made on the company's books after the audit began to cover fictitious transactions.

The amount set by the examiners, $48,590, was shown to be more than half the funds of the insurance company, which was credited as a subsidiary of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company to handle its workmen's compensation business. Jackson became its treasurer in his capacity as treasurer of the street railway company. It has been said that the accounts of the latter are intact.

CONG. SCOTT TESTIFIES IN HIS SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Alpena, Mich., Dec. 30.—Congressman Frank D. Scott of Michigan, continued his testimony today in his suit for divorce, which is being contested by Mrs. Scott, contending that the attitude of his wife toward other members of congress from Michigan and their wives had almost wrecked his political career and that her extravagance had left him almost penniless.

Scott, during his testimony yesterday, declared his wife had entertained army officers late at night in their apartment during his absence.

He testified today that at one time after he had accused his wife of indiscretions he had dared her to kill him. "I went into her bedroom," Scott testified, "gave her my loaded revolver and ordered her to shoot me if I lied in my accusations. She refused to shoot."

Mrs. Scott has filed an answer and a cross bill to his suit in her answer she accuses her husband of gambling and purchasing large quantities of liquor.

HOUSE PASSES TREASURY POSTOFFICE SUPPLY BILL

Measure, With Its $763,000,000 Total, is the Largest Peace Time Appropriation Bill Ever Considered in Congress—Sent to the Senate Without Amendment After Two Days' Consideration—Passage Leaves the Way Clear in the House For Consideration of the Army Appropriation Bill—Senate Has Passed 137 Bills and Resolutions.

Washington, Dec. 30. — Speeding along at almost an unprecedented legislative clip, the house today passed the treasury-post office supply bill which, with its $763,000,000 total, is the largest peace time appropriation measure ever considered by congress.

Sent to the senate practically without amendment after only two days' consideration, the bill provides, among other things, $11,000,000 for prohibition enforcement and $20,000,000 for the coast guard service, half of which would be available during the coming fiscal year for use in curbing rum smuggling.

Other items in the bill include $2,-600,000 for operation of the trans-continental air mail service, $526,375 for maintenance of pneumatic mail tubes in New York city, $16,656,200 for the customs service and $9,103,101 for the public health service.

The fourth of the annual supply bills to go to the senate, which so far has failed to act on any of them, the bill's passage cleared the way for consideration by the house late in the week of the army appropriation measure.

Just before final action on the bill Representative Busby, democrat, Mississippi, moved to recommit the bill to the appropriation committee to have the appropriation for the pay of rural mail carriers raised from $88,350,000 to $89,250,000. The motion was lost 69 to 147.

40 RUM CHASERS ARE PATROLLING RUM ROW

New York, Dec. 30.—Rum Row was being patrolled tonight by an armed flotilla of 40 coast guard rum chasers and five destroyers under orders from Washington to dam the flow of New Year's liquor.

The liquor fleet consists of eighteen schooners and steamers, having doubled in number since the capture Christmas eve of the British schooner Patara, which coast guard officials believed might act as a deterrent upon the rum runners. The fleet has also edged closer to land, although the Patara was sighted eighteen miles out. The rum boats are now huddled between Ambrose lightship and Fire Island.

It was estimated by enforcement officials today that the rum ships are loaded with up to 800,000 cases of liquor valued, at bootleg prices, as high as $40,000,000.

The government fleet, aside from the five destroyers, consists of three coast guard cutters armed with one-pounders and machine guns and 37 speed boats armed with machine guns, rifles and sidearms. Many of the speed boats are also equipped with high-powered radio sets.

One of the rum chasers was stationed close to each liquor carrier and the rest patrolled the waters of the bay to check the activity of small carriers seeking to find opportunity to run the official gauntlet and run some of the high-priced contraband ashore.

It was also intimated that some members of the coast guard boats would make flying trips to the four rum boats anchored off Martha's Vineyard and the six off Sea Girt on the New Jersey coast.

Today's action against the rum-runners was characterized by coast guard officials as the most wide-sweeping and impressive gesture yet made by government agencies against the liquor fleet, and it was believed that the usual holiday rum flow would be effectually stopped.

TO BEGIN INQUIRY INTO THE NEEDS OF THE NAVY

Washington, Dec. 30.—The future of the American navy took on a new aspect today with simultaneous expressions of opinion from both the White House and the house naval committee as to what should be the first step in that direction.

Just as the house committee decided to begin an inquiry into the needs of the navy, it was revealed that President Coolidge still is hopeful that another international arms limitation conference may be held during 1925.

Although the president is not entirely convinced that such a conference will be possible, he, nevertheless, is hopeful that an opportune time will arise for such a venture.

The naval committee, in agreeing to a motion for an investigation, took the position that Secretary Wilbur should be given an immediate opportunity to present to congress such recommendations as he might deem expedient.

The action was taken after a stormy session, and it was only after much debate that a decision was reached to have Mr. Wilbur appear before the committee January 3 for this purpose.

WINS PRIZE IN HOME LIGHTING ESSAY CONTEST

New York, Dec. 30.—Miss Julia Groo, 18, of Portland, Oregon, has been awarded a $15,000 model home as first prize in a home lighting essay contest in which 8,000,000 school children in the United States and Canada competed, the lighting educational committee announced tonight.

Ten other boys and girls received scholarships, ranking in value from $300 to $1,200. George R. Pincaroc of Oakland, Calif., and Dorothy Lathe of Quebec, were given $1,200 scholarships. Awards worth $600 were made to John P. Crawford of Kokomo, Ind., Lucille Brewer of Gainesville, Ga., Joe Kelly of Martinsville, Ind., and Irene Kline of Lowville, N. Y. Scholarships valued at $300 were given to Roswell E. Brett of Watertown, N. Y., Mary W. Holman of Huntsville, Mo., Everett E. Wigger of West Alexandria, O., and Eleanor Link of Lancaster, N. Y.

The scholarships may be used in any American or Canadian college or university.

AMERICAN MISSIONARIES IN CHINA BELIEVED SAFE

New York, Dec. 30.—American missionaries in the zone of the recent fighting in China are believed to be safe, according to a cable received here today by the National Lutheran Council from the American legation at Peking. A paraphrase of the cable follows:

"The American consul general at Hankow telegrapher today that he was in receipt of a telegram from the American missionary Vikner at Hsuchowfu stating that all foreigners there were safe; that all foreigners at Juchow were proceeding to Hsuchowfu, and that Kahsien was captured on the 18th."

NO CHANGE IN BUSINESS ACTIVITY IN NEW ENGLAND

Boston, Dec. 30.—There has been no net change in general business activity in New England since October, 1924, the monthly review of industrial and financial conditions in New England, issued by the Federal Reserve bank of Boston, published on Dec. 31, states. A seasonable decline in the three leading industries of the district was reported. The output of shoes was less in November than in October; with fewer working days in November, less cotton and wool were consumed than in the preceding month, and reports from employment offices showed a smaller demand for workers, the review discloses. The building industry continues to be relatively quiet, the report indicates.

"In Massachusetts there was practically no change in the number of workers on factory payrolls between October and November, nor was there an appreciable increase in the number on full time," according to the report.

"The volume of department store trade continues to be unsatisfactory. Daily average sales in November were slightly less than in the same month last year, and even the Christmas trade was poor. Sales of Boston department stores in the first 15 working days of December were nearly 3 per cent. less than in the corresponding period a year ago. Merchants reported that a relatively large number of sales were made but that the call was for cheaper-priced merchandise and the smaller kind of articles.

"Wholesale commodity prices have been strong and rising for several months. Basic commodity prices during the latter period of December were higher than at any time since the early part of 1923. More commodities have increased in price than decreased in every week since the middle of July.

"To be sure," the report states, "the excess of increases as compared with decreases has not been as large at any time as it was in the first week of August. This in itself may be a very significant fact.

"The credit situation in this district continues favorable," according to the review. "Department store collections during November improved but wholesale trade collections declined slightly. The volume of 'commercial' loans made by member banks to customers declined throughout November and the first part of December, following the usual seasonal trend."

KID M'COY IN DESPAIR AT OUTCOME OF TRIAL

Los Angeles, Dec. 30.—Kid McCoy, ex-pugilist, convicted of manslaughter last night in connection with the shooting of Mrs. Theresa W. Moore here last August, tonight seemed plunged into despair at the outcome of his trial.

Following his conviction, the prisoner was taken from the "tank," which he had occupied with other offenders, and tonight is alone in a small cell.

He strenuously protests his innocence and declared emphatically that the verdict against him is unjust.

New Year's day will bring up a marked contrast before the expugilist's mind. On New Year's day, 25 years ago, he rose to one of the heights of his fistic career, when he knocked out Peter Maher at the Coney Island Sporting club, New York.

McCoy's attorneys announced today that they would make a motion to appeal from the verdict before Superior Judge Charles S. Crail on Friday, when the fighter will appear for sentence.

TWO CHILDREN KILLED ON JAPANESE LINER

Los Angeles, Dec. 30.—Two children were killed and two steerage passengers badly burned in the fire which broke out early today aboard the Japanese liner Ginyo Maru 1,500 miles south of here, on the west coast of Mexico, according to radio advices received tonight by the Federal Telegraph company.

The message was received from the Ginyo Maru itself, which was interpreted here as meaning that with the vessel's radio again in operation progress was being made against the flames.

The dispatch stated that with the exception of the two children all passengers and members of the crew had been rescued by the American steamer Julia Luckenbach, which was standing close by.

SAYS "BOOTLEG LIQUOR" IS WORST EVER THIS YEAR

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 30.—Mare Buckland, chief of the federal dry enforcement staff in the Syracuse district, which includes more than 20, upstate counties and who tomorrow will be succeeded as chief by Robert D. Angell, of Cape Vincent, stated today that in his four years as a member of the enforcement organization he had never seen bootleg liquor "so universally bad as it is on the eve of this New Year's celebration."

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
Willimantic Office, 771 Main Street
Telephone 1131
Office Hours: 9:30 to 12 m.; 1:30 to 5 p. m.

Correct Business Methods, read from an excellently composed paper by James B. Fullerton, interested the members of Willimantic Rotary club who met in their new quarters Tuesday noon in the Y. M. C. A. building. A most appetizing luncheon was served. Future meetings of the club will be held in the Y building. The program was in charge of Louis A. Kingsbury, chairman of the business methods committee, and Mr. Fullerton was presented by him. The meeting was in charge of President Harry W. Standish, who with Ellison S. Smith, another bass singer, gave one of the finest interpretations of Old Black Joe heard in a blue moon. Song Leader John Ahern, tenor, joined in the second stanza. The impression made by this volunteer was such that, upon general request, he contributed a tenor solo which received merited applause. Another song number which went over big was one by A. Linn Weatherhead, Raymond A. Parker, Ellison S. Smith, Dr. William B. Hendry, Dr. R. Bullock Jones, John R. Pickett, James P Bath and William C. Norris, the last named present as guest of the club. The roll call by Secretary C. W. Hill showed three absentees. One of them, Sergeant-at-Arms Aime J. Martineau, will square his absence by attending a Rotary meeting in Montreal, Canada, where he is visiting. A communication expressing the thanks of Miss Myra M. Matthews for a Christmas gift from Rotary was read. Richard E. Dodge reported that about $125 will be added to the boys' work fund from the net profits from the presentation of The Pirates of Penzance recently. Rev. Mr. Norris extended good wishes for a happy and prosperous year to the members. Regarding a new song book for the club, Dr. Jones, chairman of the committee, reported that considerable progress had been made and new numbers would be ready for trial within a few weeks. On recommendation of Albert B. Smith, a vote was taken to have President Standish name a committee to investigate the proposed plans for an Italian band here. In the fact that over twenty members of the embryo band are boys the club holds a special interest in the movement, and arrangements will be made to assist the proponents in furthering the project. At the instigation of Chairman Bath of the entertainment committee, Dr. Jones was elected to give his life history at the next regular meeting of the club.

It is evident from the way some automobile owners have been fretting the past 24 hours that many cars will not leave the garage New Year's day for the lack of 1925 markers. This is a handicap to those depending on the mails and parcel post to get the coveted number plates to them. As in past years, many are taking advantage of messenger service.

The 1924 fishing licenses also expire at midnight this (Wednesday) night. There are 610 such licenses now out, according to the record of Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton. The 1925 fishing licenses arrived a few days ago and over 30 tilt-chasers have already equipped themselves with one. Game wardens and deputies are making an intensive drive against violators at this time of year.

The death of Julia E., 69, wife of Harlowe F. Scott, occurred at her home in Warrenville at 7 o'clock Monday night. She was born in Ashford Jan. 9, 1855, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Farnham. She leaves her husband and two half-brothers, William of Eastford and Ernest of Webster, Mass., and a half-sister in Webster.

Over one thousand children crowded in for a public showing of Abraham Lincoln at a theatre here Tuesday forenoon through the courtesy of Manager John R. Pickett. An orchestra of three pieces enlivened the show for the kiddies. Before the drawing of the curtain, Willimantic's popular Civil War veteran, James Haggerty, told the little audience some interesting facts about great battles between the north and the south and in simple words created an excellent mental picture of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Pickett was assisted in seating the children by Chief of Police Allen McArthur, Chief of the Fire Department James J. Tighe, Captain Jean B. Paulhus, General Secretary Albert E. Smith of the Y. M. C. A. and President Harry W. Standish of the Rotary club.

The banner sport event of the season is to be here New Year's night, when Bobby Higgins, former captain and star of the Emeralds, will invade the field with a matched quintet from the Kerr mills, Fall River, Mass. The management here will select five of the best timber that can be found and it is expected that Leo Normandin, captain of Emerald team member, will be elected as captain.

The W. B. A. of the Maccabees held the annual Christmas tree party Monday evening in the Woman's club rooms. Many children were present and were given pretty things by Santa Claus. Refreshments were served. The program carried out by the children follows: Song, Pearl Ashton; recitation, Doris Moran; song, Clifford Howlette; stunt, Leonard Smith; recitation, Lois Robinson; recitation, Arlene Peters; song, Joseph Zagara; recitation, Pearl Collins; song, Tommy Ashton; song, Magdelyn McGillicuddy; song, Alice Costello; recitations, Jennie Lambardo; song, Peggy Lombardo; recitation, Lorraine Farrell; song, Doris Nadeau; recitation, Patricia Ashton; song, John Kelley; recitation, James Moran; song, Raymond Kelley; recitation, Elizabeth Moran; poem, Lillian Zagara.

Katherine L. Morrison, 83, died at the Norwich state hospital Monday after a long term of treatment at the institution. She was born in Willington, the daughter of Charles F. and Louisa Preston Morrison.

Miss Anna Jurovaty of Andover and Charles Bauer of New York were united in marriage at 2.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon at St. Joseph's church here by the pastor, Rev. Henry Quinn. The attendants were Miss Helen Jurovaty, sister of the bride, and Mr. Collew of Hebron. Little Miss Lillian Jurovaty was flower girl and Paul Jurovaty was veil bearer. The organ music was by Rudolph Witter of New York. A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Jurovaty in Andover with fifty relatives and friends present. Mr. and Mrs. Bauer will reside in New York.

Officers of Natchaug lodge, No. 22, K. of P., elected this week for the year are: Chancellor commander, Orlando P. Smith; vice chancellor, Harold James; prelate, Samuel S. Anthony; master of work, Charles A. Bates; keeper of records and seals, Jerry J. Lennihan; master of finance, F. Raymond Smith; master of exchequer, Walter R. King; master at arms, Ralph E. Gates; inner guard, Maurice M. King; outer guard, Edwin F. Cross. Edmund A. Peckham was elected trustee for three years. Deputy Grand Chancellor Allen T. Pratt will install the new officers on Monday, Jan. 5.

Next Saturday has been set by Judge Otto B. Robinson of the Windham probate court for two hearings on probate matters. One is to act on the application of the administratrix of the estate of the late George Grimes authorizing her to sell a certain part of the real estate, and the second is to act on the administration account of the executor of the estate of the late Helen E. Brown.

Ice dealers here are planning to be gin harvesting the crop early next week. The ice caries from eave to eave. The ice varies from seven to ten inches in thickness.

THOMAS LUBY DISLOCATES SHOULDER IN A FALL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, Dec. 30.—Thomas Luby of this city was found lying in a semi-conscious state, suffering from a dislocated left shoulder and abrasions on the face, on the platform at the local railroad station about 6.30 o'clock Tuesday evening. Luby, who is an elderly man, apparently stumbled over the concrete curb of the platform and pitched headlong. He was found by the yard crew. Yardmaster McSweeney summoned the ambulance to have the man taken to St. Joseph's hospital, where his injuries were treated by Dr. M. D. Riordan.

PAN OF HOT ASHES STARTS BLAZE AT BACON STORE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, Dec. 30.—Tuesday night fire was discovered in the back room of the Bacon Bros. grocery store in the Hanover block, corner of Temple and Union streets, shortly after 8 o'clock. The fire started from a pan of hot ashes left under a stove and a hole about two feet in diameter had been burned through the floor when the firemen, in charge of Assistant Chief Henry J. Kelley, arrived in response to a bell alarm rung in from Box 43. Nine gallons of chemicals were used. The building is an old wooden structure, owned by Napoleon Bacon, and had the blaze made any headway serious results would have been certain.

An automobile owned by George Hadded of this city took fire from defective wiring at 7.40 o'clock Tuesday evening while being driven along Valley strete. A telephone call brought out members of the fire department, but the blaze had been extinguished. The damage was slight.

What promises to be a fast hockey match is scheduled for Sunday, when Eudor LeClaire's Royal Canadian All-Stars and Bill Bakanowsky's Aspinook Terrors hook up for a battle. The Royal Canadian team boasts of such starts as "Flash" Bill McClumgage, reputed to be the fastest thing on runners in the state; Walter Hebert, the Nova Scotia greyhound; Eudor LeClaire, a Valentine on skates; John LeClaire, the skating dancing master; Lou Bakanowsky (this boy comes from up country where they grow up with a pair of skates on); Ernie Raney, who appeared with "Charlotte" for three seasons at the Hippodrome, and Francois Dwyer, the French tenor, who has won all the skating championships worth holding. The team is coached by "Gordie" Willis, a past master at hockey.

The Terrers' team is composed of such players as Henry Ouillette, noted hockey player, from New Bedford and Fall River; the Guillette boys, Gene and Roland; Hugh Sharkey, a bear on skates, and Bill Bakanowsky himself. This team is coached by "Goose" Ben Schlefer, the latest thing on skates.

BOLTON

A group from the Immanuel church, Hartford, came to the Bolton hall last week Monday evening and presented the beautiful Christmas play, Why the Chimes Rang, in a most delightful manner. They gave the play gratis. Both the play and their kindness was appreciated by the Bolton people. Other numbers on the program were vocal solos by Mrs. Myers, readings by Miss Mary Langdon of Hartford and piano solos by Miss Elizabeth B. Rose of Bolton, all of which were enjoyed. Following the program, ice cream and candy were given the audience.

—The annual meeting of the Bolton Cemetery association was held Saturday afternoon. The officers' reports were read and accepted, showing a good balance in the treasury. The following officers were re-elected: President, Prof. Samuel M. Alvord; vice president, Henry J. Thompson; secretary and treasurer, Miss Maude E. White; sexton, Myron M. Lee.

YEAST AND FLOUR LADEN STEAMER SANK IN HUDSON

Yonkers, N. Y., Dec. 30.—The river steamer Fannie Woodall lay at the bottom of the Hudson today, with cargo of yeast and flour, valued at $5,000, in her hold.

The steamer with twelve men aboard put out from Yonkers late yesterday afternoon for New York, but when she was in mid-stream a leak was discovered and her captain headed her for the Jersey short at a point near Huyler's Landing. The freighter City of Yonkers took off her crew and part of her cargo. A few minutes later she sunk in deep water.

NEW LONDON LODGE OF ELKS ROBBED OF $350 CASH AND CHECKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Dec. 30.—The cafeteria of New London lodge of Elks, Washington street, was visited by thieves, late Sunday night or early Monday morning for it became known today that the safe had been opened and that $350 in cash and several checks were stolen. The theft has not been reported to the police, but the house committee of the lodge has taken steps in an effort to detect the thieves.

In the club house there have been numerous thefts the past year, but none of a serious nature.

The club house was closed Sunday night about 11 o'clock by Steward Joseph F. McGarry, who deposited the day's receipts in the safe where other monies and valuable papers were stored. McGarry insists that when he left the safe he locked it, as he did the entrance to the cafeteria. Three or four members of the lodge were still in the building when the steward left. Monday morning when the club was opened in was revealed that entrance to the cafeteria had been gained by some one using a duplicate key as there was no evidence whatever of the door having been forced and that the door was either left unlocked or opened by some one who had knowledge of the combination, of which there are four or five.

George C. Whittlesey has returned to his employment at Quincy, Mass, having spent several days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Whittlesey, Nathan Hale street.

Miss Margaret Gordon, student nurse at Home Memorial hospital, is recovering from a recent operation for appendicitis.

Misses Edith T. and Ruth N. Newcomb, Vauxhall street, are spending a few days in Washington, D. C.

Henry Albin, of Lee avenue, and Miss Martha McGowan, Brandegee avenue, Groton, patients at Lawrence hospital were dismissed today.

Sailors stationed at the United States Coast Guard Academy apparently decided to begin the celebration of the New Year early for late this afternoon and tonight there were any number of the bluejackets about the strat in an intoxicated condition. Where the sailors obtained their supply of liquor was not known, but it was stated by local officers that the liquor was a part of some cases of whiskey from boats carrying rum through the sound and had been stolen by coast guard sailors, after the seized cargo and craft reached port.

Miss Jane Cavanaugh, employed at the executive office at the submarine base, has resumed her duties after a leave of absence over the holidays.

An unfortunate, a lodger at the B. P. Learned mission, North Bank street, in passing through Main street, near Douglass street, late this afternoon nwas stricken with a fit and fell to the sidewalk. He was given first aid by pedestrians and storekeepers and finally responded to treatment, after going to the mission where he received further attention.

Jack Kozlin, 22 Spring street, late this afternoon found a gasoline tank cover on Crystal avenue, the implement undoubtedly having fallen from a tank auto. The cover was taken to the police station.

The 3200 cases of Scotch and rye whiskey, and 150 barrels of rye whiskey, the cargo of the English schooner J. Duffy, that was seized off Cornfield Point last Tuesday and brought into port by the United States destroyer Downes, was forwarded to New Haven aboard the seized craft today and placed in storage in the federal building there. The cargo of the schooner Elizabeth Wilson, which accompanied the foreign schooner to New Haven and with a cargo of several hundred cases of liquor, will probably be placed in storage in Bridgeport as the New Haven federal building, like the custom house here, is filled to overflowing with the contraband liquor.

Lester Seidenfus, of Crystal avenue; Mrs. William Williams and infant daughter, Phillips street; Miss Stella Apdofonik, Harrison street, and Theodore Clifford, Waterford, were patients discharged at Home Memorial hospital today.

Several sailors, more or less under the influence of liquor, entered the Hull building, Main street, early this evening and proceeded to the living apartments on the third floor, where they created such a disturbance that occupants of the apartments were aroused and went to the hallways to discover the cause of the disturbance. When the sailors were interrupted in their hilarity the bluejackets abused and insulted the residents there, with the result that the police were summoned, but before officers reached the building the sailors had made their escape.

Joseph McDonald, 16 Center street, complained to the police early this evening that clothesline thieves had operated upon the premises at his home, some time between 5 and 7 o'clock. The complainant declared that clothing of value had been suspended from a line in the rear of the house during the day, but instead of being removed to the house before nightfall the garments had been left there until later. When a member of the family went to the yard it was discovered that all of the better quality of clothing had been stolen.

Mrs. Chapman of Groton, a member of the Connecticut Humane society, complained to the police this evening that a cat had been left housed in the vacant store of the building at 46 Golden street, owned by Mrs. Annie Goss, 677 Ocean avenue. Mrs. Goss was notified of the complaint and later caused the cat to be liberated.

The will of William H. Rowe, long cashier of the New London City National bank, whose death occurred a few weeks ago, was admitted to probate at a hearing for that purpose before Judge of Probate Arthur B. Calkins this afternoon. The will was drawn Sept. 4, 1923, and was witnessed by William Belcher, Nathan Belcher and Ella V. Houlihan. The instrument names the testator's sister-in-law, Miss Stella R. Smith, as the principal beneficiary, also names Miss Smith and Milton M. Baker, of Groton, an intimate friend of the testator, as executors of the will, without bonds. The inventory of the estate has not been taken.

To the sister-in-law, Stella R. Smith, is bequeathed the former residence and land of testator at 90 Broad street, to be hers absolutely.

To said Stella, R. Smith is bequeathed the sum of $2,500.

To the First Congregational church, New London, is bequeathed the money the said testator collected on the life insurance policy dated Oct. 17, 1870, insuring the life of testator for $3500, said money to be paid in perpetual trust fund by said church and the income thereof used for the maintenance of its public worship.

To the Second Congregational church, New London, is bequeathed the proceeds of the policy of insurance on the life of testator, dated Sept. 20, 1865, said proceeds, whether collected during the life of the said testator, or after said testator's decease, to be held by said Second Congregational church as a perpetual trust fund and the income thereof used for the maintenance of its public worship.

To each of the testator's nieces, Carolyn Gay Williamson and Cornelia Belquist, is bequeathed $500.

To Louisa Twyford, daughter of the testator's niece Genevieve Twyford, is bequeathed $500.

To Mrs. Lizzie B. Whittemore, New London, is bequeathed the sum of $500.

The testator bequeaths the sum of $300 to the New London Cemetery association, said sum to be invested and the income thereof applied by said association to the care of the Rowe burial lot in Cedar Grove cemetery.

All the rest, residue and remainder of the property and estate, is bequeathed to testator's sister-in-law, Stella R. Smith, to be hers absolutely and entirely at her disposal. It is the request of the said testator, however that she shall make such disposition of the furniture and pictures in testator's house as she may think would be in accordance with the wishes of testator, and that she shall, by her last will and testament, give any balance of the said testator's residue, not needed for her own support, for such charitable and benevolent purposes as she may prefer to help.

Philip Shafner has sold a house and lot on Willetts avenue to Lena Zwiebel.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schwartz and little daughter, Geraldine, of Montauk avenue, left this evening for Miami, Fla., where they will remain several weeks.

Patrolman Henry Hick in making his rounds early this morning on Riverview avenue discovered the entrance to the Waller school unlocked. The officer caused the place to be made secure for the balance of the night.

The barbershop, 687 Bank street, owned by Joseph Caruso, was entered by thieves last night, for this morning it was discovered that the place had been robbed, the plunder taken consisting of 35 razors and cases, of the aggregate value of $90. The burglary was discovered when Caruso opened the place for business and was reported to the police. Sergeant John Cavanaugh made an investigation which revealed that entrance was gained by smashing a screen and a window in a rear door.

Wednesday night the Elks and their friends—or some of them—will watch the old year pass away at the clubhouse on Washington street. There will be vaudeville by entertainers from the Capitol theatre during the evening till 10 o'clock when the show people have engagements at the theatre. A feast will be served at midnight and then there will be dancing for a couple of hours. The Elks always provide lavishly for their guests and they will not fail to maintain their reputation in that respect on Wednesday night.

December has been one of the slowest months the police department has had in a long time. The number of arrests has been comparatively small and the number of cases before the police court less than almost any month in 1924. So the police department finishes the year with its reputation for efficiency well sustained.

Abbott C. Josselyn, 46, a machinist residing at 17 Home street, was fined $50 in the police court this morning for recklessly operating his automobile on Bank street last Sunday night. He ran into a truck operated by James Walsh of High street, Mystic. Officer Sheehan was right on the spot when the collision occurred and arrested Josselyn. It was reported at the time of the collision that Josselyn was under the influence of liquor, but he was not charged with that offense when presented in court.

There has been a line of men and women all day at the office of the state automobile department on Bank street, awaiting the issuance of licenses to operate automobiles during the coming year. Notwithstanding the fact that ample notice has been given to the applicants, hundreds of them delayed seeking them till the last day. The motor vehicle department has announced that prosecution will follow if anyone operates a car after Wednesday night.

PUBLIC TESTIMONIAL TO LIEUT. LESLIE P. ARNOLD

New London, Dec. 30.—Lieut. Leslie P. Arnold, one of the heroes of the round the world flight, was the guest of honor tonight at a public reception given by the citizens of New London to their former townsman. Lieutenant Arnold spent several years in this city and attended Bulkeley school.

The reception was held in the Lyceum theatre, which seats 1,100. Every seat was filled when Mayor Walter E. Clarke opened the program with introductory remarks, and hundreds were forced to remain outside.

Following an address by Walter A. Towne, assistant principal of Bulkeley school, Lieutenant Arnold gave an account of the American airmen's trip around the world, talking for more than an hour.

Both the army and the navy were represented at the reception, the officers attending in dress uniform. Among those present were Colonel F. M. Ferguson and his staff from Fort H. G. Wright; Rear Admiral C. A. Carr, U. S. N., retired; Major General Morris E. Payne and his staff; Lieutenant Colonel C. Hadlai Hull; State Treasurer-elect Ernest E. Rogers; Captain H. D. Hinckley, commander of the U. S. coast guard academy, and staff; Colonel W. Ellery Allyn of the governor's staff; Colonel W. A. Mercer, U. S. A., retired; President Benjamin T. Marshall of Connecticut college; Captain E. J. King, commander of the submarine base, and staff; Captain W. A. Munter, commander of the destroyer force here, and staff.

Seventy-five societies of the city were represented, as were the various committees of the city government. Practically every clergyman in the city was present.

Lieutenant Arnold was presented a platinum chain and a medal bearing the seal of the city of New London.

The present territory of Sweden is about the size of California, and half again as large as England and Ireland combined, but in times past it included Finland and most of the East Baltic littoral, besides the colony of New Sweden in North America.

WOMAN WHO KILLED FOUR FOUND INSANE

Logansport, Ind., Dec. 30.—With the finding of a sanity commission that Mrs. Emma Hobough, 33, a widow, who today confessed to Sheriff Walter Rowyer that she shot and killed her father, mother, brother and her baby daughter, is insane, Merl Wood, prosecuting attorney of Cass county announced tonight that the state would close no charge against the woman, but would order her held for committment to the Northern Indiana hospital for the insane.

Taken before the sanity commission late today, Mrs. Hobough declined to answer questions regarding the slaying of her family and her only statement relating to the crime was made to Sheriff Bowyer, who had asked her directly if she fired the fatal shots.

"I never handled a shot gun before and I did not know how to open or close the breech, but I did it. I wonder is the neighbors heard the shots," said simply. Then her talk drifted incoherently.

Mrs. Hobough since the death of her husband, had made her home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rassler and her brother, John, together with her daughter, Viola, all four of whom were found dead with their heads practically blown away by shot gun charges. She was taken into custody yesterday at the home of Thomas Steele, a friend, more than four miles from the scene of the tragedy.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The Killingly High School Alumni association drive for the gymnasium fund is going along most encouragingly. It is announced that the more than 300 students at the school have pledged, as a body, to raise $1,000 before the end of the school year next June. This will involve the earning of about $5 by each student and this will not be difficult, in view of the fact that about six months will intervene between now and graduation time. The recent Tag week, a basketball game and a dance have all been productive of liberal returns, and while the final figures are not available on this group of activities, it is believed that at least $500 to $600 will be realized. The Alumni association is encouraged by the returns to date and hopes during 1925 to so swell the fund that the town as a whole will become impressed with a need that is real.

Saturday night of this week the Alumni basketball team, victorious over the Service battery last week, is to play Killingly High school team.

Ex-service men who have not filed their claims for a bonus by tonight (Wednesday) will have delayed beyond the time limit set for getting all such claims in the hands of the proper authorities. While there is no way of checking up accurately, it is believed that the great majority of those hereabouts who are entitled to a bonus, or adjusted compensation, have filed their returns and can not sit back and await results.

In the town court Tuesday afternoon, Edward DeForge pleaded guilty to an intoxication charge and was sentenced to 30 days in jail. DeForge was not averse, expressing to an officer the wish that he might go over for three months. DeForge has been ill and out of work for a year.

The John Owens house on Broad street will be taken over by Herbert H. Pepler soon after the first of the year; he having entered into agreement with Mr. Owens for purchase of the property. The house is one of the newer ones in the section of Broad street where it is located, having been built only a few years. Mr. Pepler is in charge of the plant of the Paco Manufacturing company here.

There will be little of the happiness of New Year for a sizeable delegation of people who are to be presented before the town court today (Wednesday) on complaints that they owe overdue personal taxes. Two such cases were heard on Monday of this week, the first since before Christmas. The court is devoting as much time as possible to these cases, but there are so many of them that it appears probable they will continue to come in all winter.

Attorney E. L. Darbie, a representative-elect from Killingly, and Sherwood B. Potter, who will represent the town of Brooklyn in the legislature to assemble next week, were in Hartford Tuesday and visited at the state capitol.

Rev. E. J. Shelley, M. S., formerly a curate at St. James' church, is now stationed at Altamont, N. Y., where students of the missionary order of which he is a member are completing their studies before ordination.

Tonight's the night for a great many people! They will follow the ancient custom of watching the old year out and the new one in, though they likely will be more conservative as to some of the attendant circumstances of the watch night than in years gone by.

The latest cold wave caught another batch of motor car owners napping and frozen radiators, cracked blocks and other troubles have come to plague them for their negligence and make another dent in their pocketbooks at a time when dents there are all too plentiful.

Fishing in Alexander's lake is restricted to Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays during the open season, and that it is illegal to fish there on other days of the week. Another restriction is that not more than ten pickerel shall be taken from it by one person in any day. Heavy penalties are provided for violation of these regulations—a fine that may be as much as $50, or 30 days in jail, or both. Fishing in Quinebaug lake, to the south of Danielson, is entirely prohibited, as it is a reservoir supplying the village of Wauregan with water.

Many radio set owners here were disappointed over their inability to pick up the broadcasting from New York of an address by Mrs. Katherine Mullaley, daughter of Judge Arthur G. Bill, the address being on Noted Women of the Bible. The station from which the broadcasting was done is one of the most difficult in the east to hear clearly in this section of the country.

Press reports forecasting a boom in the cotton textile industry in New England came as very welcome news to thousands of textile workers in this region. It is highly encouraging to them on the eve of a new year and at the close of year that has been the hardest in the cotton manufacturing in more than a decade.

Danielson again is exceedingly fortunate in rounding out a year with fire losses at a minimum. In this respect Danielson has as fine a record as any town of its size in New England.

Enrollment errors are held accountable for a number of court appearances here for non-payment of overdue personal taxes. Some of those against whom complaints have been issued have been found to be over the taxing age and others exempt because of military service. Still others have not been residents of this state for several years.

On New Year's day—the feast of the Circumcision—there are to be four masses at St. James' church. The Church makes the feast a holy day of obligation, imposing the duty of attendance at church upon all members.

The youngsters who received scooters as gifts at Christmas time appear to have something on their little friends who asked Santa Claus for sleds and had their wishes gratified.

Indications are this morning that savings accounts in naDielson's three banks will have increased approximately $785,000 during 1924. This impressive gain becomes even more so in view of the fact that the past 12 months have not, on the whole, been near as good industrially hereabouts as any of the years of the past decade. Yet prudent people have put away more than three-quarters of a million dollars in local banks alone.

Residents here who can turn a faucet at any time and get a ready and ample supply of water can hardly realize that there is a water shortage in some surrounding sections. The shortage is not acute, but usual supplies are shorter than December ordinarily finds them and care against waste is being exercised. The rains of the late fall did not make up for the long drought experienced the past summer and in the early fall, especially in October.

At sunset Tuesday December was continuing to give promise of producing less snow than is charged against that period in the average year. The fall hereabouts has been less than two inches.

It is believed the final roll will show more than 2,000 members in Christmas clubs in Danielson's banks for 1925.

PUTNAM

Today (Wednesday) is the last day of 1924 and there is still no indication of when the depositors of the First National bank will receive their first dividend, or what percentage of the amount of their claims it will be. George M. Coffin, receiver, has returned from a trip to Washington but he says that he is without authority to speak on either question, that it is wholly a question for the comptroller of the currency. He said further that because of the Christmas holidays the clerks in the comptroller's office, like those of the other federal departments in Washington, are away on leave, and this would necessarily delay the matter, as all of the checks to the various depositors have to be countersigned in the comptroller's department.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Green, 75, who died suddenly at Atlantic City last week was a descendent of one of the oldest and best known families of Woodstock. Her parents were Asa Thurston Child and Roxanna Lyon Child. Both trace their ancestry back to the founders of the historic old town. Her brother, Henry T. Child, is one of the influential citizens of Woodstock and lives in the old family homestead.

Mrs Green received an exceptionally thorough education in her girlhood and not from necessity but from choice became a teacher and taught at Merino Village and at Dudley, Mass. Many people in this section remember that they "went to school" to Mary Lizzie Child.

She was born in Woodstock, March 26, 1849. November 29, 1875, she married John Newton Green, of Thompson. Two children were born to them, Henry Jewett Green of Worcester, and Mrs. Bass of Greenwich. They moved from Thompson to Boston and then to Brookline, where Mr. Green died a few weeks ago.

Mrs. Green and her daughter went to Atlantic City a short time before her death, and she expected to spend the winter there. She was ill but a day or two. The body was taken to Greenwich where funeral services were held and then was brought to Woodstock for burial in the family lot in Woodstock cemetery. Besides her children and her brother, one sister survives her, Mrs. Florence Paine of Danielson. A younger brother, Dr. Edward Child of Brooklyn, N. Y., died several years ago.

A Woodstock correspondent notes that the widow of Captain James Lennon, of Norwich, formerly Miss Helen Sumner of that town, is to receive but $30,000 of his estate, which is estimated to be worth from $600,000 to $700,000. This $30,000 is a direct bequest to his widow instead of her dower rights. She is also given the home, valued at $15,000 and the furniture. Captain Lennon left $20,000 to Joseph Willcox of Stonington, Conn., and $3,000 each to Walter F. Grinnell and Mercier Grinnell of Tiverton, R. I. The remainder of his estate is given to the following public institutions: Norwich Free Academy, Backus hspital, the Shelttering Arms, Central Baptist church, Norwich, Union Baptist church, Mystic, Eliza Huntington Memorial, the Johnson Home, and the Otis library, Norwich.

Mrs. Janet M. Sheppard and Mrs. Royce D. McAlister of Senexet road have sent out cards for a reception to be held Saturday, January 3rd, from 3 until 6 o'clock. ONLY ONE OF FOURTEEN LIQUOR CASES IS TRIED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, Dec. 30.—Nearly an entire day was consumed in city court Tuesday in the hearing of Charles Berzuch, one of the fourteen defendants arrested Saturday in the raids on alleged violators of the liquor law.

Immediately after court convened John Rucki pleaded guilty to three separate charges of selling. He was fined $100 on each count and costs of $26.64, and was given a suspended sentence of thirty days on each count. He paid $226.64 and was given two days in which to collect the other $100.

Eric H. Johnson, city attorney, appeared for the state and Attorneys Irving H. Miron and Arthur S. Macdonald represented Rucki, as well as Berzuch. The latter was charged with selling liquor November 13 and 14 to Leon Vinoski and John Andrews. He pleaded not guilty.

The state put Vinoski and Andrews on the stand. They testified that they lived in Hartford and that they were members of Bridgeman's Detective Agency. They came to Putnam, they said, November 13 and on that and the following day they went to Berzuch's place, on Main street and bought liquor. Part of it was drunk on the premises, the remainder was taken back to Hartford to be used as evidence. Two bottles, both sealed were produced by the state, which witnesses said, contained liquor, or what was claimed to be liquor, which they had bought from the defendant. None of the court officials sampled any of Exhibit A or Exhibit B.

At the time the liquor was bought, the witnesses said that Mrs. Berzuch, wife of the defendant, and Stanley Zymant were present. When called by the defense both of these persons admitted that they saw Vinoski and Andrews on both days, but they denied that Berzuch had sold them any liquor. They came in more than once and asked to buy some but Berzuch had told them he had none. Then the three men and others present chipped in, a quarter or a half dollar, and Berzuch, or some one else, would go out and buy a bottle, bring it back and they all would drink it.

In cross examining Vincoski and Andrews, Mr. Miron asked them if both had not been intoxicated on these days. This they denied, saying that they had never been drunk in Putnam. Mr. Miron wanted to know of Andrews if he had not been so completely under the influence of liquor that he had taken the "No Parking" sign from in front of the Bradley theatre and carried it a block away. This the witness denied.

Fred L'Heurrex, for the defense, testified that both men were drunk on these days and that he had seen Andrews carry away the sign from in front of the theatre. He told Attorney Johnson, that he was not drunk, himself, that he never got drunk.

Several other witnesses called by the defense said that they had seen the state's witnesses on the above dates and that both were drunk on both days. John Zacharides, proprietor of the Colonial restaurant, saw them in his place and both were very drunk, John Duda testified to the same effect. Sabrina Pollock saw them in the Mechanicsville inn and they were drunk, she said. Andrews, she added, got into a fight while there. John Perry saw both men and in his opinion both were drunk.

Mr. Miron asked pointed and searching questions in examining them, and neither stood the ordeal very well. When it came to summing up Mr. Miron told the court that the two men, Vinoski and Andrews, were discredited by their own statements, that they were spotters and admitted violations of the law. In addition he said that the defense had proved that they were drunkards and liars.

There was such a large crowd in attendance that the hearing was held in the auditorium of the Municipal building. Several times during the course of Mr. Miron's arguments the audience interrupted him by cheering. After admonishing them, Judge Geissler threatened to clear the court room. Mr. Miron scathingly depounced not only the witnesses but the prosecution, in using such methods to enforce the law. Mr. Macdonald in his argument said that he did not see how the testimony of the state's witnesses could be accepted by the court. So many of their statements had been proven untrue, he said, by creditable, disinterested witnesses, that none of their testimony was worth belief.

Mr. Johnson defended the witnesses and the practice, as by no other means could the violators of the liquor laws be ferreted out and punished. The court reserved decision. There still remains 13 more offenders, and they will be called Wednesday morning.

WESTERLY

Donald B. Fancher has been promoted to chief projectionist and will have the superintendency of motion picture projection at the New theatre, Westerly, the Lyric and Central theatres in Pawcatuck and the Strand theatre, Hope Valley, managed by David Novogrod.

More than 200 young men and women attended the appreciation ball given Monday night in the Rhode Island Hotel ball rooms by Narragansett Council, No. 21, Knights of Columbus to the members of the cast in "Bimbo," a musical comedy recently presented by the council It proved one of the most interesting and pleasing social events of this winter. A program of more than an hour's duration was presented by two versatile young women from Boston, and dancing followed. Refreshments were served.

The committee in charge of the ball consisted of Russell Linehan, Richard J. Butler, Jr., and James McCormick. A special orchestra for the dancing comprised Mr. and Mrs. Geo. O. Murphy, Raymond Mullaney, Robert Kessell and Simon Kinney.

The year 1925 in Westerly will be ushered in with numerous dinners, dances, watch parties, theatre parties and church services. While the majority of local people will remain in town to witness the advent of 1925, the usual proportion may be expected to take part in festivities in New London, in Providence, at the state armory in Norwich and various other out-of-town places.

One of the most important local events is to be the New Year's ball given under the auspices of Battery E, 243d Coast Artillery corps.

Another local dance of importance is to be the hobo costume ball at the Lorraine community house, music for which will be produced by the "king of the hoboes" and his gang from Rhode Island State college.

Other dances at Stonington, Mystic and Noank will attract a few from this community. Several local clubs and lodges are planning informal watch parties. A number of reservations for dinner parties at the Colonial club have been made.

The union watch service is to be at the Calvary Baptist church beginning at 9.30 o'clock. The program will include a sermon by Rev. Byron U. Hatfield, pastor of the First Baptist church. This meeting will inaugurate the week of prayer held under the auspices of the Westerly Pastors' association. Other services will be held on Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings of next week.

THE LENNEN GIFTS.

At this season of the year there have been many large outpouring of wealth for the benefit of others. Gifts to charities, educational institutions and philanthropic enterprises have come in for widespread commendation. Consideration has been given to the public benefit that will develop from the utilization of these funds in the designated manner.

Along with these magnificent provisions in the interest of public welfare Norwich cannot overlook the magnanimous spirit that was displayed by our late fellow townsman, Captain James Lennen, in the distribution of his sizable fortune, accumulated through hard work, wise handling and thrift.

Ardent endorsement was given by him to the educational work that is being done at the Norwich Free Academy, though he had never had the benefit of the advantages offered at that institution, and in the same way did he show his interest in and seek to advance the service that is being rendered by the W. W. Backus hospital to this community. Recognition of the opportunity for rendering continued and even greater service by both these public institutions was displayed by the provisions in his will.

Likewise in his bequests to those institutions for the aged, in his gifts to churches and to the library he displayed a desire to make provision for the maintenance and extension of such worthy service. By the manner in which he has made distribution of his wealth he has made provision for large numbers to reap the benefit of his diligence and public spirit during the future.

Captain Lennen was not only impressed by the good work being done, and the additional needs of the institutions he remembered, but apparently appreciated the good example set by others on similar occasions. He likewise has set a magnificent example and his public spirited action will stand as a conspicuous monument down through the decades to come. Norwich cannot withhold its admiration for his method of doing something for the community in which he lived and died.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT.

From the days when prohibition was being sought and before the dry amendment was adopted, there was pointed out the difficulties that could be expected in the way of enforcement. The obstacles encountered, the deliberate violations of the law, the winking at violations and the participation in the profits made possible through breaking the law by officials have all been shown up since prohibition went into effect. The disposition to respect the law immediately after it became effective quickly disappeared and enforcement becomes just as difficult as it was predicted it would.

In view of these facts and the repeated claim that the provisions for enforcement have been inadequate, there is nothing surprising in the provisions which have been made in the appropriation bills before congress for prohibition enforcement. As long as the present law exists there is no other course than to enforce it. When an insufficient sum is provided to deal with the extensive and studied vilolations there's nothing to do but increase the appropriations if enforcement is to make any showing whatever.

The sum voted by the house of $11,-000,000 is less than what was provided for the present fiscal year by a third of a million, but other enforcement activities bring the total prohibition enforcement fund up to a much larger amount, since the nearly $12,000,000 increase for the coast guard means provision for continuance and extension of the fight against the rum runners, while the department of justice will have another $8,000,000 to employ for work in connection with the enforcement.

Enforcement is thus proving to be no different than was predicted. Those who imagined that it would be an easy task, or that there would be a nationwide sentiment to respect such a law without enforcement, are being brought to a realization of the job confronted. It may be easy to point to spots where greater efficiency might be displayed if there was a 100 per cent response to duty, but till that time comes adequate provision must be made for enforcement if enforcement or the law is going to mean anything. It is hard to convince many that the law is now any more than a joke.

THE FRENCH DEBT.

However much there may have been created an impression that this country was disposed to push France for the early payment of its war debt to this country it certainly did not represent the attitude of this government or the sentiment of the country. There has been an unwillingness, and there still is, to listen to the idea of cancellation, but there is no desire on the part of Uncle Sam to force France to increased hardships.

For the good of France and all concerned it is only proper that it should know that the United States expects that it will pay, and it stands out to the credit of France when all those in authority in speaking for that country have emphasized the point that France fully intends to pay.

With the United States opposed to the idea of forcing France into payments before it is able to meet them, or exacting terms which would be unwarranted in the face of conditions, the informal discussions or the exchange of views which have taken place can be regarded as displaying the attitudes of the respective countries and an indication of what must be considered when the countries get down to actual negotiations.

The situation would materially change if it were the case that France was determined not to pay, or if it had the means and was trying to dodge payment. There exists no other belief on this side of the water than that such statements as have been made concerning France's intentions are thoroughly sincere. Fair treatment has characterized the arrangements made with other countries which were ready to begin payments and the same will be found to be true in regard to France.

When the president points out that it is desirable to get all the facts that there may be a full understanding of the situation, it indicates the purposes of this government at this time. It is in fact only what should be expected, and none will appreciate it more than France.

DIPLOMA MILL GRADUATES.

The feeling that was aroused throughout the state over the fact that diploma mill graduates were permitted to do business in Connecticut will again flare up the announcement that the Connecticut Eclectic Medical society has again approved those institutions which were recently shown to have issued the fake medical diplomas, or diplomas indicating that those possessing them had had proper training to warrant their admission to general medical practice.

In view of the disclosures made and the action taken to protect the people of the state against such practitioners, the course now of the eclectic society in restoring the banned colleges indicates a bit of defiance that indicates further action may be required.

Happily the action of the society does not mean that certificates will be granted to the graduates of the colleges in question, protection against the possibility of the eclectic society's endorsement bringing about such a result being furnished in the health commissioner being warned against it by the attorney general.

While developments are awaited as to what the outcome of the society's action will be, there will be statewide endorsement of the attorney general's action. Connecticut has no desire to encourage or harbor those who have gained their medical knowledge over night, and it is to be hoped that its people will never be in such desperate need of medical attention that graduates of diploma mills will be permitted to carry on a practice by sanction of its officials. The legislature can be expected to deal with the situation which was recently revealed, but till that gets busy the attorney general is on guard.

KING TUT'S TOMB AGAIN.

After a period of several months during which the world has heard little or nothing concerning King Tut and the things that were buried with him, an agreement has been reached with the Egyptian government for a resumption of the work and the completion of the undertaking. Inasmuch as consent was given to the search in the beginning and so much has been spent in the quest for the archaeological treasures, it seems only fitting that the task should be permitted to go along to completion.

In view of the new agreement it is to be hoped that there will be eliminated the friction which marked the progress of the original undertaking. Certain features of the new understanding indicate that such will be the case. The monopoly on the news developments promises to have been ended.

With the work to be continued under the direction of Howard Carter, the discoverer of the tomb, there promises to be due consideration given to the character of the task and to the world wide value of the knowledge that may be forthcoming. Egypt has undoubtedly looked well to the protection of the historical treasures in the future, even as it zealously guarded them under the previous agreement. The wisdom which is displayed by the Egyptian government in revising the decision, which caused it to force the closing of the tomb last year after a dispute had arisen, will be fully appreciated and the new work watched with interest by those who look for such rich finds from an historical standpoint in that long sealed burial place. Having learned what was previously disclosed there is a natural desire to have the entire revelation made.

SOONER OR LATER

Like all true artists, Mrs. Choake wasted no time contemplating the results when her efforts were successful, but turned with undiminished enthusiasm to the next possible couple. In this way she was spared the intrusion of any doubts as to the wisdom of her course. Anyhow, with the people once married the affair was no longer any of her worry.

But she was growing very irritated at little Cissie Quince living next door. Fully six times had Mrs. Choake casually invited Cissie into tea or dinner and sprung on her some eligible young man calculated to make her the best possible husband on earth, even if he were Mrs. Choake's nephew or cousin or the son of her best school friend. All of them had faded away before the sparkling adamantine front with which Cissie was decorated and never once had she varied from her innocent-eyed pose of being totally unconscious of anything on foot.

Considering the matter from all sides, Mrs. Choake felt that she had the answer when young Donald Schrubbe came to town. He was so good-looking that even old ladies sighed when they saw him and so prosperous that it was a crime. He had a good disposition and a charming manner.

"Tomorrow night at 7 oclock," she inveigled Cissie over the phone.

Cissie hung up the receiver with a jerk and sniffed hard. She's show 'em! Each time Mrs. Choake had raved to her over some young man Cissie had shivered with the positive knowledge that likewise she had raved about Cissie to the other victim.

But you couldn't get out of going to Mrs. Choake's parties.

She met Donald Schrubbe five minutes later Cissie could have killed Mrs. Choake joyously. The reason was that she instantly and completely liked Donald so very much. But meeting him this way was an impassable barrier. You couldn't let yourself fall in love with a young man who had been told you were a lovely girl and just the one for him and dying to meet him. For that was enough to cause any young man to take an ineradicable dislike. Oh, if Mrs. Choake had only kept out of it and they had met somewhere else and both sides had a fair show and no favors! So she snubbed Donald wickedly and went home and cried herself to sleep.

"Don't you think Cissie is just lovely?" purred Mrs. Choake to the other victim when she said good night.

"Oh—er—yes, certainly," Donald had stammered and edged away, his ears red.

Didn't he know all the things Mrs. Choake must have said about him to that dream of a girl? No wonder she had been so [illegible]cetly brutal. So he went home, smoked ten cigarettes and considered pulling up stakes, and going to Africa or somewheres.

Never before had Mrs. Choake had two such balky young people on her hands. Sternly she bumped their heads together, furiously they fought each other, her and anybody handy. And the sixth time they met and were left alone ten minutes Donald proposed violently and was accepted ecstatically—simply because neither one of them could possibly help it.

"Tell me," Cissie demanded tremulously in a last desire to save her face, "tell me, Donald, that first time, did Mrs. Choake say anything at all to you about me? Did you know I was coming to that dinner? She is such a dreadful old matchmaker!"

Men sometimes show a blaze of inspiration and understanding.

"Not one word!" said Donald Schrubbe firmly. "You—you just sort of burst upon me, dearest! I—er—she didn't tell you anything about me, did she?"

"Not a syllable!" breathed Cissie happily from his shoulder. It would do no harm and he'd feel better.

As for Mrs. Choake she already was busy with another couple. She was used to success.—Exchange.

Centenaries of 1925

Washington, D. C. Dec. 31—The dead roll of the Americans born a century ago—in the year 1825—who added lustre to the reputation of their country and won distinction for themselves by their achievements in various lines of high endeavor is an interesting list and their work is worth recalling.

Foremost in the list of writers whose centenaries will be celebrated during the next twelfth-month is that many-sided man whose scholarship was artistic and finished at every point—Bayard Taylor. Scarcely less distinguished and better known to a later generation was the poet Richard Henry Stoddard. Art's chief contribution to the list is George Inness, the famous landscape painter, while sculpture adds the name of Benjamin Paul Akers.

Other Americans born in 1825 whose lives and achievements were of influence upon the social, moral and intellectual progress of the age included:

John L. Le Conte, famous naturalist and author.

Francis A. March, one of the greatest of philologists.

Antoinette L. B. Blackwell, a pioneer advocate of woman's rights.

John H. Gear, governor of Iowa and United States senator.

Ambrose P. Hill, a celebrated military leader of the Confederacy.

George E. Pickett, also a noted Confederate commander.

Marshall Jewell, Connecticut governor and postmaster-general in Grant's cabinet.

L. Q. C. Lamar, U. S. senator from Mississippi and a member of Cleveland's cabinet.

Stephen M. Merrill, a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Edward G. Andrews, another bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Jabez L. M. Curry, noted Southern statesman and educational administrator.

Quincy Adams Gillmore, Union commander and engineer.

Thomas T. Eckert, president of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

William Holbrook Beard, celebrated animal painter.

George H. Pendleton, U. S. senator from Ohio and later minister to Germany.

Elisha P. Perry, governor of the state of Washington.

Ainsworth R. Spofford, for many years librarian of the Library of Congress.

John Drew, famous actor, father of the present-day actor of the same name.

William R. Morrison, Illinois congressman and interstate commerce commissioner.

D. Ogden Mills, California capitalist and philanthropist.

Amos Densmore, inventor of one of the first practical typewriters.

Davis H. Waite, governor of Colorado.

Henry H. Haight, governor of California.

Randolph Rogers, celebrated sculptor.

Washington C. Whitthorne, United States senator from Tennessee.

Francis Xavier Leray, Roman Catholic archbishop of New Orleans.

Edward Henry Hobson, a noted Union commander in the civil war.

George L. Fox, celebrated actor and originator of Humpty Dumpty.

John [illegible] Hennessy, Roman Catholic archbishop of Dubuque.

Stephen V. Ryan, Roman Catholic bishop of Buffalo.

Carter H. Harrison, for five terms mayor of Chicago.

Samuel B. Maxey, United States senator from Texas.

Edward H Magill, for many years president of Swarthmore college.

Joshua H. Marvil, governor of Delaware.

Thomas C. Manning, Louisiana jurist and U. S minister to Mexico.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Colonel Hiram Bingham, who will be governor of Connecticut for a single day before taking his seat in the United States senate, was formerly Townsend professor of Latin American history at Yale, which position he resigned shortly after his election as governor last November. He was graduated from Yale in 1898 and became a lecturer and assistant professor of South American geography and history at the university in 1907. He was born in Hawaii in 1875, the son of a clergyman and missionary, and holds degrees from Harvard and the University of California. In 1905 he was a preceptor in history at Princeton. In 1906 Mr. Bingham began a series of explorations into Peru and other South American countries and was director of Peruvian expeditions in 1911, 1912, 1914, and 1915. During the World war he commanded the largest Allied aviation instruction camp at Issoudin, France. He was elected lieutenant governor of Connecticut in 1922, serving one term.

Chaplin's Pay 60 Cents a Week

While barnstorming about England as a vaudeville performer in music halls, Charlie Chaplin yearned to be Charles Spencer Chaplin, respected artist, but the British public was stoney-hearted.

Son of theatrical artists of a sensitive refined type, the boy was taken when two months old from his birthplace at Fontainbleau, near Paris, to London, where he spent his early years. At four he first appeared on the stage when he presented himself in place of his mother who had been taken ill suddenly.

When his father died a few years later the shock physically incapacitated the mother and the boy and his brother, Sydney, had to go out into the world and make their way. At seven Charlie obtained a position as clog-dancer in London and provincial music halls at 60 cents a week "and cakes."

Frequently called upon to take parts in farces, he had to stop more than an occasional custard pie. Delicate, quiet and musically inclined, he loathed the life, but his vocation, his traveling and his brief education sentenced him to the association of fellow music hall performers.

At 13 he grasped the opportunity to go on the legitimate stage, and took the role of Sam in The Romance of Cocaine, an English melodrama. Next he played the part of Billy in William Gillette's production of Sherlock Holmes.

After several years of juvenile roles in various companies, with lapses back into vaudeville, he became a pantomime artist in Karno's A Night in An English Music Hall. He was 20 years old and receiving $20 a week in salary when the company came to America. Here he made a hit as a star and soon was receiving $75 a week.

Offered $150 to act before the Keystone Comedy Company's cameras, he hurriedly conceived the character of an old English cab driver, with embellishments, and at 25 first appeared in moving pictures. Success came quickly. Within three years he was receiving $1,075,000 for eight pictures a year.

As head of his own company, he continued his success, became a millionaire, improved the tone of his pictures and when he toured England at 33 as Charles Spencer Chaplin, England gave him a rousing welcome.

Tomorrow—Evans kept on despite his pain.

From states against which New York city has declared no embargo live chickens may now be brought over railroads having terminals in that city.

Stories That Recall Others

Why It Snowed.

The first snow of the season was falling and it was with great pleasure that Doris, three years old, noticed it. She ran to her mother with the exclamation: "Mamma, Santa Claus turned the snow on."

"Chow."

Where the winter wind was worst the other afternoon on the sidewalk next to a building was a poor, shivering little dog. Its dark eyes searched all passersby longingly. The throng didn't even notice it, however.

Three young fellows strode down the street. The handsomest one, and evidently the leader, spied the little dog, and motioned the others to wait a moment. He disappeared into a store only to appear a moment later with a steaming sandwich, which he gave the dog, much to the amusement of pedestrians.

The three fellows had hardly left before a large limousine drew up to the curb and a beautiful girl left a store to enter it, not, however, until she had first called the little dog which it developed was her pet Chow.

PROVIDED IN WILL FOR MUMIFICATION OF BODY

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 30.—So that future generations might look upon his body, preserved by mumification, Joseph Marcennot, 64-year-old bachelor and recluse, who died Friday, provided in his will, it was learned today, that $3,000 from his estate, estimated at $70,000, should be spent in preparing his body "according to the old time customs."

The will ordered that the body be placed in a vault to be on view indefinitely under glass.

EGG PRODUCTION AT STORRS SHOWS DECREASE

In the eighth week of the Storrs laying contest the total production for all pens was 3053 or a yield of a little over thirty-one per cent. This is a falling off of relatively 1139 eggs as compared with the average production for the corresponding week during the last two years. Of course it is a lot more eggs than the hens laid when no lights were used, nearly 800 more in fact, but still that isn't enough. Satisfactory production is of prime importance to the contestants and of interest to their many friends, all of whom wish to know why the third year production under lights is now averaging less than the two preceding years. Of course there's always the weather and the health of the hens and perhaps some will suspect that possibly European fowl plague has gained a foothold at Storrs. In the opinion of the management, however, these are not the answers. Paradoxical as it may seem the hens got away to almost too good a start in November. This resulted in unusually high consumption of mash and a correspondingly low grain consumption. Then cold weather came on and found these pullets without sufficient flesh on their bodies, in short they were not fat enough. Steps have been taken to correct this trouble which ought shortly to result in increased yields.

Thomas H. Matteson's pen of White Wyandotte's from Davisville, R. I., was the high scoring pen in the eighth week with a yield of 46 eggs. Ellen Day Ranken's pen of White Rocks from Huntington, L. I., and Meadowedge Farm's pen of Leghorns from Cedarhurst, L. I., tied for second place with 45 eggs each. A. B. Rice's pen of White Wyandotte's from Tekamah, Neb., managed third place with a production of 44 eggs. Rhode Island Reds owned by Maurice F. Delano at Vineyard Haven, Mass., and a pen of White Leghorns owned by Hobart E. Rice at Harre, Mass., tied for fourth place with 40 eggs each.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. William L. Potter.

Following a critical illness of a little over one week, due to a complication of diseases, Mrs. Lillian Estella Tufts, 44, wife of William L. Potter, died Monday evening about 9 o'clock, at her home, 30 Otrobando avenue. Although for some time Mrs. Potter had been in failing health, the news of her death came as a shock to her friends in this community, many of whom had not learned of her illness.

She was born October 18, 1880, in Norwich Town, in the same house where she died, the daughter of Alice Estella Wilson and the late Charles F. Tufts, and has always resided in Norwich. During her illness she was devotedly cared for by members of her family, for whom much sympathy has been manifested in the loss of a model wife, mother and daughter.

Mrs. Potter received her education at the Norwich Town school. She was a member of the First Congregational church.

Besides her husband she is survived by a son, Kenneth Skinner, a daughter, Anita Alice Potter, and her mother, Mrs. Alice E. Wilson Tufts with whom the members of the Potter family made their home, all of Norwich, also a brother, William F. Tufts of Hartford.

Mrs. Potter's chief interests were centered in her home, where at all times she was very industrious and diligent in performing the tasks and duties which devolved upon her.

Mrs. Catherine Byrnes Garrity.

After an illness of seven weeks, due to the infirmities of old age, the life of Mrs. Catherine Byrnes Garrity came to a close Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock at her home, 86 Cedar street. During her illness she had been tenderly cared for.

Mrs. Garrity was born in Cannerstown, County West Meath, Ireland, March 29, 1832, the daughter of Margaret Shields and Patrick Byrnes. She came to America at the age of 17 and had been a resident of Norwich for the past 75 years.

In February, 1855, she was united in marriage by Rev. Daniel Kelly to John McNerny, whose death occurred about seven years later, leaving his widow and two daughters. About 15 years later she was united in marriage with James Garrity, whose death occurred in Norwich about 35 years ago.

Mrs. Garrity is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Mary Moore, with whom she had made her home for a number of years. Another daughter, Miss Margaret McNerny, died May 10, 1912. She is also survived by four grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Henry Jarvis.

Word has been received in this city of the death of Henry Jarvis, a former resident of Glasgo, and well known in Norwich, in Fairhaven, Mass. His death occurred Tuesday morning at 4.30 o'clock at the home of his son, William Jarvis, after illness of about three years. He had lived with his son about six weeks.

He was born in Canada March 24, 1840, the son of Mrs. Mary Armstrong, and came to this country when a young man, where he was married to Amelia Michard of Taftville in St. Mary's church, Baltic, 46 years ago. Before going to his son's home in Fairhaven he had resided in Glasgo for 36 years, during which time he was employed by the American Thread company as a second hand, receiving a pension from the company.

Surviving him are six sons, Geroge of Norwich, Wilfred of Voluntown, Napoleon of Glasgo, Henry, Jr., of Noank, Joseph of Moosup and William Jarvis of East Fairhaven, and two daughters, Mrs. Alphonse Germaine of Taftville and Mrs. Paul LaMotte of Bristol, Ct. He also leaves two brothers, Charles of Salem and Peter of Fall River, and a sister, Mrs. Victor St. John of Occum. His wife died in June, 1922.

SANTA CLAUS VISITS GREENEVILLE SUNDAY SCHOOL

The annual Christmas entertainment of the Sunday school of the Greeneville Congregational church was held Monday evening in the Sunday school room. The entertainment was one of the best in the history of the school and the work of the scholars, especially the little tots, reflects great credit on Mrs. Fred Fox, Mrs. Sarah Lathrop, Mrs. Richard Torrance and Mrs. John McNeely, who was in charge of their training.

Interspersed in the children's program were two well rendered violin solos by Henry Ladd, accompanied on the piano by Dwight Richardson. Mr. Richardson also rendered a pleasing violin solo. It was announced during the evening that Miss Florence E. Tilley has completed 21 years of perfect attendance at the Sunday school sessions. She was awarded a special prize.

During the evening Santa Claus, impersonated by Earl Kramer, appeared with a bag filled with gifts which were distributed to the children and grown-ups. Each person receiving a gift had to open it in full view of the audience. Considerable merriment was caused when Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, the pastor, received a small doll. The program was as follows:

Selection, orchestra; prayer, Rev. Mr. Ricketts; song, school; recitation, Merry Christmas, Ruth Abell; If I Were a Snowflake, Isabel Haig; Riding With Santa, Russell Rydholm; Little Stockings, Lois Bauch, Jean Mitchell, Everett Drescher, William Wilson, Frank Crooker and George Geer; Pa Did It, Harold Wallace; Santa Claus Land, Jean West; song, Cradled in a Manger; Christmas Bells, Edna Wallace; Plans for a Better Christmas, Jabez West; Santa Claus Will, Janice Service; Christmas People, Betty Spaulding, Margery Buchanan, Dorothy Spaulding, Shirley Prentice, Marion Drescher and Lorraine Prentice; The Best Christmas, Alice Quinley; Santa Claus' Welcome, Margaret West; The Happiest, Edward Peontkowski; Christmas Wishes, Delphine Ladd; If Santa Claus Should Fail, Charles Tanis; Sly Santa Claus, Ruth Anderson; song, Holly Berries; Christmas Eve, Alice Ladd; Hilda's Christmas, Natalie Service.

LOCAL GAS AND ELECTRICAL PLANT DAMAGED BY FIRE

Fire, caused by spontaneous combustion, for a time threatened to blow up the big gas storage tank at the city's gas and electric plant about 8.30 o'clock Tuesday morning. Damage to the extent of about $4,000 was done to the purifying department at the gas plant. W. P. Shanley, superintendent of the gas plant, discovered the fire in the purifying house and immediately pulled in an alarm from Box 233, a private box at the plant. Somebody outside the plant saw the flames at about the same time and pulled in Box 24, North Main street, near Roath street. Box 24 immediately followed Box 233, and the ringing of the two boxes called out all the apparatus in the city.

When the firemen arrived flames were shooting from the roof of the purifying house and the fire was assuming threatening proportions. Employes of the gas plant had a line of hose laid but were minus a nozzle for the hose. One of the fire department nozzles was quickly attached to the hose and the water was turned on.

Six lines of hose were laid to fight the flames and as it was necessary to run the hose across the railroad tracks, trains were held up during the fire. The northbound passenger train leaving the local station at 8.50 o'clock was flagged by a railroad employe and Officer John Carroll flagged a southbound freight train some distance north of the fire.

For a time the flames threatened to blow up the big gas storage tank which holds the city's supply of gas. Fast work on the part of the fire department kept the flames confined to the purifying building and prevented them from reaching the big tank.

The damage caused by the fire is estimated at about $4,000. This is fully covered by insurance. A new roof will have to be constructed for the purifying house and new flooring will have to be constructed on the second floor. It is the intention to replace the burned roof with one of corrugated asbestos.

The cause of the fire is laid to chemical reaction resulting in spontaneous combustion, according to General Manager C. W. Taggart. The purifying box in which the fire originated had not been in use Monday night and when the gas was turned into it Tuesday morning it burst into flames.

Considering the extent of the blaze, the loss was comparatively small. In the building are kept only the purifying boxes and the necessary valves for controlling the flow of gas.

TROLLEY TRAFFIC TO CEASE DURING ECLIPSE

At the request of Prof. E. W. Brown who will be in charge of the Yale Astronomic Observatory on Jan. 24, the day of the total eclipse of the sun and the moon, President Lucius S. Storrs of the Connecticut Company agreed to halt all trolley traffic in the state during the period of totality of the eclipse in order that everyone in the state who happens to be a trolley passenger at the time of the great phenomenon will have the opportunity of viewing it. A second object of the stopping of trolley traffic is to make it unnecessary for street lamps to be lighted, a contingency which would interfere with proper viewing of the eclipse by the public.

Mr. Storrs was prompted in his action by the consideration of the fact that total eclipses, which are far different from the partial variety, occur in one locality only once in several centuries and that unless one travels purposely to witness an eclipse it is probable that the one of January 24 will be the only one he will ever see. Mr. Storrs expressed the hope that autoists would stop their cars and turn off their lights in order that all might obtain a most advantageous view of the eclipse.

Trolley traffic on that day will be continued until one minute before totality since there will be sufficient daylight until that time. During the two minutes when the sun's face will be completely hidden and during the following minute, traffic will be at a standstill and will then be resumed according to regular schedule.

PUTNAM GIRL ENGAGED TO SEATTLE STUDENT

At a supper party given Christmas night to a few friends, Mr. and Mrs. Silas M. Wheelock of Church street, Putnam, summer cottagers at Pleasant View for several seasons, announced the engagement of their youngest daughter, Miss Elizabeth Wheelock, to James Roy Fulton of Seattle, Washn.

Miss Wheelock was graduated from Putnam high school. After graduating from the Mary Lyon school, at Swarthmore Pa., she finished her education at Simmons college, graduating in the class of 1924.

Mr. Fulton is a graduate of the University of Washington and next June will graduate from Harvard Medical school.

Rev. Robert B. Day, rector of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, conducted the service and also read the committal service at the grave in Maplewood cemetery. The bearers were Merton Palmer, Alexander E. Poreda, Harold Spicer and Walter Cackett.

UNITED CHURCH SCHOOL HAS DELIGHTFUL SOCIAL

The annual Christmas entertainment of the church school of the United Congregational church was held Tuesday evening at the Community house and proved to be one of the most enjoyable in many years. In the absence of Superintendent Ernest L. Latimer, the welcoming address was made by Herbert B. Cary following which a programme was most ably presented by Ye Colonials.

The opening number of the evening was a song number, Christmas Comes But Once a Year, S. Guger, Hazel Banfield and Mabel C. Buckingham. This was followed by a recitation to music, 'Twas the Night After Christmas, by Frieda Peyocke, Miss Mary E. Gray, accompanist.

A humorous number, Dr. Bill of the Sick Polly, Frank Bristow, pleased both young and old as did a clever rendition of the verse, Pa Did It (Edgar Guest), by Miss Banfield. For an encore Miss Banfield interpreted the Fairy Santa Claus, H. W. Loomis. The Gingerbread Man (J. Gaynor), by Miss Mabel C. Buckingham met with favor and she was forced to respond to an encore, giving, The Road to China, words written by Mazie Virginia Cruthers.

Next followed a group of numbers for the children, which met with instant favor, the group being Mother Goose, Victor Herbert, Little Jack Horner, E. Kars and Little Miss Muffett.

A musical treat was furnished when The Night Before Christmas (Hanna Van Vollenhoven), was charmingly rendered as a piano solo by Miss Mary E. Gray.

A treat of the evening was the next number of the programme, many mystifying tricks and sleight of hand acts being performed by Prof. William J. Banfield. His numbers were interspersed with local hits, especially in the silver tube set, much to the delight of his audience which was kept interested throughout the exhibition, the favorite trick for the children being the coin trick.

The entertainment came to a close with a new and novel number. The Doll's Romance, a pantomime which required clever work of the artists in execution. This number was given by Miss Banfield and Mrs. Buckingham, with piano accompaniment by Miss Gray. Dressed as dolls the participants in the pantomime told the story of the love of the Chinese dolls for the American girl doll, ending in an embrace in which the dolls were supposed to become broken. The act was most favorably received and an encore was demanded, a short dolls sketch finale of the act being given.

Following the entertainment Mr. Cary called the names of perfect pupils for the past year, the following receiving presents for perfect attendance: L. S. Young, Miss Henrietta Davis, Miss Gladys Hill, Mrs. John Gillen, Miss May Gilbert, Miss Ruth Ennis, Miss Bessie Edwards, Miss Julia Johns, Miss Alice Backus, George Ranger, Harold Dennis, Leverre Tubbs, Ilva Ranger, Duncan Macdougall and Miss Alice Blanchar.

Refreshments of ice cream and fancy wafers were then served by the committee in charge which comprised Mrs. John Kukla, chairman, Mrs. John Gillen, Mrs. Herbert Lawrence, Miss Beatrice Freeman, Miss Elizabeth Smith, Donald Bullard, Herburt Gallup, and Herbert Cary.

GAVE PROGRAMME AT CHRISTMAS SOCIAL

The proramme given Monday evening at the Sunday School Christmas social at Trinity M. E. church was in charge of Mrs. Fred Geer, Mrs. Geo. W. Greenlaw and Miss Mary Gray. The programme was as follows:

Greetings, Walter Smith; The Ever Bearing Tree, Esther O'Mara; A Little Boy, Jay Geer; A Little Girl, Frances and Frank Banker; My Christmas Gifts, Virginia Geer; Christmas Bells, Rose Peckham; A Prayer, John Crowe; hymn, Santa's Secret, Eileen Baton; No Stockings to Wear, Lois Dury; If Santa Should Give a Dinner, Beatrice Adams; O Christmas, Edith Palmer; Christmas Candles, Marie Peckham, Mildred Crowe, and Myrtle Browning; The Birds' Christmas Carol, Robert Graham.

Santa Claus distributed gifts, there was a social hour and refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. A. D. Lewis.

They were married November 14, 1923. There is one child and the petitioner asks for the custody of the child and asks that she be allowed to take the name of Urbanovics. The papers were filed Tuesday in the office of the superior court clerk.

Enjoyed Fox Hunt.

At South Canterbury Christmas day was selected by Fred Haskell, Frank Congdon, Frank Vallette, Wallace Salisbury, Carl Gallup, Bradford Smith and Vernon Kilpatrick as the one day of 1924 for a fox hunt. So headed by four of the finest fox hounds in this part of the state they were off soon after sun up and had two hot trails quicker than it can be written. After four hours of rapid and perfect work by the dogs three red foxes were brought in by the party and a fourth only escaped by back tracking on the thin ice over the Quinebaug.

The board of directors of the state farm for women at Niantic will ask the state legislature for an appropriation of $106,000 for the building of three new cottages and for $215,000 for maintenance.

URGES DEVELOPMENT OF THAMES RIVER

The proposed deepening of the Thames river channel features the December membership letter of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce which has been mailed out by Secretary John J. O'Rourke. The letter follows:

Thames River—A conference between representatives of the chamber and Major G. R. Powell, district engineer, of Providence, was held in that city on December 18th. As a result of that conference, and with some assurance of a good fighting chance to obtain this improvement of the river channel, another request has been made for a second hearing in Washington before the board of army engineers. There are several reasons why the proposed development has possibilities for success.

There are 576 rivers, harbors and waterways now under improvement, 37 new projects and 127 surveys authorized in the rivers and harbors bill in congress. Not one of the 37 new projects is in Connecticut or New England. Most of them are located in the south.

The effect upon the growth and prosperity of cities where good water transportation is developed is seen, in a striking manner, in Portland, Oregon; and Seattle, Washington. The former spent $17,000,000 on piers, dry docks, loading machinery and warehouses. The latter spent $15,000,000 for similar improvements. It should be noted here that these two cities spent the huge sums quoted above purely on faith. That faith was justified. These ports now carry 30 per cent of all the mail from this country to the Orient. Seventy per cent of all the silk imported from the Orient to this country enters these ports.

The developments of the Mississippi, the Missouri and Tennessee rivers, the proposed canalization of the Ohio, the proposed intracoastal canal of Louisiana and Texas, the proposed canal projects to offset the inland disadvantages of Sacramento and Stockton, California, all indicate the alertness of the people throughout the country to develop the best obtainable water transportation systems that can be secured. These projects total into the billions of dollars. And they are projects built on the faith of the respective communities which are interested.

Houston's Texas ship channel, 50 miles long, accomplished through the vision of the people of that fast growing city, had 101 ships during November. Forty-five ship lines send their ships to Houston regularly. And Houston is 50 miles from the Gulf of Mexico.

These are some notable developments that have been urged before congress. The Thames river needs no canalization. There are just as good prospects for increased water transportation from Norwich as those that are proposed in some, if not many, of the cities located on the proposed developments in various parts of the country.

It is for this reason that the chamber is making a tenacious fight, and a determined effort to see that the proposed deepening of the river channel from Allyn's Point to Norwich is accomplished.

Navigation Lights—Last winter the chamber took up the matter of permanent lights on the river channel with the United States lighthouse service department. The department made the following recommendations, the attached copy of which was received the 16th inst.: "Thames River, Conn.: Replace 11 oil lights (Lights Nos. 1, 3, 5, 9, 10, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 18) with automatic acetylene lights on permanent foundations. Note: Practically all these lights are on pile structures and most of them are carried away during the winter and on all of them it is practically impossible for the keepers to get to them through the ice to attend the lights. Also, several of these structures are located so as to mark ends of submerged dikes, and when lights are gone the navigation of the river is difficult and dangerous. The river is kept broken open for traffic practically all winter, and the failure of the lights is a serious detriment to the navigation of the river. Estimated cost: Replacing 11 lights with automatic acetylene lights on permanent foundations, $73,782.

In the event that the special appropriation is not procured, so that the work under same can be undertaken in the Thames river during the next summer, this service will endeavor to take some action that will, in a degree, improve conditions somewhat in the Thames river, but the amount of work, however, that it will be possible to do without the special appropriation will be very little."

Christmas Wreaths—The Retail Merchants association and the chamber have cooperated in securing the 76 evergreen wreaths decorating the poles of our improved lighting system in the business section. The city officials have given their sanction and their assistance in making our business district looking attractive during the holiday season.

Community Advertising—There are many forms of advertising a community adopted by various civic organizations throughout the country. During recent years the school children have created a new method and one which is of advantage to our cities. This new method is employed by the children in their geography or English studies and in order to get the facts, they send requests to chambers of commerce for booklets or literature of any description. During the month of October the local chamber had such requests from Salisbury, Conn.; Meadowbrook, W. Va.; Westfield, Mass.; Tulsa, Oklahoma; Howe, Indiana. Our booklets had a wide distribution during that month. A revised booklet will be issued during the first part of the new year as the old supply is nearly exhausted.

State Park—It is expected that a conference will soon be held with the state park commission in Hartford regarding the proposed park for New London county. This county has the distinction of being the only county in the state not having a state park or a forest reservation; and there are 25 state parks and six state forests in Connecticut.

Copies of the new traffic regulations have been printed and are being distributed to vehicle drivers. A supply of these pamphlets is on hand at police headquarters where they may be secured by drivers upon application.

TWENTY CASES OF SCARLET FEVER IN ONECO

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Oneco, Dec. 30.—The scarlet fever situation here is still far from satisfactory, although the Christmas tree at which so many were exposed was 12 days ago, and it is thought there is little more danger from that exposure, the apparent determination of some to not obey quarantine orders is causing much, possibly useless, fear.

There are about 20 cases, new and convalescent here, so far reported, but much the greatest danger is in the unreported cases.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

Miss Elizabeth Selden left Tuesday for Summerville, S. C., where she will spend the remainder of the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester MacGregory and sons, Gardner and Lester, and their daughter, Carol of Brooklyn, N. Y., have been visiting Mrs. MacGregory's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Bennett of Williams street.

Mrs. John Falvey McCormick and son, John F. McCormick, Jr., who have been in Norwich to pass the holiday with Mrs. McCormick's father, former Mayor Timothy C. Murphy, of Broadway, will return today (Wednesday) to their home in Pelham Manor, N. Y. Mr. McCormick, business manager of The Commonweal, was in Norwich for Christmas Day.

SENATE HAS PASSED 137 BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Washington, Dec. 30.—Speeding up its legislative machinery the senate today passed 137 bills and resolutions before quitting for its New Year's recess of two days. The house passed the treasury-post office appropriation bill, but did not adjourn over until Friday, Representative Longworth of Ohio, the republican leader, obtaining unanimous consent that the recess be for only one day.

Only a comparatively few of the measures passed by the senate were of major importance, most of them providing for the settlement of private claims and granting authority for the construction of bridges across navigable streams in various states.

Furs valued at $1,645 were stolen by burglars who broke into the store of H. J. Weingarten, Bridgeport.

JOHNSON IS OFFERED FINANCIAL BACKING BY TWO OF HIS FRIENDS

Reno, Nev., Dec. 30.—Walter Johnson, Washington American League baseball pitcher, who, according to reports from the east today, had been offered financial aid by two Ann Arbor, Mich., men, to help in purchasing the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League, admitted today that he understands such negotiations were under way, but said he was not in a position to discuss the matter.

"I have an offer and am considering it," Johnson said, adding that the Ann Arbor men were the only persons who could talk for publication. "I do not know whether they have negotiated with Cal Ewing for the purchase of the club, or whether Ewing wants to sell," Johnson explained. "Any announcement must come from these men. There may be something for me to say in a few days but not at present."

Johnson admitted that he also had been approached by Salt Lake business men regarding the taking over of the Salt Lake club of the Coast league but that nothing had been done.

A conference was held at Ann Arbor, Mich., late today, Derrill O. Pratt, former Detroit American infielder, said tonight, regarding the proposed plan for renewing negotiations by Walter Johnson, Washington American pitcher, for the purchase of the Oakland, Calif., club of the Pacific Coast league.

Pratt refused to say with whom he conferred but admitted they were no men from out of town. He said the conference was in the interest of "getting conditions back where they were when Johnson held an option" on the Oakland club some weeks ago.

As far as is known, R. T. Dobson, sr., wealthy Ann Arbor resident, who virtually admitted today he was interested in the deal, did not attend the conference, but his son, R. T. Dobson, Jr., had a long talk with Pratt following the latter's conversation with the men from out of town.

Pratt asserted tonight that he was interested in the deal only through his "friendship for Walter Johnson."

Although those interested in the deal refused to make any definite statements on the matter pending word from Johnson, it was understood from seemingly reliable sources that Johnson had been offered approximately $400,000 under certain conditions, provided he desired to use it toward the purchase of the Oakland club.

STURGIS ELECTED TO SUCCEED AUGUST BELMONT

New York, Dec. 30.—Frank K. Sturgis of New York was elected chairman of the Jockey club, to succeed the late major August Belmont, at a meeting of the club players held late today.

Harry M. Knapp resigned as treasurer and was elected vice-chairman to succeed Mr. Sturgis. John E. Cowdin was elected secretary-treasurer. William Woodward, Joseph E. Widner, and Joseph E. Davis were named a standing committee by the chair. Payne Whitney was elected to the board of Stewards to fill the vacancy left there by the death of Mr. Belmont.

There were present, Frank K. Sturgis, William Woodward, Joseph E. Widner, Joseph E. Davis, and John E. Cowdin.

Mr. Sturgis is one of the oldest members of the Jockey club and has been active in its administration from the first. For many years he was treasurer of the organization, and has been a popular choice as chairman of the breeding bureau. He bred carriage horses at Clipston Grange, his estate at Lenox, Mass., and drove four in hand teams of his own breeding in the period when coaching was fashionable.

He has been president of the New York Coaching club. In the early days of the National Horse Show Association, he was a director and took an active part in the conduct of the shows at Madison Square garden, when the exhibitions drew the finest horseflesh in the United States.

Mr. Cowdin, who becomes secretary-treasurer was an amateur rider of dariing and a polo enthusiast in his younger days. He has served as a steward at various meetings for the last few years and has represented the Jockey club at the Jamaica course, spring and fal. He has a wide acquaintance among followers of the turf.

Payne Whitney is prominent among the younger generation of turf enthusiasts. He is a large stockholder in Belmont Park.

The annual meetings of the jockey club will be held on January 5th.

PENN SQUAD HOLDS PRACTICE IN STADIUM

Berkeley, Cal., Dec. 30.—(By The A. P.)—An invading party of some 125 consisting of the Pennsylvania varsity football squad, its coaches and trainers, the campus band, a number of fervid rooters, arrived here today on the overland limited and made the grim preparations for battle with the University of California New Year's day.

More than 500 California students met the Quakers and cheered them as worthy foes. The Pennsylvania band led the march to a hotel.

Coach Lou Young took the squad to the California stadium this afternoon and efforts were made to smooth out the kinks of travel. The Quaker mentor was not overly optimistic.

LARGE ATHLETIC BUILDING TO BE BUILT IN STOCKHOLM

Stockholm, Dec. 30.—Another result of the great wave of interest in Swedish athletics is the decision, just announced to construct a hugh sporting palace at the St. Erik Bridge, in the heart of Stockholm, to be opened for use in 1926. The building will be one of the largest and best equipped of its kind in Europe. It will contain facilities for all sorts of indoor sports and for many years usually played out-of-doors, such as tennis. There will be a special hall for swimming events, with a pool 164 feet in length and a gallery accommodating 2,500 spectators.

RECORD ENTRY LIST FOR FUTURITY STAKES OF 1927

New York, Dec. 30.—Entries for the futurity stakes of 1927, which close January 2, are expected to exceed the 1529 recorded a year ago in the classic which is estimated as being worth more than $100,000, according to Secretary Schaumburg of the Westchester Racing association. The race dates back to 1888 when it was won by Proctor Knott in a bruising finish with Salvator at Sheepshead Bay.

Among the new breeders represented by one or more entries are: A. Morris Herkness, Philadelphia; Fa de Saint Phalle, New York; Hamilton Farm, Gladstone, New Jersey; Marshall Field, New York; W. E. Hupp, Lexington, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. Baylor O. Hickman, Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. Henry T. Helladay, Jr., Virginia; Frederick M. Alger, Detroit; Woodstone Stable, Hartford, Conn.;

THIS BOY DOESN'T CARE FOR DEMPSEY

Hammond, Ind., Dec. 30.—Jack Dempsey was knocked out today—a pasteboard Jack Dempsey. A full sized picture of the world's heavyweight champion in fighting attitude in an East Chicago drug store window so irritated Charles Logan as he passed it he let fly with a haymaker through the plate glass. Bleeding from cut wrist and face, Logan was still swinging when arrested.

SMITH'S CHALLENGE TO MORTON REFUSED IN N. Y.

New York, Dec. 30.—Harold Smith, a Chicago abntamweight, bought to post a forfeit of $2,500 with the state athletic commission today to bind a battle match with Eddie (Cannonball) Martin, bantamweight champion, but the commission refused to accept the forfeit ruling that Martin had six months to defend his crown before the commission would attempt to select an opponent for him.

Albert Yachoca, Peruvian middleweight, was indefinitely suspended for "running out" of a match in New York. Italian Joe Gans, who refused to meet Ted Moore, English middleweight, at an up-state club last week because of an alleged injured hand, appeared before the commission and sought reinstatement from the 60 days suspension given him by the commission. The suspension was lifted but at the same time the commission ordered him to refrain from fighting for sixty days to give his hand a chance to heal sufficiently to allow him to fight.

The $10 a round rule for preliminary fighters was discussed at a request of an upstate club but no action was taken. The Suffolk County Sporting club of Patchogue, L. I., was granted a license to hold boxing exhibitions.

MID-WEST PULLING HARD FOR NOTRE DAME TEAM

Chicago, Dec. 30.—With the time near for the playing of the Notre Dame-Stanford intersectional football game at Pasadena, Cal., New Year's afternoon, the mid-west is pulling for Knute Rockne's famous "Four Horsemen" to ride roughshod over the Californians, thus enabling the Notre Dame eleven to finish 1924 with a record of victories from coast to coast.

Telegram officers in small midwest towns and cities, usually closed on holidays, will remain open to receive the returns. Everybody with a radio, or those who know somebody with a set, will have their ears glued to the headpieces, starting at 4.15 p. m., Central Standard time, to receive a play-by-play report, which will be broadcast by WGN, the Chicago Tribune station, over special wires from the gridiron.

GIBBONS RECEIVES OFFER TO MEET FIRPO IN LONDON

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 30.—Tommy Gibbons, St. Paul light heavyweight, boxer, announced tonight he had received an offer to fight Luis Angel Firpo, South American heavyweight, before the National Sporting club, of London.

Gibbons said the offer came through a Brooklyn, newspaperman who was acting for the National Sporting club.

The club is said to be willing to post a guarantee of pounds sterling 20,000, the winner to take sixty per cent and the loser forty per cent. No date was mentioned for the bout but it was indicated that if negotiations are successful it would be held sometime in March.

Gibbons said tonight he would be glad to meet Firpo and expressed confidence that he could defeat the South American. The St. Paul fighter declared he had wired the contents of the proposition to his manager, Eddie Kane, who is now in Chicago.

YALE HOCKEY TEAM WINS FIRST FROM WILLIAMS

Lake Placid, N. Y., Dec. 30.—The Yale Hockey team defeated Williams six to two on the Lake Placid club links here today in the opening game of a week of practice in preparation for the winter schedule. A game will be played each day, with teams representing a number of colleges competing. The president Harding trophy will be contested Wednesday if there is sufficient snow, the competition being various winter sports.

Teams now in practice here represent these institutions:

McGill, Bates, Middlebury, Dartmouth, Harvard, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, Cornell, Wisconsin, Williams, Ottawa and Yale.

TIGER FLOWERS MAY MEET DELANEY AT GARDEN

New York, Dec. 30.—Tiger Flowers, Atlanta negro middleweight, who boxes Joe Lohman of Toledo here New Year's afternoon, may oppose Jack Delaney, Bridgeport, Conn., battler, who conquered Paul Berlenbach, in a match at Madison Square Garden January 15. Negotiations for the contest were said to be nearly completed.

Roser Sold to Baltimore

New Haven, Dec. 30.—John Roser, outfielder of the Worcester Eastern league club, who hit .350 last season, including 28 home runs, has been sold to the Baltimore club of the International league, it was announced here tonight. He led the Eastern league in batting average during 1924. The transfer was said to have been for cash but the amount received for Roser was not made known.

Fort Pitt Wins

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 30.—The Fort Pitt Hockey club and the Maple A. A. of Boston broke even in a two game series in the eastern wheel of the U. S. Amateur Hockey Association, the Pittsburgh team winning the final game tonight four to one. Pittsburgh scored three goals in the first period, and one in the third. The visitors' only goal was made by Long in the third period.

"Y" Emps vs Buddies

The "Y" Emps will face their hardest task of the early season when they meet the Plainfield Buddies on the local Y. M. C. A. court Thursday afternoon. The Buddies are one of the teams representing the Plainfield Community House and during the past few seasons have earned the reputation of being one of the fastest junior teams in this vicinity. The Emps, however, are playing good ball and are eager to match their ability against the Buddies quintet.

ARMY-NAVY CLUB TO PLAY FAST FALL RIVER TEAM NEW YEAR'S DAY

Led by "Scotty" Higgins, former star of the Willimantic Emeralds, the American Thread five of Fall River, premier quintet of southeastern, Mass., will clash with the fast Army and Navy club in Parish Hall New Year's afternoon.

The boys from the Bay State have a remarkable record to boast of having been defeated but twice in the past 2 years, some of these recent victims being the Providence College Five, Newport Y. M. C. A., always considered one of the leading quintets in New England, and the Cape Cod Demons in a city series. At the early part of the season they defeated the Fall River Elk Five for the city honors of which team the well known Marks brothers are members. During the latter part of the next month they are planning a two weeks tour of Vermont, Maine, and New Hampshire.

The lineup of the American Thread five is as follows, Huggins and Mooney in the forward position. "Scotty" needs no introduction to the majority of fans in this section, and the sport writers in and around Fall River declare that he has lost none of his old time skill and is as as good as new. Mooney former star of the Sommersville K. of C. will be "Scotty's" running mate. Bergeron formerly of the Yarmouth A. C. and one of the leading pivot men in Mass. will jump at center, Deegan guard extraordinary of the famous Purple Collegians of Worcester and Bothroyd a member of the "Y" team of Cambridge will hold down the guard position.

This is the initial appearance of this quintet in this section and they are out to make a creditable showing.

The preliminary game will be between the Army-Navy Seconds and the Taftville Celtics for the junior championship. There has been much talk between the managers regarding the merits of the teams and they will be given a chance to fight it out. The Seconds will have the following lineup: Peltier and St. Germain forwards, Eddie Murphy center, F. Murphy and Parquette, guards; A. LaBarre subs. The Celtics will have the following lineup: Yerrington and Gauthier forwards, Donegan center, Eccleston and Phaneuf, guards; Martin and LaMotte subs.

A YOUTHFUL TILDEN AFTER NATIONAL TENNIS HONORS

New York, Dec. 30.—Edward T. Tilden will seek the national boys' singles championship tomorrow when he opposes Frank Shields, of Silver Beach, N. Y., in the final round of this division of the indoor tournament at the Seventh Regiment Armory.

Jacobs, who boasts a juvenile brand of Tildens famous "cannonball" service, won his way to the finals today by overwhelming John Rau, Lawrence, N. Y., 6-0, 6-0. The Baltimore youth, as a result, will be a favorite to take the measure of his opponent in the finals, Shields, who won the other semifinal match today from E. H. McCauliff, Fordham, 3-6, 6-4; 6-4. McCauliff put up a plucky fight for victory in spite of the handicap of a fractured wrist.

The battle for the junior singles crown resolved itself into rivalry between the New York and Boston districts, with two survivors of each section in the semi-finals, tomorrow. Kenneth Appel, of East Orange, N. J., and Mercersburg Academy, the defending champion, will oppose H. L. Johnson, of Newton Academy, Waban, Mass., in the first semi-final, while Horace Orser, of Stuyvesant High school, New York, and Malcolm T. Hill, of Newton Academy, year's boys' champion, in the other match.

This quartet also are doubles semi-finalists, Hill and Johnson, 1923 champions, advanced to the semi-finals today by defeating Wood Ivins, Hoboken, N. J., and John Miller, Newton, Mass., High school, 6-1, 7-5. Orser and Appel advanced by disposing of Robert Crum, Newark, and Winthrop Lenz, Princeton, 6-1, 6-2.

Appel, the titleholder, was the only junior singles star extended in today's matches, but after dropping the first set to John Millan, of New, Mass., High school, he romped through the last two sets to take the match at 4-6, 6-2, 6-3.

In the others, Johnson defeated Wood Ivins, Hoboken, N. J., 6-1, 6-2; Orser eliminated Robert Raymond, Lehigh University, 6-1, 6-3; and Hill disposed of H. H. Murray, Jr., Hastings, N. Y., 6-2, 6-4.

SCHOLZ TO OPEN SEASON AT MILLROSE A. A. GAMES

New York, Dec. 30.—Jackson V. Scholz, Olympic 200metre champion and the only American to capture first place in the flat-running events at the Paris games last July, will open his indoor campaign this season at the Millrose A. A. games at Madison Square Garden January 27 and 28. It also will mark his first competitive appearance in the United States since his Olympic triumphs, which also included second place in the 100-metre dash.

Scholz has just arrived in San Francisco from the Orient, where he appeared in exhibitio Emerson Norton, another Oly ar. Wiring from the coast today his acceptance of their invitation to race here, Scholz notified Millrose officials he would stop off for training at his alma mater, Missouri University, before coming east.

Loren Murchison, king of indoor sprinters last season, will not rival Scholz this season because of his trip to the Far East, but the Newark A. C. flier will have unusually strong opposition, nevertheless, Alf Leconey, Louis Clarke, Frank Hussey and Chester Bowman, all members of the Olympic team, are expected to face Scholz in the Millrose sprint events, which include a series at short distances and a 300-yard special.

FOOTBALL IS ALL RIGHT AS IT STANDS, SAYS HALL

New York, Dec. 30.—Football today contains practically every element necessary to the highest type of sport, in the opinion of E. K. Hall of New York, chairman of the American intercollegiate football rules committee, expressed in his annual report today to the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

On the whole, says Mr. Hall, the results from changes made in the rules of 1924 have been gratifying, but the committee undoubtedly will consider returning the point of kickoff to the forty-yard line to eliminate the large number of touchdowns which occurred during the past season and at the same time returning to the game one of its most thrilling plays, the runback of kickoff.

"Every year since the rules have been in substantially their present form," the report says, "the game has increased in popularity and in its possibilities. Each year it seems if the interest in the game had reached a maximum and the next year shows even greater interest than before. I am satisfied that the reason for this is found in the fact that the game contains every element essential to the highest type of sport.

"Let us not be disturbed by the criticism that in its match games it attracts to large audiences and that the receipts roll up into large figures. Let us on the contrary be proud of a game which is so wholesome and so rare a sport that the friends of the colleges and of the game are anxious to deposit at the gates of the stadiums through their small contributions, seldom exceeding $2 each, an amount of money which literally is supporting practically every other branch of athletics activity in the college. This means that through the financial backing which football in its present form has made possible we are approaching a condition that we have been so universally hoping for, namely, a time when the burden of finding facilities and equipment for every branch of college sport has been lifted from those who wish to participate and opportunity opens to all.

"A score of men participate in athletics in the college today where one participated 30 years ago, and I take it that no one will deny that the result is an infinitely more wholesome morale in the colleges today or that the result will be found magnificently worth while in the coming generation.

"The report for the year 1924 would be incompleted without calling attention to the fact that the game as now played does not begin to put the strain on players which the old game did. One needs only to look at the schedules of 1924, which would have been deemed unthinkable a few years ago and then note the fact that some of the teams which played the hardest schedules came up to their final games in the pink of condition."

CONDEMNS MOTION PICTURES IN FOOTBALL SCOUTING

New York, Dec. 30.—(By the A. P.)—Condemning, as an "unethical practice," the use of still or motion pictures in coaching or scouting of an intercollegiate football team, the National Collegiate Athletic association today adopted a resolution forbidding the use of such modern adjuncts to gridiron scenes in the 230 colleges under its jurisdiction and at the same time adopted a resolution ordering a sweeping investigation of summer baseball activities of intercollegiate players.

Branding the practice of the use of "movies," as a deliberate violation of the spirit of college football and contending that if such practice was allowed to to grow, football would relegate into a business institution instead of a sport and make a football game a contest between coaches instead of between players. The association unanimously adopted a resolution, introduced by J. P. Richardson of Dartmouth, barring the use of slow orfast films in either coaching or scouting.

The summer baseball issue was not discussed but the resolution authorized the executive committee to appoint a committee to investigate this practice with the idea of curtailing it.

Several minor changes to the soccer playing code were suggested by the soccer committee but these were all referred to the association football rules committee. R. T. Abercrombie, of Johns Hopkins, chairman of the lacrosse rules committee, reported that a combined Oxford-Cambridge lacrosse team would tour America in 1925 and that Professor Laurie D. Cox of Syracuse University was arranging a schedule for the invaders.

A communication from the Football Coaches' Association of America, requesting the N. C. A. A. to appoint a member of the coaches' organization to the football rules committee, was referred to the executive committee for later action.

The executive committee of the National Research Society of which Daniel Chase, supervisor of physical education in New York, is the president, met in connection with the N. C. A. A. meeting and voted to affiliate with the American Physical Education Association. The committee elected to hold its annual meeting at Rochester, N. Y., April 3 and 4.

Nine colleges were admitted to the National Collegiate Athletic Association, increasing the membership to 230. The newcomers are Notre Dame, Ohio University, Elon College, N. C., Susquehanna University, Selinsgrove, Pa.; Pomona College, Claremont, Cal.; Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio; Niagara University, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Howard College, Birmingham, Ala.; and Boston University.

MONTGOMERY CANNOT FIGHT IN BOSTON

Boston, Dec. 30.—The state boxing commission today announced that it would not approve another bout between Sully Montgomery, former Center College football star, and Jim Maloney of South Boston. A bout between these heavyweights a week ago ended in the third round with a referee's decision that Montgomery had fouled the local man. Today's decision followed reports that the men might be rematched to fight here.

The commission's action, it was announced, was based on a consideration of the possibility that the proposed bout would be a "grudge fight" which is forbidden by the laws of the state.

McTIGUE SETS UP CAMP AT SUMMIT

New York, Dec. 30.—Mike McTigue, world's lightweight champion, pitches his camp today at Summit, N. J., in preparation for the 15-round match at the Newark armory January 7, when he will meet Mickey Walker, welterweight titleholder. Walker already is in training at Rumson, N. J.

The card of preliminaries to this match has been completed and includes two ten-round bouts, one between Bobby Barrett of Philadelphia and Jack Rappaport of Orange, N. J., and the other involving Harry Martone of Jersey City and Charley Arthurs of Yonkers, N. Y.

FUENTE WILL MEET SMITH AT MEXICO CITY

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Tony Fuente, the Mexican heavyweight, whose quick knockout over Fred Fulton stirred up a boxing scandal in Los Angeles, will make his next start in the City of Mexico on New Year's day. Fuente's opponent will be Homer Smith, a bulky heavyweight, of Kalamazoo, Mich. The contest is scheduled for ten rounds. Smith two years ago gained a reputation by sticking ten rounds with Luis Firpo at Omaha when Firpo was supposed to be good.

SPORTING NOTES

D. E. Dugdale at one time owner of the Seattle Club, and a baseball man for many years, with his wife has been visiting in his old home town, Peoria, Ill.

Wally Hood, hard hitting outfielder of the Los Angeles team of the Pacific Coast League has been traded to the Chicago Cubs for several players, according to reports.

George Sisler of the Browns has offered a contract to John Hawkins, captain of the University of Southern California squad and star football player, according to report.

Jack Hendricks was given the surprise of his life when in New York during the National League meeting. He hailed a taxi and from the front seat came this: "Hey, Jack, how are you? Get in." Hendricks discovered that his chauffeur was old Jack Warner, former catcher for the Giants. He is owner and operator of his own cab.

Lefty Craig and Ray Gilder, pitchers of the Shreveport team of the Texas League have been sold to the Lincoln Club of the Western League.

Columbus has traded Pitcher Roy Sanders, a right-hander, to the Milwaukee Brewers for Pitcher Nelson Pott, a southpaw.

Manager Dessau of the York Club of the New York-Pennsylvania League has signed George Gaines, a semi-pro-catcher, of Wilkesbarre and Frank Palmer, a shortston, secured from Portsmouth of the Virginia League.

A golf tournament open only to baseball players, recently held in San Francisco was won by Lefty O'Doul, Salt Lake player. Tim Hendryx and Ind Smith finished in second and third places respectively. Other players in the tournament were: Sammy Bohne of the Cincinnati Reds, Walter Ruether of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Bert Ellison, San Francisco manager, Bert Cole, Detroit pitcher, Mike Donlin, former major league star and others.

The big swap whereby Outfielder Brief, Infielder Armstrong and Catcher Skiff go to the Milwaukee Club was completed when the Brewers turned over Outfielder Paul Johnson to the Kansas City outfit. Pitcher Schaack, Catcher Shinault and Outfielder McGowan were to be traded for the trio of Kansas City players. Owner Muehlebach of the Blues, kicked over the traces on this agreement, but finally agreed to the trade when Johnson was thrown in for good measure.

The directors of the Springfield Western Association Club will meet the first week in January to select a manager for the 1925 team. Many applications have been made for the job.

Frank D. Lawrence, associated with Perry Trotman in the ownership of the Portsmouth Club has announced the purchase of Catcher Sauter from Morristown and Pitcher H. Williams from the same club.

George W. (Buck) Ramsey, manager of the Frederick team of the Blue Ridge League since 1920 has been reengaged for the post.

On Dec. 18, the winter league opened in Southwestern Florida. The clubs and their managers are, Miami, Frank Gardner; Fort Lauderdale, Stuffy Stewart; West Palm Beach, Mike Nurke and Lake North, Bob LaMotte.

Roger Bresnahan will take Cozy Dolan's place as coach of the New York Giants, according to reports. In signing the former catcher, McGraw is getting a man who will be able to develop pitchers.

Wichita Falls of the Texas League, has purchased two pitchers from the Little Club of the Pacific Coast League, according to announcement of President Harvey of the Texas team. The pitchers are Carl Williams and Victor Pigg.

When Urban Shocker appeared in juvenile court in St. Louis the other day in connection with adoption proceedings for his step-son, Judge Ossing asked him if he believed he was to be traded. His honor then told the spitballer that he was to the point of issuing an injunction against the Browns letting Urb go.

Wheezer Dell goes out of the Pacific Coast League, Manager Wade Killefer of Seattle, sending him to Atlanta of the Southern Association, in exchange for Bill McCabe. McCabe played under Killefer when Red had the Los Angeles team, and has been anxious to get back to the Coast League ever since he was sent to Atlanta.

Jack Kakefield, former football star of Memphis who tried out with the St. Louis Cardinals in the spring committed suicide at the home of his fiance in Memphis, Dec. 10, by shooting himself. Wakefield is supposed to have quarreled with the young woman and when she refused to accompany him to a football banquet pulled the revolver from his pocket and fired into his brain. After leaving the Cardinals he was with Danville of the Three I, suffering a broken leg soon after reporting. Wakefield was 21 years old.

Upon the return of Warren Giles, secretary of the St. Joseph Club, from the meeting at Hartford, he announced that he had purchased three players. From Sacramento, Outfielder Art Smith was obtained; Will Taylor, a pitcher, from Shreveport, and Phede Lambke, also a pitcher, from Reading.

President Tom Hickey of the American Association, has signed Ted McGraw for his umpiring staff next season.

The Des Moines Club of the Western League, will train in Austin, Tex., next year according to arrangements made between Don Curtis, representative of the Des Moines Club, and President Brownlee of the Austin Club.

Johnny O'Shea, second baseman and captain of the Waterloo team of the Mississippi Valley League, has been sold to Charlotte of the South Atlantic League. The consideration was not made known.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

New York, Dec. 30.—With only one trading day remaining in 1924, stock prices today developed considerable irregularity in reflection of the usual year-end readjustment of speculative accounts. Both the rail and industrial averages were scattered throughout the list. Total sales fell slightly short of one and three-quarters million shares. General Electric was the day's spectacular feature. It opened fractionally higher at 300, sold down to 297, rallied to 304, slipped back a couple of points, moved up to a new high peak at 307 1-2, broken to 296 in reflection of speculative disappointment over the company's announcement of the proposed segregation of its electric bond and share holdings, and closed at 297.

Despite the stiff call money rates, bullish operations were vigorously conducted in a number of issues throughout a greater part of the session, 32 stocks being elevated to new high levels for the year. The list included General Asphalt common and preferred, Shell Union common and preferred, Barnsdall A, Radio Corporation, American Express, American Metals, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Continental Can, Wrigley, United States Industrial Alcohol and Tobacco Products.

Famous Players issues also were lifted to new peaks in response to the announcement that all bank loans had been paid and that the year's earnings will approximate $17 or $18 a share on the common. Radio Corporation also continued its sensational advance by touching a new top at 60, but it reacted later to 57 3-8, off 1 3-8. S. S. Kresge recorded a gain of 10 1-2 points on a few sales.

Good buying was noted among the food shares, Beechnut-Packing closing nearly 3 points higher at 70 after having sold as high as 72 7-8. California Packing showed a net gain of 1 1-2 points at 105. Further accumulation took place in the oil shares with Skelly, one of the new favorites, closing a point higher at 22 3-4.

Most of the standard industrials lost ground. United States Steel common and Studebaker each closed about a point lower at 118 7-8 and 44 3-4, respectively. Baldwin showed a small fractional recession at 130 3-4. American Can, which sold as high as 159 in the early afternoon, dropped to 156, up 1 3-8 on the day. In the late wave of selling which followed the sharp break in General Electric.

The rails continued sluggish. Net losses of a point or more were recorded by many of the popular issues, including St. Paul common and preferred, Rock Island, Norfolk and Western, New York Central, Reading, Chicago Northwestern, Lackawanna, Missouri Pacific preferred, Frisco common and Texas and Pacific.

Call money renewed at 5 per cent and then advanced to 5 1-2. Time money and commercial paper rates also showed a hardening tendency but business was quiet.

Demand sterling touched another new high above $4.73 but the other European rates showed only nominal changes. Argentine and Uruguayan exchanges developed marked strength.

BOND MARKET.

New York, Dec. 30.—Uneven price fluctuations marked today's trading in bonds with operations reflecting year-end readjustment of accounts and the retarding influence of firmer rates.

Liquidation of French and other foreign bonds continued as the situation regarding allied debt payments remained clouded and reports gained circulation that the United States would curb private loans to France if funding of its debt were evaded.

The greatest activity centered in the foreign group, French government 7 1-2s and 8s lost further ground and the German 7s at one time dropped to 93. Good banking support was in evidence, however, and net losses for the day were confined mainly to fractions.

Price movements in the domestic list were insignificant, with buying and selling orders fairly well balanced. Fractional gains in Central of Georgia 5 1-2s, Northern Pacific 6s, Central Pacific first 4s and St. Paul convertible 4 1-2s were offset by the heaviness of Norfolk and Western convertible 6s. New York Central 6s, Pere Marquette 5s and "Katy" 5s.

Copper company bonds, yielding further to profit-taking, were the chief individual weak points in the industrial list. Demand improved, however, for the Chemical issues, Virginia-Carolina and American Agricultural Chemical liens moving up fractions to a point, but failed to point.

New financing was held back by the approach of the New Year holiday.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Selling out of wheat today in large amounts said to come from some of the leading holders gave a sharp jolt to wheat values and to other grain and provisions as well. It was asserted that European demand for United States wheat had dwindled whereas vessels charters for wheat from the Southern Hemisphere were being made on a big scale. Closing quotations here on wheat were weak, 2 3-8 to 4 1-2c net low, May $1.74 1-2 to $1.74 5-8 and July $1.50 3-8 to $1.50 1-2, with corn 7-8 to 1 7-8c off, oats at 1 5-8 to 1 7-8c decline, and provisions showing setbacks varying from 27 to 62 cents.

Much of the persistent selling which developed in the wheat market was due to standing orders to unload at certain definite limits in order to stop losses. Buying throughout the day proved to be of only sufficient volume to bring about brief transit rallies, the close coming when the market was within 1-4c of the day's lowest level, with reports current of increased pressure of Argentine wheat at below the price basis in this country, enlarged estimates of the Australian crop were also at hand.

Increasing stocks of corn had a bearish effect on corn and oats, but rallied toward the last. The corn market showed rather stubborn resistance to selling based on wheat weakness.

Provisions were depressed by the action of grain and of hog values and by walk of an accumulation of lard here.

CURB MARKET.

New York, Dec. 30.—Uneven prices movements characterized today's curb market, with net losses exceeding net gains at the close. Despite the accumulation of several of the popular oils on the "big board," most of the petroleum issues on the curb lost ground although, with the exception of Prairie Oil and Gas, and Standard Oil of Kentucky, each of which closed 1 1-2 points lower, the net losses were held to fractions.

Public utilities showed considerable irregularity. National Power and Light broke six points to 239, Commonwealth dropped 2 1-2 and American Power & Light 1 3-8, but middle west utilities closed 1 1-4 higher and moderate gains were made by some of the other inactive issues.

Radio shares also were mixed, Thermiodyne and Dubilier touching new highs and Freed-Eisemann and Thompson closing about a point higher with Hazeltine and Ware heavy. Radio Corporation (old stock) crossed 12 to a new high record.

NORWICH TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Peck and son Crosby Peck, of Otrobando avenue, were in Westchester Monday and attended the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. Peck's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore D. Peck.

Mr. and Mrs. Peck were united in marriage December 29th, 1874, in the Westchester Congregational church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Jewett, then pastor of the church. Beforde her marriage Mrs. Peck was Miss Morca Day, of Westchester. Mr. Peck was from Millington. They have three children, Edward Peck, with whom they reside, Miss May Peck a teacher in a private school in Greenwich and George Peck of Norwich Town, all were present Monday at the gathering which numbered 50 or more.

The reception, which was quite informal, was attended by relatives and friends from Long Island, Middletown, Norwich, Colchester, East Haddam, Andover, Millington, Moodus and Westchester. A number of neighbors were present and during the day several congratulatory telegrams were received, some coming from as far distant as Kansas. In issuing the invitations it was requested that there be no presents. The guests were served luncheon.

Daniel Peck of Plain Hill and Mr. and Mrs. Olmstead S. Peck of Andover who spent a brief time in Norwich Monday, were included among the guests.

Thursday, New Year's day, a holy day of obligation, masses will be celebrated at the Sacred Heart church at 5 and 7 o'clock. At this church Friday morning the first Friday of the month mass will be celebrated at 7 o'clock. That evening at 7.30 there will be devotions in honor of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sterry of New London turnpike, have been entertaining for several days this week. Miss Mildred Matthewson of New Haven, Mrs. Sterry and her guest were visitors in New London Tuesday.

What Is Going On Tonight

Watch Night Services in Local Churches.

Knights of Pythias Cabaret Show.

West End Community Association holds Costume Party.

Buckingham Council, No. 14, Jr. O. U. A. M., meets in Buckingham Memorial.

TODAY'S EVENTS

Centenary of the birth of Theodore M. Pomeroy, who served as speaker of the 40th congress.

The United States government closes its financial books for the year 1924 today.

San Diego will observe the tenth anniversary of the opening of the Panama-California Exposition with a two-day festival to begin today.

At midnight today the capital of Norway will drop the name of Christiania and henceforth will be known as Oslo, which was the ancient name of the city.

The Alpha Tau Omega fraternity will open a four-day convention in Philadelphia today in celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of its founding, and the fortieth anniversary of its existence on a national scale.

Prohibition enforcement agents in New York and other large cities throughout the United States have taken special measures calculated to insure the "dryest" welcome to the New Year known since the abolition of the liquor traffic.

Midnight tonight will mark the passing of the venerable custom of seamen and astronomers of reckoning their days from noon until noon and their capitulation to the custom of the rest of the world which begins its day and ends it at midnight.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

The management of the Broadway announces for tonight a gala midnight show to take place tonight starting at 11 oclock. The doors will be open at 10:30. No seats are reserved Vaudeville and pictures will be presented. Fun for all is assured; see the New Year toll its way in with joy and gladness in your hearts.

Watch for the big New Year's program scheduled for tomorrow at the Broadway.

You'll be surprised.

Broadway Theater

The secret of the origin of fairies is out. Peter Pan gives it away at last in Herbert Brenon's production of J. M. Barrie's famous fantasy for Paramount, coming to the Broadway theater on Sunday next.

"When the first baby laughed for the first time, its laugh broke into a thousand pieces and they all went skipping about. That was the beginning of fairies," says Peter Pan.

The adventures of the three Darling children, Wendy, John and Michael with Peter in the Never Never Land form the theme of Barrie's wonderful fantasy.

For more than twenty years, Peter Pan has been a favorite with millions of theater-goers. For the first time this wonderful story has been brought to the screen.

Betty Bronson, chosen by Barrie, plays the title role; Ernest Torrence, Cyril Chadwick, Virginia Brown Faire and Anna Wong are featured in the picture.

Willis Goldbeck adapted the screen play from Barrie's stage production. Roy Pomeroy's artistic genius materially aided Herbert Brenon in the filming of many fairy-like effects.

Breed Theater

His Hour, Elinor Glyn's first production since Three Weeks, will be shown for the last time today at the Breed theater. This picture, which is a film version of Mrs. Glyn's novel of a royal love in the Russia of old, has a cast headed by Aileen Pringle and John Gilbert, and includes such players as Emily Fitzroy, Bertram Grassby, Dale Fuller, Mario Carillo, Laurence Grant, and others.

His Hour, is a Metro-Goldwyn picture, presented by Louis B. Mayer. It was directed by King Vidor.

A news and comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

Coming tomorrow Harry Carey in Tiger Thompson.

Cabaret, Dance and Show.

The year 1925 will be ushered in with a bang and a crash by members of Wauregan lodge, Knights of Pythias and their guests at the show cabaret and dance to be held at Olympic hall, New Year's eve. Something doing every minute has been the slogan of the committee in charge and indications are that the slogan should have read every second. Eighteen fast and snappy acts of vaudeville cabaret style, have been secured from the Clement Entertainment Bureau of Hartford, giving nine full changes of costume. These acts will appear at various times during the evening from 8.30 o'clock and up to 3 o'clock New Year's morning or later if desired. Pretty girls, classy costumes snappy music and dances feature all these acts.

Dancing to the music furnished by a popular orchestra will fill out the program of the evening and there will be a scene of action as the new year comes in, greeted by the sound of rattles, horns and noise makers, while paper hats and streamers will add to the attractiveness of the scene.

Table reservations are now going fast for this banner event and tickets for two of more may be secured now from Schwartz Bros., Henschel Tire Co., Barnett's or the Cranston Co., or by calling 583 for reservations.

INGROWN NAIL
Turns Right Out Itself

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

LEGAL NOTICES

AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at Norwich, within and for the District of Norwich, on the 29th day of December, A. D. 1924.
Present—NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.
In the matter of an agreement between William R. Clark and Edith M. G. Clark, husband and wife, both of Norwich, in New London County, Connecticut, parties of the First Part, and William H. Greene of Chicago, Illinois, party of the Second Part, for the adoption of the said William H. Greene by the parties of the First Part.
The said agreement having been exhibited to said Court for approval, in writing, it is Ordered, That the hearing upon the approval of said agreement be had at the Probate Court Room in the City of Norwich, in said District, on the 5th day of January, A. D. 1925, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and that notice of the pendency of said agreement, and of said hearing for the approval thereof, be given by the publication of this order one time in some newspaper having a circulation in said District, at least three days prior to the date of said hearing, and that return be made to this Court.
NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.
The above and foregoing is a true copy of record.
Attest: HELEN M. DRESCHER, dec31d Clerk.

AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at Norwich, within and for the District of Norwich, on the 30th day of December, A. D. 1924.
Present—NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.
Estate of Chauncey A. Fuller, late of Preston, in said District, deceased.
Arthur M. Fuller of Preston, Conn., appeared in Court and filed a petition praying, for the reasons therein set forth, that administration be granted on the estate of said deceased, alleged to be intestate.
Whereupon, It Is Ordered, That said petition be heard and determined at the Probate Court Room in the City of Norwich, in said District, on the 3d day of January, A. D. 1925, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, and that notice of the pendency of said petition, and of said hearing thereon, be given by the publication of this order one time in some newspaper having a circulation in said District, at least three days prior to the date of said hearing, and that return be made to this Court.
NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.
The above and foregoing is a true copy of record.
Attest: HELEN M. DRESCHER, dec31d Clerk.

TAFTVILLE

Taftville people were greatly shocked when they learned of the death by accident of William Nolan of Merchants avenue, while chopping trees in the woods west of the village Monday afternoon. Mr. Nolan was one of the promising young business men of the village, and was well liked by everyone with whom he came in contact. He had recently built a new home on Merchants avenue and was occupying it. Only a few years ago he was united in marriage with Margaret Fitzmaurice, at Sacred Heart church. George Zuerner of Philadelphia, Pa., spent the recent holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Zuerner of Germania avenue.

Edward T. Fenley of Providence, R. I., was a business caller in the village Tuesday.

William Poyerd of South B street shot a large fox at Bog Meadow Monday.

Mrs. Sarah Hasler and family of Hunters avenue have had as guests Mrs. Hasler's son, and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Hasler and son of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Desmarais have returned to their home in Pawtucket, R. I., after spending several days at the home of Mr. Desmarias' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Desmarais of South A street.

Mr. and Mrs. Noe Marcotte have returned to their home in town after spending the past few days with their son and daughter-in-law in Central Falls, R. I.

Fred Robotaille of South Third avenue has accepted a position with the Ponemah company.

It was said Tuesday that a local branch of the Sons of St. George may be organized soon in the village, or possibly in Norwich. The order which is a benefit society accepts for members those who are natives of the British Isles or those who have British ancestry. Letters have been received by a number of local people identified with fraternal organizations, relative to the order. The order is said to be strong in Rhode Island and Massachusetts, as well as in the western part of this state.

New Year's cards in great numbers are arriving at the local post office. The mails are hardly as heavy as they were Christmas week, when the volume received at the Taftville office was the heaviest in local post office history.

The members of Taftville branch, Ancient Order of Hibernians are to go to Norwich, Sunday to take part in a large joint meeting of several branches.

Distemper still holds sway among the canines of the town, and many fine dogs have been attacked by the disease. There is no known prevention for distemper. Plenty of disinfectant used at this time, with proper food and exercise may keep the disease from spreading. Even inoculation, an expensive treatment, failed in a recent case when two good dogs succumbed to the disease after being inoculated. It has been stated, however, that the disease appears in milder form when dogs have been treated.

The loud cracking and booming of the water in the Shetucket river can be heard for a long distance on these frosty nights.

The weather moderated during Tuesday and there was every indication of the snow or rainstorm predicted as an ending of the Old Year.

NEW DAMAGE ACTIONS FILED WITH SUPERIOR COURT CLERK

Fred Lafreniere of this city has been made the defendant in a damage suit for $7,000 brought by Corinne E. J. Mosher, wife of Harold C. Mosher of Broad street. The suit has been brought as the result of injuries which Mrs. Mosher received when she was hit by Mr. Lafreniere's machine on Broad street, near her home. The accident happened Dec. 23d, 1923, about 6 o'clock in the evening. As a result of the accident, the plaintiff received several broken ribs, a fracture in the lower part of the back, and cuts and bruises. She was a patient at the hospital for some time.

Mr. Mosher has also brought suit against Mr. Lafreniere asking damages of $3,000. The plaintiff states that as the result of the injuries received by his wife he has incurred expenses amounting to $1,500 for medicine, medical attention and nursing. X-ray pictures and hospital bills total $400.

Damages of $3,000 are sought by the American Thermos Bottle Co., in an action which the bottle company has brought against the city of Norwich. According to the complaint the city, by a contract, furnishes electric power to the Thermos plant on Laurel Hill.

On or about Aug. 23, 1924, an agreement was made between the Gas & Electrical Co. and the Thermos Bottle Co. through their agents that the power to the Thermos Co., plant would not be turned on that day until the agent of the Thermos Co., was notified. The power was turned on that day, and which power of a reverse nature, making all the motors in the plant run in an opposite direction.

William Corrigan, an employe of the Gas & Electric Co. was in charge of turning on the power, and he and one Green, without the plaintiff's consent, started the elevator at the Thermos plant, taking the usual and necessary steps to cause the elevator to ascend, but the current being in the reverse phase the elevator descended with great force against the bottom of the elevator shaft, thereby pulling out and destroying the base of the elevator, decanging and damaging the motor, wires and cables of the elevator, which will cost $850 to repair. The plaintiff was deprived of use of the elevator from Aug. 23 to Nov. 12, alleged loss of $1,000. The lights in one department were burned out and destroyed, causing a loss to the plaintiff, of $35.

A suit claiming damages of $1200 has been brought against Albert R. Dawley, administrator of the estate of William H. Dawley, late of Voluntown, by Walter C. Tannar of Voluntown. The complaint, which has been filed with the clerk of the superior court alleges that during the life time of William H. Dawley, in the years 1921, 1922, 1923, the plaintiff, at the request of William H. Dawley and upon his assurance owned the land in the town of Voluntown, leading from Robbins Tavern to the Line Meeting House, did cut down and carry away trees upon the invitation of William H. Dawley.

When Albert R. Dawley was made administrator Thomas W. Corcoran, of Voluntown brought a civil action against the plaintiff to recover from him $1,000 damages for the cutting and destroying of the trees on the property; action now pending before the superior court.

Foreclosure of a mortgage is asked in a suit brought against August and Louise Gomes of this city by Owen S. Smith of Norwich. A promissory note for $2,700, dated July 1, 1924, was given the plaintiff by the defendants, according to the complaint. The defendants to secure the note, mortgaged their premises on Garfield avenue. The plaintiff alleges the note is due and unpaid. He now seeks a foreclosure of the mortgaged premises.

As administrator of the estate of Leona Isbicki, late of this city, Anthony Izbicki of this city has brought suit for $10,000 damages against John Ridel of this city. The complaint alleges that on March 24th last Leona Isbicki, who was 96 years old, was riding in the defendant's automobile. Near the Sholes place in Preston the machine ran up an embankment and upset. The woman was fatally injured and died the same day. Careless operation of the machine is alleged.

Peter Chorzumpa of this city, administrator of the estate of Frank Chorzumpa, has brought suit against John B. Tumicki of this city, asking damages of $10,000 for the death of Frank Chorzumpa. It is alleged that on or about August 5, 1924, Frank Chorzumpa died as the result of being hit by an automobile owned and driven by the defendant. The complaint alleges that the machine was carelessly operated. The accident happened on North Main street, near Erin street.

LIONS CONTRIBUTE TO SKATING POND FUND

At the meeting of the Norwich Lions club, held at the Wauregan House, Thursday noon, President C. E. Carpenter called the attention of the members to the opening of the community skating pond at East Great Plain on New Year's day, and the club voted a sum of money to aid in defraying the expenses of the day.

George Madden officiated as song leader for the meeting and kept things moving lively. The entertainment committee named for January comprises Earl Taggart, president, Jean Keiffer and J. Harlow Bogue. Lion Fred Patten was unanimously elected as a director from the Norwich Lions club to serve on the district board of directors.

Ex-President Osborne of the New London club spoke briefly and extended New Year Greetings to the local Lions, saying that there were many ways in which the Lions club and other like organizations could accomplish considerable during the year.

William S. Huber, who was guest of the club for the day, favored with several piano selections which were much enjoyed.

A prominent member of the club reported on condition existing at the almshouse. He highly complimented Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Ellis for their handling of the home, but said that there was need of better lighting facilities in the almshouse, especially in the rooms of the people there. It was the opinion of the club that an effort should be made through the civic committee to see what can be done regarding existing needs at the local almshouse.

The meeting closed in the usual manner, with the salute to the flag and the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

[illegible]AL ASSESSORS TESTIFY AT BRIDGEPORT TRIAL

[illegible]geport, Dec. 30.—Assessors [illegible] Hartford, Norwalk, Greenwich, [illegible]ew Haven, Fairfield, Norwich, Bristol, Westport, East Hartford, Berlin, Stamford, Wallingford and Danbury were examined in superior court today during the trial of a suit brought by the Bridgeport Brass company against Tax Collector Edward A. Drew and the city of Bridgeport.

The brass company sued to prevent the city from bringing an action to collect taxes of $3,400 claimed to be due by the tax collector because of a claimed illegal abatement of $120,000 by a certificate of error issued by former Tax Commissioner Arthur P. Connor, of this city, who is now postmaster.

The interpretation of the statute defining when a certificate of error may be granted is in dispute. The defense alleges one may be issued only in correction of a "clerical error"; the plaintiff says for the readjustment of an error of any description.

Assessors from towns and cities in the state were examined to determine the general custom in the matter of certificates.

Evidence of State Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett was declared inadmissible on the question, being based on what others had told him, the court ruled, and not on personal observation.

FIRE DEPT. FLOODS NEW SKATING POND

With cold weather today the West Side Community skating pond should be in readiness for the opening scheduled for Thursday. Chief Howard L. Stanton and Street Commissioner John C. Donovan, on permission of Mayor Milo R. Waters, worked for an hour and a half at the pond Tuesday, flooding over the ice which is too rough for good skating.

Engine 6 and the Pope Hartford apparatus were taken to the pond and Engine 6 pumped water out of the pond, over the present coating of ice. Engine 6 has a guaranteed pumping capacity of 750 gallons per minute and Tuesday morning it sent 826 gallons per minute from two lines of hose, one with a one and three-eighths nozzle and the other with an inch and a quarter nozzle, showing a pressure of 70 and 60 pounds respectively. The pumper worked for 90 minutes and sent 74,340 gallons of water flooding over the ice on the pond. When this freezes over Norwich people will have a skating pond unexcelled anywhere in the state.

Electric lights have been strung around the pond for night skating and extra trolley service is to be furnished Thursday and other days if needed.

PHONES ARE AFFECTED BY COLD WEATHER

With the advent of cold weather the ancient physical principle that heat expands and cold contracts is driven forcibly home to the wire service men of the telephone company. In Connecticut, with its varying New England climate, copper telephone wires undergo many changes during the course of a year. In the extreme cold weather, telephone wires in this state are about four and three quarters feet shorter to each mile than in extreme heat. When the telephone men string wires in the summer, they have to make allowances for these climatic changes. Yet so skillfully are the wires strung, that breaks because of contraction by sudden cold weather are almost unheard of.

Sleet storms bring the most woe to the wire men during the cold weather. Most of the interruptions in service between towns during the winter are due to this cause. The weight of the frozen sleet on the wires bears them down to such a state that they must be watched constantly. Half an inch of frozen sleet on a mile of wire, which has already been made taut by the cold, weighs close to a ton and a half. And telephone wires are made to carry conversation, not aerial icebergs.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR ELECTRICITY IN DECEMBER

Just as it is with the department stores and gift shops, the month of December is the heaviest month of the year for the electrical companies in Connecticut. It is during the last month of the cycle that the greatest demand for electrical current is placed upon the companies by the public. It is during December, that the kilowatt output of the many companies in the state reaches what is called "the peak load."

The reason for the heavy demand for current is an obvious one although the fact that a weighty burden is being plied upon the electrical plants is seldom thought of. The early fall of darkness is the chief reason for the increased consumption of power. Everyone turns on their lights earlier, usually shortly after four o'clock in most homes at this time of year. Statistics show that most of the "peak loads" of residential current occur on or near the shortest day of the year, December 21.

There is another reason for the increased consumption, however, and that occurs on the industrial side of the matter. Just before Christmas all of the big department stores in the state remain open until 9 or 10 o'clock and continue to consume current for lighting until they close. Moreover, every factory in the state which manufactures anything in any way connected with Christmas gifts is working at full blast this month and is often working overtime.

The electrical companies of the state must be prepared to meet the "peak load" whenever it occurs. The exact day is never known so fuel and all apparatus must be ready at all times to meet the maximum demand.

THEATRE CASE GOES OVER TO SATURDAY

In the city court Tuesday morning the case against Manager Edward L. McEvoy of the Palace theatre was continued until Saturday, as Mr. McEvoy was obliged to be in Boston for the day. A warrant issued by Prosecuting Attorney Lee Roy Robbins was served on Mr. McEvoy Monday evening at the theatre for an alleged violation of the state statute which prohibits the presence of children under a certain age—boys 14 and girls 16—at a movie picture house after 6 o'clock at night, unless they are accompanied by parents or a guardian.

POST OFFICE HOURS FOR JANUARY 1ST

New Year's day the Norwich post office will be open from 7 till 10 a. m. The money order, postal savings and carriers windows will be closed all day. The morning delivery and collection will be made by all city and parcel post carriers.

Outgoing mails will close as usual, the last mail for New York and Boston will close at 8 p. m.

The last collection from the street letter boxes in the business section will be at 6 p. m. As this is a national holiday no deliveries will be made by the rural carriers. No money order business will be transacted at any of the sub-stations.

RECEIVES CHECK FOR POLICE PENSION FUND

The Norwich Savings Society has sent to Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney, a check for $50 to be added to the police pension fund. With the check was a letter of appreciation for the services rendered by the department. These gifts are greatly appreciated by the members of the police department and help materially to increase the pension fund which is already caring for several of the pensioned policemen.

MEMBERSHIP SERVICE FOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Connecticut Chamber of Commerce—according to a bulletin issued to its entire membership—has established a field service bureau which will map out and personally conduct membership campaigns throughout the state for local chambers of commerce that recognize the desirability of a large and strong membership secured on a sound basis.

The new bureau offers its services to local chambers of commerce whose membership is small or whose membership is declining and to those cities that at present have no chamber of commerce but may wish to centralize their various public and municipal business interests under one body.

Similar field service bureaus have been operated successfully for the last several years by the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce, by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce and are now in the process of being installed by other state chambers of commerce throughout the country.

The new bureau will be under the direction of Lloyd L. Anderson of Naugatuck who has been engaged in campaign and chamber of commerce work for the greater part of the past seven years. During this period Mr. Anderson has taken part in campaigns which raised over $500,000.

The field service bureau will supply the new membership service at cost. The bulletin just sent out by the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce contains a comprehensive survey of membership campaigns conducted in recent years by some of the leading local chambers in Connecticut. This survey indicates that in nearly all cases, the most effective campaigns were handled by outside persons who were trained in such work.

WATCH NIGHT SERVICE AT CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH

A Watch Night service on Wednesday evening from eight until midnight will be held in the Central Baptist church. There will therefore be no prayer meeting on Thursday evening of the week. The first hour will be in charge of Arnold Smith and William Storms, assisted by the other young people of the church who are home from school and college. A social hour in charge of the senior and intermediate B. Y. P. U.'s will follow. The evening will close with a devotional service and brief message by the pastor, ending with a consecration service. The First Baptist church has been invited to be present.

NEW YEAR'S SERVICES AT SALVATION ARMY CITADEL

Two New Year's eve services are to be held at the Salvation Army citadel, the first beginning at 8 o'clock and the other about 11 o'clock, to watch the old year out. Between the services refreshments will be served.

POETRY

NEW YEAR'S EVE.

Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky,
The flying clouds, the frosty light;
The year is dying in the night;
Ring out, wild bells, and let him die.

Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring, happy bells, across the snow;
The year is going, let him go;
Ring out the false, ring in the true.

Ring out the grief that saps the mind,
For those that here we see no more;
Ring out the feud of rich and poor,
Ring in redress to all mankind.

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife;
Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws.

Ring out the want, the care, the sin,
The faithless coldness of the times;
Ring out, ring out my mournful rhymes,
But ring the fuller minstrel in.

Ring out the false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good.

Ring out old shapes of foul disease;
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace.

Ring the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be.

—Alfred Tennyson.

OLD FARM.

The empty house yawns gloomily,
Up at the empty, cloudless sky;
The scorching August's sun-rays beat
On a dull wilderness of heat.

The pump is crumbling, red with rust;
The door is silver-white with dust.
No hay-ricks, joggling homeward, pass
A chipmunk scuttles through the grass

The burdock and th ragweed keep Corners where roses used to sleep.
The crazy windows leer and stare
At ragged trees that once were fair.

And still, beneath that empty sky
It stands in changeless dignity.
Few things I know are quite as grave
As any house—or quite as brave.

—John V. A. Weaver, in Scribner's.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Edwin—My papa's a broker.
Willie—Huh, that's nothing! My papa's always broke—Chicago News.

She—You certainly eat well.
He—Yes, I've practiced all my life.—Dartmouth Jack O'Lantern.

Flash—Can I sell you an encyclopedia?
Light—No, I couldn't ride the thing if I had it—Iowa State Green Gander.

Neighbor—And how is Mrs. Smith?
Husband—Oh her head is troubling her a lot.
That's bad. Chronic headaches, eh?
No, she wants a new hat.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Hardware Dealer—When are you going to pay for that washing machine I sold you?
Mrs. Bills—Pay for it? Why you said that in a short time it would pay for itself.—Good Hardware.

Bud—I was talking to your girl yesterday.
Jim—Are you sure you were doing the taking?
Bud —Yes
Jim—Then it wasn't my girl.—University of Buffalo Bison.

A woman went into a grocery store recently and asked for some cigars. The merchant asked her if she wanted them strong or not.
"Very strong," she replied; "the last ones my husband had broke in his pocket".—The Progressive Grocer.

There is a time in the life of every girl when—but this illustrates it.
"How old is Gladys now?" Mrs. Davis was asked of Gladys' grandmother.
Grandmother smiled understandingly "Gladys is just at the age where her mother is afraid she will get married, and Gladys is afraid she will not."—Life.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Every state in the Union has a college of pharmacy.

Texas produces 40 per cent. of the cotton of the United States.

The most efficient artificial light gives less than 4 per cent of the energy that creates it in the form of light.

Cotton production in North Syria is becoming important. The first power-cotton ginning plant is at present under construction by a French firm and the further possible market for cotton-ginning equipment is indicated.

A foundation for the continuing of the work of Cecil Sharpe, who devoted his life to the preservation and revivication of the folk songs of England, has been established. He left a valuable library relating to old music dances and folklore which it is hoped will be made accessible to the public.

Announcement is made that a Montreal syndicate will undertake at once the construction of possibly the largest apartment building in the British empire to be located in one of the best residential streets of Montreal. The building will be constructed along the lines of the old chateaux of France, will accommodate 135 large apartments, and will be completed by next autumn.

Early one morning John Flaherty was strolling on a stringpiece at Old Slip, New York—"just getting the air," as he later explained—when he thought he saw a man struggling in the water below. He promptly dived in. A patrolman heard the splash, ran up and threw a line to him. Flaherty sputteringly protested that the policeman was interfering with a rescue, but the officer lassoed him, dragged him out and set about convincing Flaherty that the "man" he sought to rescue was Flaherty's own shadow from a pier light.

The Longmeadow Historical Society says the Boston Globe, has a queer hollow rod, about five feet long, which was a "courting stick" of the Puritan days of 1700, when etiquette was precise and chaperonage was omniscient. When the young people of Pastor Williamson's home at Longmeadow gathered about the big fireplace and chaperons kept vigil lest words too sentimental be passed from youth to maiden, the lovers cannily outdid the chaperon by using the courting stick. There was license for its use when privacy for engaged couples was impossible in a large family circle. If your sweetheart sat across the hearth and you wished to whisper "sweet nothings" into her ear, the courting stick came to the rescue.
